Your Right to Buy

Department for Communities and Local Government

Dear Simon,

- Right to Buy update
- Right to Buy discounts
- Housing associations take up Right to Buy
- Housing and Planning Bill 2015
- Help to Buy: ISA
- Own your home campaign
- Spending Review 2015
- And finally...

Right to Buy update

It's been a while since our last update and we wanted to bring you up to speed with some exciting new changes. Helping people own their own home through Right to Buy is at the very top of our agenda. We are also firmly committed to making sure that more affordable homes are being built to meet demand.

Right to Buy discounts

The discounts for 2016/17 will be the same level as they are now – that's up to £103,900 if you live in London and up to £77,900 everywhere else in England.

Housing associations take up Right to Buy

In October we announced the historic voluntary agreement with housing associations, which will give 1.3 million more households the chance to buy their home at Right to Buy level discounts.

Ahead of the main scheme, five housing associations – L&Q, Riverside, Saffron, Sovereign and Thames Valley – have just launched a voluntary Right to Buy pilot for tenants in 25 areas.

Riverside L&Q Saffron Housing Trust sovereign THAMES VALLEY HOUSING

Tenants eligible for the pilot should register their interest now as there will be a limited number of sales under this pilot. Successful tenants will be able to progress up to the point of sale, but will not be able to complete until the Housing and Planning Bill (see below) becomes law.

If you think you, or someone you know could be eligible to buy their Housing Association home under this pilot click here.

Housing and Planning Bill 2015

The Housing and Planning Bill began going through Parliament in October. It sets out the major legal changes that the Government is proposing to encourage both home ownership and home building. This includes the changes needed so that the Right to Buy level discounts can be offered to more housing association tenants. We will keep you up to date as the Bill passes its key milestones.

Help to Buy: ISA

The Government's new Help to Buy: ISA, set up to help people save for a deposit for their first home, launched on 1 December. If you're a first-time buyer you can save up to £200 a month towards your first home with a Help to Buy ISA and the Government will boost your savings by 25%. That's a £50 bonus for every £200 you save, up to a maximum Government bonus of £3,000 towards buying your first home. In practice, this means if you save £12,000, the Government will boost your total savings to £15,000.

You can also save an additional £1,000 when you first open an account, meaning you can save £1,200 in the first month and get a top up from the government of £300.

You can find all the information you need on the Help to Buy website.

Own your home campaign

If you find that you're not eligible for Right to Buy, have a look at other government schemes available to help you own your own home. OwnYourHome.gov.uk has information on schemes such as Help to Buy, shared ownership and Self Build.

This website is part of a campaign to make sure people know about all the schemes available to help them onto the housing ladder. Commenting on the campaign, Housing and Planning Minister Brandon Lewis MP said:

"We want to ensure that anyone who works hard and aspires to own their own home has the opportunity to do so. Already more than 230,000 households have been helped into homeownership through Government-backed schemes since 2010, but we want to go further."

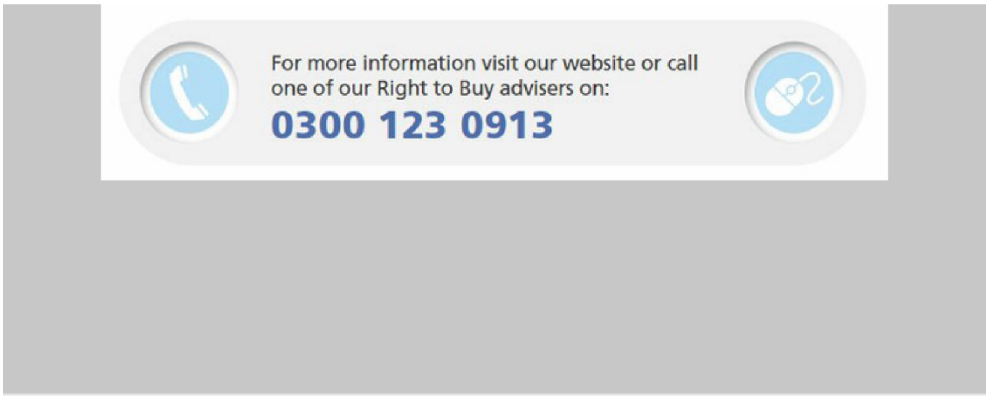
"That is why we have launched the new Own Your Home campaign, so you can find out what Government support may be available to help you own a home of your own. And I would urge anyone who believes ownership is out of reach to visit the Government's Own Your Home website and take a second look. There is a wide range of support on offer."

Spending Review 2015

In the Spending Review at the end of November the Government announced the biggest affordable house building programme since the 1970s. The affordable housing budget will be doubled to £8bn from 2018/19 and the Government will deliver at least 400,000 affordable homes over the next few years, including:

- 200,000 Starter Homes
- 135,000 new Help to Buy Shared Ownership homes and
- 10,000 Rent to Buy homes.

The Government will also create a London Help to Buy scheme with a 40% equity loan maximum (elsewhere the limit is 20%), release enough land owned by public bodies to build 160,000 homes, and provide £310 million of funding to deliver 15,000 homes at Ebbsfleet, the first garden city in the UK for nearly 100 years.



And finally...

Why not have a look at whether you could become a homeowner through Right to Buy in 2016? There is plenty of help available and we've just released three online videos about Right to Buy that might give you the start you need: Own Your Home Youtube Channel

Yours sincerely,

The Right to Buy Team

  I had a telephone conversation with Simon's mother who expressed concerns about him. Mother appeared angry and frustrated that for over a year she has been seeking help for Simon and she has not been heard or listened to. I tried and failed to get what Simon's mother was concerned about. I asked what risks there were and what prompted her to call about Simon today and did not get much from her. It was difficult to speak with her as she was understandably emotional about his son not being helped. There was someone talking over Simon's mother and made the conversation difficult to follow. Mother said she will be taking the matter with his MP and hang up.

Dear Ned Johnson,
Thank you for the reply email and the update.
I have other information due to investigations I have done and due to speaking to people within the area. That it was not just the one date in April 2014 there were events at Crown Road.
The dates I have been given that events took place at Crown Road are:
12th / 13th April 2014
19th / 20th April 2014 (confirmed)
26th / 27th April 2014
03rd / 04th May 2014
17th / 18th May 2014 (confirmed)
31st / 01st May and June 2014 (confirmed)
06th 07th 08th June 2014 (confirmed)
13th / 14th June 2014 (confirmed)
Some of these dates have already been given that events took place within the FOI I requested.
Also you say you did not serve a Noise Abatement Notice on the squatters / occupiers, as it would have had no benefit to do so as you would not have been able to take anyone to court, and I do understand that the council was working with the owners of the building to deal with this problem.
But I am sure if you had served a Noise Abatement Notice to the squatters / occupiers / Building, it would have covered not just to take someone to court. It would have covered the council to have seized sound equipment and due to this stopped the events far sooner with a Noise Abatement Notice in place on the building then not having served one at all.
I believe that is the reason a Noise Abatement Notice can be served on occupiers / Buildings under Environmental Protection Act 1990 section 80

Dear Ms. Cordell,
Thank you for your email; I have rechecked our database and indeed, I did make a mistake and missed one complaint which was received by our Residential Noise Team on 20/04/14, it was the only complaint received by the Council prior to the ones listed in the FOI response sent to you. The officer who received the complaint tried to contact the customer who made it on several occasions but was unable to do so and as such we were unable to verify the complaint. The next complaint received was then on 18/05/14 as stated in my original response.

We did not receive any further complaints after June 2014 in regard to the Man Building and therefore as far as we were aware the matter had been resolved.
A Noise Abatement Notice was not served on the squatters as we would not have been able to verify any names given, if indeed they would have given a name and it would have been unenforceable as it is extremely unlikely that we would have been able to take anybody to court who was squatting. The line taken was to pursue the owners of the building who then needed to evict the squatters and secure the premises, which they did; serving a Noise Abatement Notice would have had no effect on the owners as they were already taking the necessary steps to stop the problem.
Yours sincerely

Dear Ned Johnson
I am writing this email due to a FOI request I put in some time ago.
It has come to my attention that some of the information you have given me in incorrect and was wondering if you could comment on this.
In my FOI request you said that Crown Road information started on the 18/5/2014, but I have found newspaper information that this started much earlier than this.
I have a newspaper that is dated the 25/04/2014 which was printed after a 15-hour rave took place there on the 19/04/2014, which is much earlier than the 18/05/2014 as the date you gave me that this started.
http://www.enfieldindependent.co.uk/news/11172103.Residents_fume_over_15 hour rave
And one that was in printed on 9 September 2014 a paper saying The MAN building, in Crown Road, on the junction with Southbury Road, Enfield, has also been used for illegal raves and parties in the last few months which these words would say the events was going on much later than June 2014 that you have given in the FOI request.
http://www.enfieldindependent.co.uk/news/11459487.Listed building wrecked by graffiti/
I still also cannot understand why an abatement notice order was not put in place due to the number of events that took place there. I do understand on the days of the events it could be classed as unsafe due to the amount of people, but this site was being squatted and there would have been far less people there during the weeks when these events were not going on. And cannot understand why an abatement notice order was not put in place during the time when these events were not going on.
On the 6th 07th and 08th June 2014 the council were aware an event was ongoing at Crown Road.
On the 6th 07th and 08th June 2014 the council were aware an event was ongoing at Progress way.
On the 08th June the council attended with police to Progress Way to serve paperwork this was not served to any persons within the site of Progress Way.
But if you were with police, which your team was why was paperwork not tried to be served at Crown Road site also as your team was aware off an event also going on there.

Dear Ms. Cordell,
In terms of the number of events there was one further rave that took place on 25th March 2013 at Progress Way, other than this occurrence I have provided you with the dates and locations of all the illegal raves/parties that are recorded on our database as well as all other data we hold that you requested. The rave on March 25th, 2013 was attended by the Out of Hours Noise Team, assistance was requested from the police but they were unable to help on that occasion.
The events at Crown Road were over a period of several weeks not months, during which time we were in regular contact with the new site owners who worked to get the site secured and the power turned off. The Out of Hours Noise Team undertook observations of the noise during the event on May 31st/June 1st but did not visit the party as the team decided that it was unsafe to do so due to the nature and location of the event and provided information to the daytime officer who ensured the owners undertook the necessary works.

The complaints received on Sunday June 8th were all received after the council's Out of Hours Service had finished at 03:00 and therefore no response was possible.
The Out of Hours Team respond to all complaints received but will only visit a premise where it is safe for them to do so and in the case of illegal raves/parties quite often there are officer safety issues which prevent visits at night time during the event, unless police support can be gained. Following illegal raves/parties we do make every effort to get a building secured as soon as possible to prevent the same thing happening again.
Yours sincerely

Dear Ned Johnson
Thank you for the reply to the freedom of information act I put in.
I do however believe there is a lot of data that has been left out, so maybe I need to clarify the data that is being requested.
To information is regarding Disused or abandoned buildings or any industrial estates buildings or open-air land. For the dates all of 2013 to date.
This would include all data if there were occupiers/squatters in said building/parties/raves. This would include the dates these buildings/Disused or abandoned buildings/ or any industrial estates was first known to the Environment & Street Scene Department.
All information would cover all wards boundaries for Enfield Council.
Information is also needed for some areas within the Enfield Council borough.
The information would cover if police were in attendance, if calls were made to the Environment & Street Scene Department by police, and any police officer information that the Environment & Street Scene Department holds about any police officer.
This information would also include any calls that were made from the Environment & Street Scene Department to police in relation to any Disused or abandoned buildings or any industrial estates buildings or open-air land that the Environment & Street Scene Department felt could have a problem with.
There is also an issue with the information in your email
1. 18/5/14: 3 calls after event
2. 19/5/14: 6 calls after event
3. 21/5/14: 1 call after event

But have not given the date of the event itself, are the below layout ones was when events have taken place as it just has calls at the end of the dates could you please clarify
4. 31/5/14: 2 calls
5. 1/6/14: 6 calls

Also, in your email it seems that there was more of a problem with crown road over some months but from how I am reading your email it seems no one ever attended from the Environment & Street Scene Department on any of the dates in your list can this also be clarified in more detail.
I know you have until the 10/03/2015 to supply the information I have asked for. But I do feel your email was very incomplete, I do hope that I have not got to wait 20 more days now as I need all the data by 10/03/2015 and I did ask for all information and I feel that has not been given.
Could you get back to me via email as to the time it will take to get all the information I have asked for within my request?
Regards

Time: All-Day and All-Night whenever they knew that I was indoors!
They tried their best to make me powerless to cover up the truth!
The Enfield Council and the Enfield Homes employees aloud the occupiers of 117 and 113 and 111 Continued to victimizing me by Victimizing me by Banging above the Barth to which I get into, once they understand that I have ceased running the dihydrogen monoxide for my bath to be yare, this is after they wait for any other tail, tail signs that I have gotten divested and marinated within the dihydrogen monoxide, engendering a brutal attack against my person in their wrongful self-gains!
Loud and truculent banging in the bathroom got worse and this got achieved by slamming objects on to the floor with evil intent of malefactor actions!
Then victimizing me with intent of using the same repeated items of the building fixtures to have tortures effects on me within my rented home is unfair living circumstances!
Jumping up and down on the floor above wherever they can tell that I am present below!
Slamming the main, communal ingress door closed!
Slamming their own living room, door closed!
Slamming their own bedroom, door closed!
Banging with objects onto the internal main buildings walls and floors, so to intimidate surely me and maybe others living close by whom may be present to an extent only worthwhile for the perpetrators selfless glory, In them perpetrators knowing that their behaviour would only leave all those getting victimized towards getting left by their wrongful actions as to being put into a state of a mental health patient and not rightfully with this occurring within mine and their rented or paid for homes!

Louise Brown / Jackie Gubby,

I have still not had a reply to my complaint to ASB unit dated the 16/10/2015. Louise Brown your last email was dated the 03/11/2015 where you said you would send a response outlining action to date, this has not happened, and I fill that my complaint is not being dealt with correctly. Therefore, I would like this to go to stage 2 complaints, as nothing is being done. Could you please make sure this is handed to the right department that deals with stage 2 complaints? And email me so I know this has been done.

Dear Louise Brown and Jackie Gubby

It has been over 10 days since I sent the complaint in due to how my son has been treated.

I did speak to Jackie Gubby and was told I should hear within 10 days about my complaint but have heard nothing. Also, I would like to take the time to say to Jackie Gubby that jobs are still outstanding on my son's flat.

Simon rang reception to make enquiries about his referral. I was called to take the call and I spoke with Simon. He wanted to know why he has been referred to mental health services.
I read to him the referral letter from his GP and he seemed to have understood and accepted my response. Simon explained his circumstances i.e. repeated all that has been documented on RiO already regarding the police and him. He appeared quite satisfied talking to me and agreed to a home visit on Monday at / after mid-day

Threats and intimidation (General)
Home visit to Ms Deborah Andrews flat. Attendees Dawn Allen TMO and CPN Bola Quadri
Home visit to Ms Andrews advised that her neighbour at number 109 has for the past few months harassed, intimidated, stalked her and made a life a complete misery. He continuously plays loud music, bangs on her ceiling and door alleging that she is monitoring his movements in his flat. She feels petrified by his presence and as a result refused to leave her flat for fear bumping into him on her way out. She has missed a few appointments with her social worker as a result, she has now been subjected to making home appointments pending the time this matter is resolved. She explained that they use to be acquaintances before the relationship went sour. She believes the whole problem started when he claimed the decoration in his flat was damaged as a result of a leak coming from her flat. She confirmed that she had a leak from her overflow a few months ago which has since been repaired but, the damage alleged had occurred.

She was on her way out to attend her appointment with her CPN when he apprehended her and threatened to kill her. She was pretty shaken from the incident that instead of attending her appointment, returned home immediately. She advised that she contacted the police but, wasn't taken seriously as they assumed, she was drunk at the time of the call. She advised that she wasn't in the list drunk but, just the way she spoke due to her condition. She still wasn't taken seriously and had to abandon the call. She found this very frustrating and advised that it was not the first time this would happen to her. Her CPN also confirmed her statement and expressed her dissatisfaction at the way she was treated. Ms Andrews felt completely let down by the police and became frightful for her safety especially, as she knows the perpetrators has shells in his flat. I observed in her flat that her floors were very creaky, I was made aware by Dawn that most of the flats in the block are like that. Unfortunately, the creakiness exacerbates the noise level in the flats and cause more problems than usual. I advised that I will contact the police to make further enquiries. I will also contact MHT to enquire if Mr Cordell is known to them. At some point the perpetrator will need to be interviewed and a warning letter issued on him. I will contact the repairs team and try to arrange a surveyor to visit her flat and see what assistance can be offered I further advised that her case will be investigated and an officer will get back to her to discuss further with her. Her CPN and TMO will be kept informed of updates

Bola Quadri has already put in place a safeguard alert.

Miss Debra Andrew [SEC=PROTECT]

Hi Dolly,

Nick and I attended 113a while ago and spoke to the lady a while ago when she originally called Police. At the time she didn't want us to speak to her neighbour as things had got better. The lady handed us a letter about what had happened but none of it made any sense.

We believe she was suffering from mental health issues. On another occasion we popped round to see her and she wouldn't come and speak to us so instead she spoke through her letterbox to us. The male at 109 - Simon Cordell who is causing the problems is very well known to Police and is also very anti Police. I know some Officers went around and spoke to him and things seemed to get better. After that we have had no further calls from the lady at 118.
We will try and get around to see her when were back on duty on Monday.
Kind Regards

Good afternoon Mark,
Could you kindly assist with this query please. Following reports of ASB by the above tenant, my colleague and I visited her this morning and were alarmed by the nature of her complaints. She has in the past few months being constantly harassed, intimidated, bullied, stalked and threatened to kill by her neighbour at 109.
As a result of his behaviour, she has become too scared to leave her flat for fear of what may happen to her. She is a vulnerable tenant who requires support from services.
However, the unsettling behaviour exhibited by number 109, has hindered her from attending her appointments and exacerbated her condition. At the moment, she feels very disorientated / agitated and will like the harassment to stop.
She advised that she had reported this to the police a few times but, wasn't taken seriously.
I will appreciate if you could stop over at 113 to reassure her that the matter is being dealt with and also to stop by 109 and advise him that you are aware of what is going on and the repercussions should it continue.

He has a medical history of Crohn's disease which may impact on mood stability particularly if not compliant with treatment and monitoring of symptoms. All assessments completed by mental health services have found no evidence of serious mental illness, he appears to be a very angry young man who has had an extremely difficult and traumatic early childhood which is likely to explain his distrust of people in authority (e.g. police) and being angry at others and at the world....

Good afternoon Louise,
Sorry I missed your call; I was at a meeting at the time. Called and left a message on your voice mail.
Ms Andrews suffers from a history of mental health; she is currently being supported by Bola Quadri Care-coordinator / CPN / Nurse Prescriber Psychosis Service Line
Barnet, Enfield & Haringey Mental Health NHS Trust / 58-60 Silver Street, Enfield EN1 3EP
She made complains about her neighbour at number 109, harassing, verbally abusing her, intimidating, shouting threatening to kill her. The mean concern here is that the perpetrator in question also suffers from mental health and is known to be very aggressive, violet and anti-police. He has on a few occasions threatened to kill her and petrified the life out of her.
It was on this basis that a decision was made to move her out immediately.
Hope the above information is useful.
Thank you

Hi Louise,
Thanks for this - I'm pleased to hear you think Deborah is being properly supported and that she sounded better - she was in a right state when we spoke to her last.
Good news that it looks like she might be able to get help to move.
For the camera, we are very happy to come along for a visit. I've spoken to our Sgt and as we understand it the ideal course of action is to advise him to remove it in our presence, then if he refuses, I believe you can take it down and that should be fine so long as the camera itself is returned to Cordell. Let me know when your best days for it would be and I'll see when we can manage best.
Best wishes,
James

Hi James,
I spoke with Deborah Andrews this morning; the leak issue was sorted over the weekend this was from the flat above.
I do not know anything about Mr Cordell moving in two weeks' time, unless she is getting confused with his threat that he will get her in two weeks' time? Overall, I am concerned that Deborah is not managing and appears to be getting more confused the last few times I have spoken to her last week and today, she is also feeling that she needs further support by way of supported accommodation. I do agree with her as the level of support that St John of God provide is high and the dependency with other agencies is also constant and not something that housing or myself could provide long term.
Deborah was much calmer this morning and I reassured he that if she has any concerns to contact me.
With regard to the camera not he is not allowed it to be train on anything else other that his front door. Probably means I will need to visit him to get this sorted. I may request your assistance with this I don't really fancy seeing him on my own!! (sorry)

Hi Louise,
I hope you are well.
Since 15/01/2016 we have had further calls from Debra Andrew relating to the issues she has been having with Simon Cordell.
Given the nature of the calls, we visited Debra yesterday for a reassurance visit. She said that there has been a leak in the building causing 'flooding' in both her flat and Cordell's flat, and Cordell has been making accusations relating to it. She said that she believes Cordell is leaving his flat in two weeks, which I hadn't heard, but said I would look into it - do you know if that's true by any chance?

Debra said that if Cordell does not leave, she wants to leave her flat and move somewhere else herself.
While at the address we also noticed that Cordell has now installed a CCTV camera which is placed at the top of the internal communal door leading to flats 109 and 111, facing towards the main door of the block. I am unsure as to whether he's allowed to do this and shall look into it, but just wanted to let you know!
Best wishes,
James

Hi Louise, Jackie,
Mr Cordell called this afternoon requesting to speak with yourselves in regard to his case against his neighbour.
I am sure you know the details however; he did say that his neighbour is making noise when he undresses. He did go on to mention an incident that resulted in both himself and his neighbour in an awkward position when he attempted to help her move her bed.
Mr Cordell is expecting a call back this afternoon.

Dear Sarah,
Thank you for your email and updated information. This incident yesterday J am assuming that this is a different incident from 15/1/16 where Mr Cordell approached Ms De Polla? Please can you confirm if this was reported to the police, and if this was not why? This is harassment and can be treated and reported as a criminal offence. Yes, this is a separate incident to 15.01.2016. The police were not called as a crime had not been committed and Barbara was able to walk away without Mr Cordell trying to prevent her or following her. In relation to Deborah please can you confirm if your concerns for her welfare are being reported back to the Mental health team prior to this email (I do appreciate that Bola has been on leave for a few weeks) Yvonne has copied Bola into the same communication as yourself and expressed concerns. Debbie has also contacted Bola. I am receiving if not daily calls from Deborah or every other day, with her explaining to me that she feels she is not coping at all, she is looking to me for reassurance. Deborah has expressed that she is not managing independent living and would like to go back into supported accommodation. Supported living is something Bola would need to arrange. Can you confirm that you have reported your concerns for Debbie's welfare to the mental health team?

Please can you confirm if she has expressed this to staff at St John of god? Also, please can you confirm if you feel that Deborah is not coping at present. If so, has this been reported to the mental health team?
As you are aware, Debbie has said that she is not coping, and I understand that you are in the process of providing a report in order to facilitate Debbie to move. Can you confirm that this has been completed and if so, what the next step of the process is and how long this is likely to take?
Also given the current hours that currently allocated to Deborah if this is suitable in this situation for her need? If I recall this was expressed at a SOVA meeting that this should be extended as her needs are becoming greater? We are requested and funded to provide 6 hours support per week (3 hours twice a week for shopping). Bola is responsible for increasing the care package if Debbie is assessed as needing more support. With regard to the Safeguarding plan I do feel that a mental health strategy meeting needs to take place as issues beyond our control will also have a direct impact on the wellbeing of Deborah. I am raising this directly with George Benyure Bolas manger. My understanding was that Bola had already raised a safeguarding alert.

Hi Louise
I am extremely concerned about Debbie Andrewes neighbour and the increased risk to the support workers and indeed Debbie, who, as you are aware is unable to leave her own home unescorted.
Yesterday it was reported to me that the neighbour approached Barbara de Polla as she entered the communal door, he was very aggressive and began shouting at her saying, you should not be coming here, she is an alcoholic, you shouldn't take her out anywhere etc." Barbara said that she did not want to talk about it and walked away from him, luckily, he did not follow her.
In relation to Debbie is safety, I strongly feel that it is only a matter of time before something serious or even fatal happens to her. As you are aware, the neighbour has a dog, which appears to be a Staffordshire bull terrier which he allows to roam free in the communal area which is highly intimidating and potentially very dangerous.

Please can you clarify the interim safeguarding protection plan and timescale as to when Debbie will be moved to a place of safety.
I have completed an internal incident form and unfortunately, if another incident occurs, I will have no other option but to temporarily withdraw our service, which will put Debbie in a situation where she is even more at risk.
I look forward to hearing from you at your earliest convenience.

Dear George & Bola,
Thank you for your email, I have only copied you both as there is other information on Mr Cordell that urgently needs to be considered.
I received an email informing me that a mental health warrant had been granted for Mr Cordell. This will cause a greater issue especially if he is released back into the community. My fear is that this will indirectly cause further distress for Deborah. A plan needs to be put in place with full considerations.
Please can an urgent mental health strategy meeting be held regarding Deborah Andrews, given the above information and the urgent need for full consideration in this case due to the complex needs and issues with both clients, who are known to your services and tenants of Enfield Council.
Deborah is contacting me if not daily every other day these calls are coming through at all different days and times. She is informing me that she is not coping with everything and wants to go back into supported accommodation, she feels extremely frightened and vulnerable. I must confirm that its Deborah stating that she is not coping as I am not in a position to make these decisions. When I speak with Deborah asking if she is attending her appointments, she states that" it js a quick jab, in and out no one speaks with you.
With regards to the management transfer this is still being prepared and waiting to be heard by panel, I am waiting to hear the next available date for this. It was explained when I suggested this action may be a route forward that this is not a quick process and all elements need to be considered. It is not necessary for Ms Andrews to currently go into emergency accommodation either. This case will be assisted by moving Ms Andrews; however, this may not resolve all of the concerns or the overall future welfare of Ms Andrews.
Transferring Ms Andrews into another independent accommodation without fully assessing her current needs and the full support required should be considered before this happens. As moving her may not solve all of Deborah Andrews concerns. She is only going out when SJOG are visiting, however they are only allocated 3 hours per week. More recommendations need to be put forward to provide a comprehensive package to support

Time: All-Day and All-Night whenever they knew that I was indoors!
They forced me to suffer when I provided the correct evidence, as they wanted me to go through tortures act of criminal intent caused by them self the staff and members of my neighbours for their own self gain with no compliance to legislation!
The Enfield Homes and the Enfield Council staff aloud the occupiers of 117 and 113 and 111 Continued to victimizing me by Loud and truculent banging in the bathroom got worse and this got achieved by slamming objects on to the floor with evil intent of malefactor actions!
Then victimizing me with intent of using the same repeated items of the building fixtures to have tortures effects on me within my rented home is unfair living circumstances!
Jumping up and down on the floor above where ever they can tell that I am present below!
Banging with objects onto the internal main buildings walls and floors, so to intimidate surely me and maybe others living close by whom may be present to an extent only worthwhile for the perpetrators selfless glory, In them perpetrators knowing that their behaviour would only leave all those getting victimized towards getting left by their wrongful actions as to being put into a state of a mental health patient and not rightfully with this occurring within mine and their rented or paid for homes!

Summary!

Could I therefore ask for a copy of the report you have made up so I know before we attend what is said in the report. I think it is only right I know what has been said. As PC G would have been told and it seems that we are the only one that have not had a copy of the report and the complaint was put in by my son after all.

Threats and intimidation (General)

Home visit to Ms Andrews advised that her neighbour at number 109 has for the past few months harassed, intimidated, stalked her and made a life a complete misery. He continuously plays loud music, bangs on her ceiling and door alleging that she is monitoring his movements in his flat. She feels petrified by his presence and as a result refused to leave her flat for fear bumping into him on her way out. She has missed a few appointments with her social worker as a result, she has now been subjected to making home appointments pending the time this matter is resolved. She explained that they use to be acquaintances before the relationship went sour. She believes the whole problem started when he claimed the decoration in his flat was damaged as a result of a leak coming from her flat. She confirmed that she had a leak from her overflow a few months ago which has since been repaired but, the damage alleged had occurred.

She was on her way out to attend her appointment with her CPN when he apprehended her and threatened to kill her. She was pretty shaken from the incident that instead of attending her appointment, returned home immediately. She advised that she contacted the police but, wasn't taken seriously as they assumed, she was drunk at the time of the call. She advised that she wasn't in the list drunk but, just the way she spoke due to her condition. She still wasn't taken seriously and had to abandon the call. She found this very frustrating and advised that it was not the first time this would happen to her. Her CPN also confirmed her statement and expressed her dissatisfaction at the way she was treated. Ms Andrews felt completely let down by the police and became frightful for her safety especially, as she knows the perpetrators has shells in his flat. I observed in her flat that her floors were very creaky, I was made aware by Dawn that most of the flats in the block are like that. Unfortunately, the creakiness exacerbates the noise level in the flats and cause more problems than usual. I advised that I will contact the police to make further enquiries. I will also contact MHT to enquire if Mr Cordell is known to them. At some point the perpetrator will need to be interviewed and a warning letter issued on him. I will contact the repairs team and try to arrange a surveyor to visit her flat and see what assistance can be offered I further advised that her case will be investigated and an officer will get back to her to discuss further with her. Her CPN and TMO will be kept informed of updates Bola Quadri has already put in place a safeguard alert.

He continuously plays loud music, bangs on her ceiling and door alleging that she is monitoring his movements in his flat. She feels petrified by his presence and as a result refused to leave her flat for fear bumping into him on her way out. She has missed a few appointments with her social worker as a result, she has now been subjected to making home appointments pending the time this matter is resolved.

Hi Dolly,
Nick and I attended 113a while ago and spoke to the lady a while ago when she originally called Police. At the time she didn't want us to speak to her neighbour as things had got better. The lady handed us a letter about what had happened but none of it made any sense. We believe she was suffering from mental health issues. On another occasion we popped round to see her and she wouldn't come and speak to us so instead she spoke through her letterbox to us. The male at 109 - Simon Cordell who is causing the problems is very well known to Police and is also very anti Police. I know some Officers went around and spoke to him and things seemed to get better. After that we have had no further calls from the lady at 118.
We will try and get around to see her when were back on duty on Monday.
Kind Regards

Good afternoon Mark,
Could you kindly assist with this query please. Following reports of ASB by the above tenant, my colleague and I visited her this morning and were alarmed by the nature of her complaints. She has in the past few months being constantly harassed, intimidated, bullied, stalked and threatened to kill by her neighbour at 109.
As a result of his behaviour, she has become too scared to leave her flat for fear of what may happen to her. She is a vulnerable tenant who requires support from services. However, the unsettling behaviour exhibited by number 109, has hindered her from attending her appointments and exacerbated her condition. At the moment, she feels very disorientated / agitated and will like the harassment to stop.
She advised that she had reported this to the police a few times but, wasn't taken seriously. I will appreciate if you could stop over at 113 to reassure her that the matter is being dealt with and also to stop by 109 and advise him that you are aware of what is going on and the repercussions should it continue.

Thank you for your support and assistance

Good afternoon Louise,
Sorry I missed your call; I was at a meeting at the time. Called and left a message on your voice mail.
Ms Andrews suffers from a history of mental health; she is currently being supported by Bola Quadri Care-coordinator / CPN / Nurse Prescriber Psychosis Service Line Barnet, Enfield & Haringey Mental Health NHS Trust / 58-60 Silver Street, Enfield EN1 3EP
She made complains about her neighbour at number 109, harassing, verbally abusing her, intimidating, shouting threatening to kill her. The mean concern here is that the perpetrator in question also suffers from mental health and is known to be very aggressive, violet and anti-police. He has on a few occasions threatened to kill her and petrified the life out of her.
It was on this basis that a decision was made to move her out immediately.
Hope the above information is useful.

Hi Louise,
Thanks for this - I'm pleased to hear you think Deborah is being properly supported and that she sounded better - she was in a right state when we spoke to her last.
Good news that it looks like she might be able to get help to move.
For the camera, we are very happy to come along for a visit. I've spoken to our Sgt and as we understand it the ideal course of action is to advise him to remove it in our presence, then if he refuses, I believe you can take it down and that should be fine so long as the camera itself is returned to Cordell. Let me know when your best days for it would be and I'll see when we can manage best.
Best wishes,
James

Hi James,
I spoke with Deborah Andrews this morning; the leak issue was sorted over the weekend this was from the flat above.

I do not know anything about Mr Cordell moving in two weeks' time, unless she is getting confused with his threat that he will get her in two weeks' time. Overall, I am concerned that Deborah is not managing and appears to be getting more confused the last few times I have spoken to her last week and today, she is also feeling that she needs further support by way of supported accommodation. I do agree with her as the level of support that St John of God provide is high and the dependency with other agencies is also constant and not something that housing or myself could provide long term.
Deborah was much calmer this morning and I reassured he that if she has any concerns to contact me.
With regard to the camera not he is not allowed it to be train on anything else other that his front door. Probably means I will need to visit him to get this sorted. I may request your assistance with this I don't really fancy

Hi Louise,
I hope you are well.
Since 15/01/2016 we have had further calls from Debra Andrew relating to the issues she has been having with Simon Cordell.
Given the nature of the calls, we visited Debra yesterday for a reassurance visit. She said that there has been a leak in the building causing 'flooding' in both her flat and Cordell's flat, and Cordell has been making accusations relating to it. She said that she believes Cordell is leaving his flat in two weeks, which I hadn't heard, but said I would look into it - do you know if that's true by any chance?
Debra said that if Cordell does not leave, she wants to leave her flat and move somewhere else herself.
While at the address we also noticed that Cordell has now installed a CCTV camera which is placed at the top of the internal communal door leading to flats 109 and 111, facing towards the main door of the block. I am unsure as to whether he's allowed to do this and shall look into it, but just wanted to let you know!
Best wishes,
James

Mr Cordell called this afternoon requesting to speak with yourselves in regard to his case against his neighbour.
I am sure you know the details; however, he did say that his neighbour is making noise when he undresses. He did go on to mention an incident that resulted in both himself and his neighbour in an awkward position when he attempted to help her move her bed.

Dear Sarah,
Thank you for your email and updated information. This incident yesterday J am assuming that this is a different incident from 15/1/16 where Mr Cordell approached Ms De Polla? Please can you confirm if this was reported to the police, and if this was not why? This is harassment and can be treated and reported as a criminal offence. Yes, this is a separate incident to 15.01.2016. The police were not called as a crime had not been committed and Barbara was able to walk away without Mr Cordell trying to prevent her or following her.
In relation to Deborah please can you confirm if your concerns for her welfare are being reported back to the Mental health team prior to this email (I do appreciate that Bola has been on leave for a few weeks) Yvonne has copied Bola into the same communication as yourself and expressed concerns. Debbie has also contacted Bola. I am receiving if not daily calls from Deborah or every other day, with her explaining to me that she feels she is not coping at all, she is looking to me for reassurance. Deborah has expressed that she is not managing independent living and would like to go back into supported accommodation. Supported living is something Bola would need to arrange. Can you confirm that you have reported your concerns for Debbie's welfare to the mental health team?
Please can you confirm if she has expressed this to staff at St John of god? Also, please can you confirm if you feel that Deborah is not coping at present. If so, has this been reported to the mental health team?
As you are aware, Debbie has said that she is not coping, and I understand that you are in the process of providing a report in order to facilitate Debbie to move. Can you confirm that this has been completed and if so, what the next step of the process is and how long this is likely to take?
Also given the current hours that currently allocated to Deborah if this is suitable in this situation for her need? If I recall this was expressed at a SOVA meeting that this should be extended as her needs are becoming greater? We are requested and funded to provide 6 hours support per week (3 hours twice a week for shopping). Bola is responsible for increasing the care package if Debbie is assessed as needing more support. With regard to the Safeguarding plan I do feel that a mental health strategy meeting needs to take place as issues beyond our control will also have a direct impact on the wellbeing of Deborah. I am raising this directly with George Benyure Bolas manger. My understanding was that Bola had already raised a safeguarding alert.

Deborah has expressed that she is not managing independent living and would like to go back into supported accommodation.
Please can you confirm if she has expressed this to staff at St John of god? Also, please can you confirm if you feel that Deborah is not coping at present. If so, has this been reported to the mental health team?
Also given the current hours that currently allocated to Deborah if this is suitable in this situation for her need? If I recall this was expressed at a SOVA meeting that this should be extended as her needs are becoming greater?
With regard to the Safeguarding plan I do feel that a mental health strategy meeting needs to take place as issues beyond our control will also have a direct impact on the wellbeing of Deborah. I am raising this directly with George Benyure Bolas manger.

Subject: Debra Andrews Importance: High Sensitivity: Confidential This message has been sent on behalf of Yvonne Stacey.
Hi Louise
I am extremely concerned about Debbie Andrewes neighbour and the increased risk to the support workers and indeed Debbie, who, as you are aware is unable to leave her own home unescorted.
Yesterday it was reported to me that the neighbour approached Barbara de Polla as she entered the communal door, he was very aggressive and began shouting at her saying, you should not be coming here, she is an alcoholic, you shouldn't take her out anywhere etc." Barbara said that she did not want to talk about it and walked away from him, luckily, he did not follow her.
In relation to Debbie is safety, I strongly feel that it is only a matter of time before something serious or even fatal happens to her. As you are aware, the neighbour has a dog, which appears to be a Staffordshire bull terrier which he allows to roam free in the communal area which is highly intimidating and potentially very dangerous.

Please can you clarify the interim safeguarding protection plan and timescale as to when Debbie will be moved to a place of safety.
I have completed an internal incident form and unfortunately, if another incident occurs, I will have no other option but to temporarily withdraw our service, which will put Debbie in a situation where she is even more at risk.
I look forward to hearing from you at your earliest convenience.
Regards
NB: Please can you forward this message to your line manager.

Dear George & Bola,
Thank you for your email, I have only copied you both as there is other information on Mr Cordell that urgently needs to be considered.
I received an email informing me that a mental health warrant had been granted for Mr Cordell. This will cause a greater issue especially if he is released back into the community. My fear is that this will indirectly cause further distress for Deborah. A plan needs to be put in place with full considerations.
Please can an urgent mental health strategy meeting be held regarding Deborah Andrews, given the above information and the urgent need for full consideration in this case due to the complex needs and issues with both clients, who are known to your services and tenants of Enfield Council.
Deborah is contacting me if not daily every other day these calls are coming through at all different days and times. She is informing me that she is not coping with everything and wants to go back into supported accommodation, she feels extremely frightened and vulnerable. I must confirm that its Deborah stating that she is not coping as I am not in a position to make these decisions. When I speak with Deborah asking if she is attending her appointments, she states that" it js a quick jab, in and out no one speaks with you.
With regards to the management transfer this is still being prepared and waiting to be heard by panel, I am waiting to hear the next available date for this. It was explained when I suggested this action may be a route forward that this is not a quick process and all elements need to be considered. It is not necessary for Ms Andrews to currently go into emergency accommodation either. This case will be assisted by moving Ms Andrews; however, this may not resolve all of the concerns or the overall future welfare of Ms Andrews.
Transferring Ms Andrews into another independent accommodation without fully assessing her current needs and the full support required should be considered before this happens. As moving her may not solve all of Deborah Andrews concerns. She is only going out when SJOG are visiting, however they are only allocated 3 hours per week. More recommendations need to be put forward to provide a comprehensive package to support

Dear Jackie Gubby

Would it please be possible for you to give me a call on 0208 245 7454? Yesterday I got a call from the repair team in regard to a leak my son had in his flat from the flat above. They had to have a repair team out and shut my son lighting of in his bathroom due to the water leaking into the electrics and blowing out all my son's electrics. Today I got a call from the council saying they believe the leak is coming from the flat above 113 which would be 117 which is privacy owned and someone would be coming to see my son today from 117. The people from 117 have been to see my son today and have had someone check there flat and they are 100% the leak is not coming from there flat. And that they believe it is coming from 113 which is Debbie's flat the person my son has been having trouble with for over a year now and the council have done nothing about this. The people from 117 have tried to speak to 113 but she won't open the door to them to see where the problem is coming from. Just a little while ago my son saw Debbie care worker and he spoke to them and told them again what has been going on and he cannot take it any longer, the care worker told my son that Debbie will not even let them into the flat any more. Something has to be done as this has caused my son heath to go downhill badly and this cannot go on anymore. I am getting no replies to any complaints that have gone in and the ASB team are doing nothing. I have booked a date to see my son's local MP also now as this is having a huge effect on my son's heath, and due to the council doing nothing I don't know where else to turn any longer. I have just called the repair team and spoke to a lady Linda, who has tried to call 113 Debbie and could not take to her, so she is sending a letter out to

113 Debbie,

I have had a very lengthy conversation with Simon.
He starts quite calm however soon descends into a conversation in that he feels persecuted and paranoid against the police, the govt, and his upstairs neighbour. He was tangential, thought disordered, grandiose and difficult to follow at times. Quoting parts of various acts and reading out letters. Asked me what are my objectives? Who visited, the names? Concerned that the police may be coming. Who referred me to you?
I haven a€™t seen my GP for ages. Says he has showed Goodie the true facts and he has official documents to say he has been set up by the police. Says he has been arrested 60 times; he has all the papers. His appeal is in 2/52. He went on talk about a relationship he had and 8/12 into that relationship the woman said she had an internal problem, the clinic said she had an external problem. Said the clinic was watching him. He went on to say that he attended a sexual health clinic on the 8.5.2015 and received a letter to say he had anti-bodies and he shouldn't a€™ t have sex with anyone.

Says that the neighbour eavesdrops saying he has HIV and Hep B. I'm really unclear about this, whether he has HIV or Hep B or this is part of his mental health problem. Says that he is building a website and charity and educating others. Police setting him up. He spoke about his upstairs neighbour at length, says she is an alcoholic and has LD. Under a MH team. Says she stalks him and has written him letters. She bangs on the taps, he has digi recorded her. Neighbour can hear his friends in the flat and follows them upstairs and bangs on the taps. He has been recording her. 3 days ago, says that she flooded his flat, he undone the knot on the radiator. She is trying to destroy his life. Ita€™s been going on in total for 400 days. Neighbour is deliberately ruining his property. Says neighbour needs to be analysed as does her network. He could do a citizen arrest.
Thanks,
Amal Pomphrey

Simon was very angry that we had attended unannounced stating that when I last visited, I did not say I would come back and that he felt he was forming a good working relationship with the team. He went on to say that he has been targeted by the police who are stopping him from working. He described organising several illegal Raves which the police shut down. He presented as manic with pressure of speech but when Dr Al- Allaq questioned him about this, he started talking slower stating that we were busy people, so he was talking fast to get all the information out. He said that the police have arrested him over 1,000 times and that he is on a 10-year curfew to not leave the house after 8.00pm. He has insulted CCTV cameras outside the house and stated that he is recording our visit and will make a formal complaint and take it higher. He said that he has lost thousands of pounds in earnings due to police harassment. He said that the police have contacted the DVLA who are monitoring him. He said he has files and files of information which proves that he is being harassed and monitored by the police. He gave an account of going to court about this and has documents that prove he is being harassed and targeted by the police. He said that he has been to see a psychologist in the East Community Support and Recovery Team and that the psychiatrist said he is not mentally well. Simon refused to allow the assessing team into his property stating that we have to send him an appointment letter. He said he is recording us on CCTV and will have evidence of our conversation.
Simon presented as paranoid, suspicious, and grandiose with flights of ideas, clear evidence that he is suffering from a mental disorder.
Plan
Obtain a Section 135 (1) warrant to enable us to gain police assistance to enter his property for the purpose of carrying out a Mental Health Act assessment (1983).

Threats and intimidation (General)
Home visit to Ms Andrews advised that her neighbour at number 109 has for the past few months harassed, intimidated, stalked her and made a life a complete misery. He continuously plays loud music, bangs on her ceiling and door alleging that she is monitoring his movements in his flat. She feels petrified by his presence and as a result refused to leave her flat for fear bumping into him on her way out. She has missed a few appointments with her social worker as a result, she has now been subjected to making home appointments pending the time this matter is resolved. She explained that they use to be acquaintances before the relationship went sour. She believes the whole problem started when he claimed the decoration in his flat was damaged as a result of a leak coming from her flat. She confirmed that she had a leak from her overflow a few months ago which has since been repaired but, the damage alleged had occurred.

She confirmed that she had a leak from her overflow a few months ago which has since been repaired but, the damage alleged had occurred. Ms Andrews also recalled an incident when the perp spat in her face. It's been one issue after the other she advised the recent event which took place a week ago. She was on her way out to attend her appointment with her CPN when he apprehended her and threatened to kill her. She was pretty shaken from the incident that instead of attending her appointment, returned home immediately. She advised that she contacted the police but, wasn't taken seriously as they assumed, she was drunk at the time of the call. She advised that she wasn't in the list drunk but, just the way she spoke due to her condition. She still wasn't taken seriously and had to abandon the call. She found this very frustrating and advised that it was not the first time this would happen to her. Her CPN also confirmed her statement and expressed her dissatisfaction at the way she was treated. Ms Andrews felt completely let down by the police and became frightful for her safety especially, as she knows the perpetrators has shells in his flat. I observed in her flat that her floors were very creaky, I was made aware by Dawn that most of the flats in the block are like that. Unfortunately, the creakiness exacerbates the noise level in the flats and cause more problems than usual. I advised that I will contact the police to make further enquiries. I will also contact MHT to enquire if Mr Cordell is known to them. At some point the perpetrator will need to be interviewed and a warning letter issued on him. I will contact the repairs team and try to arrange a surveyor to visit her flat and see what assistance can be offered I further advised that her case will be investigated and an officer will get back to her to discuss further with her. Her CPN and TMO will be kept informed of updates
Bola Quadri has already put in place a safeguard alert.

Home visit to Ms Deborah Andrews flat. Attendees Dawn Allen TMO and CPN Bola Quadri
Home visit to Ms Andrews advised that her neighbour at number 109 has for the past few months harassed, intimidated, stalked her allcmade a life a complete misery. He continuously plays loud music, bangs on her ceiling and door alleging that she is monitoring his movements in his flat. She feels petrified by his presence and as a result refused to leave her flat for fear bumping into him on her way out. She has missed a few appointments with her social worker as a result, she has now been subjected to making home appointments pending the time this matter is resolved. She explained that they use to be acquaintances before the relationship went sour. She believes the whole problem started when he claimed the decoration in his flat was damaged as a result of a leak coming from her flat. She confirmed that she had a leak from her overflow a few months ago which has since been repaired but, the damage alleged had occurred. Ms Andrews also recalled an incident when the perp spat in her face. Ifs been one issue after the other she advised the recent event which took place a week ago. She was on her way out to attend her appointment with her CPN when he apprehended her and threatened to kill her. She was pretty shaken from the incident that instead of attending her appointment, returned home immediately. She advised that she contacted the police but, wasn't taken seriously as they assumed, she was drunk at the time of the call. She advised that she wasn't in the list drunk but, just the way she spoke due to her condition. She still wasn't taken seriously and had to abandon the call. She found this very frustrating and advised that it was not the first time this would happen to her. Her CPN also confirmed her statement and expressed her dissatisfaction at the way she was treated. Ms Andrews felt completely let down by the police and became frightful for her safety especially, as she knows the perpetrators has shells in his flat. I observed in her flat that her floors were very creaky, I was made aware by Dawn that most of the flats in the block are like that. Unfortunately, the creakiness exacerbates the noise level in the flats and cause more problems than usual. I advised that I will contact the police to make further enquiries. I will also contact MHT to enquire if Mr Cordell is known to them. At some point the perpetrator will need to be interviewed and a warning letter issued on him. I will contact the repairs team and try to arrange a surveyor to visit her flat and see what assistance can be offered I further advised that her case will be investigated and an officer will get back to her to discuss further with her. Her CPN and TMO will be kept informed of updates Bola Quadri has already put in place a safeguard alert.

Hi Dolly,
Nick and I attended 113a while ago and spoke to the lady a while ago when she originally called Police. At the time she didn't want us to speak to her neighbour as things had got better. The lady handed us a letter about what had happened but none of it made any sense. We believe she was suffering from mental health issues. On another occasion we popped round to see her and she wouldn't come and speak to us so instead she spoke through her letterbox to us. The male at 109 - Simon Cordell who is causing the problems is very well known to Police and is also very anti Police. I know some Officers went around and spoke to him and things seemed to get better. After that we have had no further calls from the lady at 118.
We will try and get around to see her when were back on duty on Monday.
Kind Regards

Good afternoon Mark,
Could you kindly assist with this query please. Following reports of ASB by the above tenant, my colleague and I visited her this morning and were alarmed by the nature of her complaints. She has in the past few months being constantly harassed, intimidated, bullied, stalked and threatened to kill by her neighbour at 109.
As a result of his behaviour, she has become too scared to leave her flat for fear of what may happen to her. She is a vulnerable tenant who requires support from services. However, the unsettling behaviour exhibited by number 109, has hindered her from attending her appointments and exacerbated her condition. At the moment, she feels very disorientated / agitated and will like the harassment to stop.
She advised that she had reported this to the police a few times but, wasn't taken seriously. I will appreciate if you could stop over at 113 to reassure her that the matter is being dealt with and also to stop by 109 and advise him that you are aware of what is going on and the repercussions should it continue.
Thank you for your support and assistance

Good afternoon Louise,
Sorry I missed your call; I was at a meeting at the time. Called and left a message on your voice mail.
Ms Andrews suffers from a history of mental health; she is currently being supported by Bola Quadri Care-coordinator / CPN / Nurse Prescriber Psychosis Service Line Barnet, Enfield & Haringey Mental Health NHS Trust / 58-60 Silver Street, Enfield EN1 3EP
She made complains about her neighbour at number 109, harassing, verbally abusing her, intimidating, shouting threatening to kill her. The mean concern here is that the perpetrator in question also suffers from mental health and is known to be very aggressive, violet and anti-police. He has on a few occasions threatened to kill her and petrified the life out of her.
It was on this basis that a decision was made to move her out immediately.
Hope the above information is useful.

Hi Louise,
Thanks for this - I'm pleased to hear you think Deborah is being properly supported and that she sounded better - she was in a right state when we spoke to her last.
Good news that it looks like she might be able to get help to move.
For the camera, we are very happy to come along for a visit. I've spoken to our Sgt and as we understand it the ideal course of action is to advise him to remove it in our presence, then if he refuses, I believe you can take it down and that should be fine so long as the camera itself is returned to Cordell. Let me know when your best days for it would be and I'll see when we can manage best.
Best wishes,

Hi James,
I spoke with Deborah Andrews this morning; the leak issue was sorted over the weekend this was from the flat above.
I do not know anything about Mr Cordell moving in two weeks' time, unless she is getting confused with his threat that he will get her in two weeks' time. Overall, I am concerned that Deborah is not managing and appears to be getting more confused the last few times I have spoken to her last week and today, she is also feeling that she needs further support by way of supported accommodation. I do agree with her as the level of support that St John of God provide is high and the dependency with other agencies is also constant and not something that housing or myself could provide long term.
Deborah was much calmer this morning and I reassured he that if she has any concerns to contact me.
With regard to the camera not he is not allowed it to be train on anything else other that his front door. Probably means I will need to visit him to get this sorted. I may request your assistance with this I don't really fancy

Hi Louise,
I hope you are well.
Since 15/01/2016 we have had further calls from Debra Andrew relating to the issues she has been having with Simon Cordell.
Given the nature of the calls, we visited Debra yesterday for a reassurance visit. She said that there has been a leak in the building causing 'flooding' in both her flat and Cordell's flat, and Cordell has been making accusations relating to it. She said that she believes Cordell is leaving his flat in two weeks, which I hadn't heard, but said I would look into it - do you know if that's true by any chance?
Debra said that if Cordell does not leave, she wants to leave her flat and move somewhere else herself.
While at the address we also noticed that Cordell has now installed a CCTV camera which is placed at the top of the internal communal door leading to flats 109 and 111, facing towards the main door of the block. I am unsure as to whether he's allowed to do this and shall look into it, but just wanted to let you know!
Best wishes,

Dear Sarah,
Thank you for your email and updated information. This incident yesterday J am assuming that this is a different incident from 15/1/16 where Mr Cordell approached Ms De Polla? Please can you confirm if this was reported to the police, and if this was not why? This is harassment and can be treated and reported as a criminal offence. Yes, this is a separate incident to 15.01.2016. The police were not called as a crime had not been committed and Barbara was able to walk away without Mr Cordell trying to prevent her or following her.
In relation to Deborah please can you confirm if your concerns for her welfare are being reported back to the Mental health team prior to this email (I do appreciate that Bola has been on leave for a few weeks) Yvonne has copied Bola into the same communication as yourself and expressed concerns. Debbie has also contacted Bola. I am receiving if not daily calls from Deborah or every other day, with her explaining to me that she feels she is not coping at all, she is looking to me for reassurance. Deborah has expressed that she is not managing independent living and would like to go back into supported accommodation. Supported living is something Bola would need to arrange. Can you confirm that you have reported your concerns for Debbie's welfare to the mental health team?
Please can you confirm if she has expressed this to staff at St John of god? Also, please can you confirm if you feel that Deborah is not coping at present. If so, has this been reported to the mental health team?
As you are aware, Debbie has said that she is not coping, and I understand that you are in the process of providing a report in order to facilitate Debbie to move. Can you confirm that this has been completed and if so, what the next step of the process is and how long this is likely to take?
Also given the current hours that currently allocated to Deborah if this is suitable in this situation for her need? If I recall this was expressed at a SOVA meeting that this should be extended as her needs are becoming greater? We are requested and funded to provide 6 hours support per week (3 hours twice a week for shopping). Bola is responsible for increasing the care package if Debbie is assessed as needing more support. With regard to the Safeguarding plan I do feel that a mental health strategy meeting needs to take place as issues beyond our control will also have a direct impact on the wellbeing of Deborah. I am raising this directly with George Benyure Bolas manger. My understanding was that Bola had already raised a safeguarding alert.

Dear Sarah,
Thank you for your email and updated information. This incident yesterday I am assuming that this is a different incident from 15/1/16 where Mr Cordell approached Ms De Polla? Please can you confirm if this was reported to the police, and if this was not why? This is harassment and can be treated and reported as a criminal offence.
In relation to Deborah please can you confirm if your concerns for her welfare are being reported back to the Mental health team prior to this email (I do appreciate that Bola has been on leave for a few weeks) I am receiving if not daily calls from Deborah or every other day, with her explaining to me that she feels she is not coping at all, she is looking to me for reassurance. Deborah has expressed that she is not managing independent living and would like to go back into supported accommodation.
Please can you confirm if she has expressed this to staff at St John of god? Also, please can you confirm if you feel that Deborah is not coping at present. If so, has this been reported to the mental health team?

Hi Louise
I am extremely concerned about Debbie Andrewes neighbour and the increased risk to the support workers and indeed Debbie, who, as you are aware is unable to leave her own home unescorted.
Yesterday it was reported to me that the neighbour approached Barbara de Polla as she entered the communal door, he was very aggressive and began shouting at her saying, you should not be coming here, she is an alcoholic, you shouldn't take her out anywhere etc." Barbara said that she did not want to talk about it and walked away from him, luckily, he did not follow her.

In relation to Debbie is safety, I strongly feel that it is only a matter of time before something serious or even fatal happens to her. As you are aware, the neighbour has a dog, which appears to be a Staffordshire bull terrier which he allows to roam free in the communal area which is highly intimidating and potentially very dangerous.
Please can you clarify the interim safeguarding protection plan and timescale as to when Debbie will be moved to a place of safety.
I have completed an internal incident form and unfortunately, if another incident occurs, I will have no other option but to temporarily withdraw our service, which will put Debbie in a situation where she is even more at risk.
I look forward to hearing from you at your earliest convenience.

Dear George & Bola,
Thank you for your email, I have only copied you both as there is other information on Mr Cordell that urgently needs to be considered.
I received an email informing me that a mental health warrant had been granted for Mr Cordell. This will cause a greater issue especially if he is released back into the community. My fear is that this will indirectly cause further distress for Deborah. A plan needs to be put in place with full considerations.
Please can an urgent mental health strategy meeting be held regarding Deborah Andrews, given the above information and the urgent need for full consideration in this case due to the complex needs and issues with both clients, who are known to your services and tenants of Enfield Council.

Deborah is contacting me if not daily every other day these calls are coming through at all different days and times. She is informing me that she is not coping with everything and wants to go back into supported accommodation, she feels extremely frightened and vulnerable. I must confirm that its Deborah stating that she is not coping as I am not in a position to make these decisions. When I speak with Deborah asking if she is attending her appointments, she states that" it js a quick jab, in and out no one speaks with you.
With regards to the management transfer this is still being prepared and waiting to be heard by panel, I am waiting to hear the next available date for this. It was explained when I suggested this action may be a route forward that this is not a quick process and all elements need to be considered. It is not necessary for Ms Andrews to currently go into emergency accommodation either. This case will be assisted by moving Ms Andrews; however, this may not resolve all of the concerns or the overall future welfare of Ms Andrews.
Transferring Ms Andrews into another independent accommodation without fully assessing her current needs and the full support required should be considered before this happens. As moving her may not solve all of Deborah Andrews concerns. She is only going out when SJOG are visiting, however they are only allocated 3 hours per week. More recommendations need to be put forward to provide a comprehensive package to support

Dear Ms Cordell,
Re: Mr Simon Cordell -109 Burncroft Avenue - COM 1885.
I write with reference to your letters of complaint dated 24th November 2016 copies of which were received via email on 24th November 2016, 5th December 2016 and 8th December 2016.
I will respond to the issues you raised as follows.
1. Anti-Social Behaviour Order
We are aware that the police applied for an Anti-Social Behaviour Order (ASBO) which was granted on 4th August 2015 against your son in relation to activities that cations away from Burncroft Avenue. We are aware that your son is appealing against the ASBO and we are therefore unable to comment further.
2. CCTV
We can confirm that a letter was sent to your son by Sarah Fletcher, Neighbourhood Officer on 18th November 2016 giving him until 25th November 2016 to remove the CCTV that he had installed on the internal communal door leading to flats 109 and 111 Burncroft Avenue and facing towards the main door of the block. We can also confirm that another letter was sent to him on 29th November 2016 by Lemmy Nwabuisi, Anti-Social concerns a breach of tenancy conditions and will be addressed separately from this complaint.

Behaviour Officer in relation to complaints received from your son's neighbours concerning the CCTV. This matter

3. Allegations of Anti-Social Behaviour

You referred to alleged issues that your son was having with his neighbours; however, you' did not specify which neighbours and or provide a specific time frame when these complaints were made. We have checked our records since 4h August 2015 and found two records of telephone complaints received from your son. One on 20h August 2015 and again on 26h January 2016 which related to noise and the issues he was having with a neighbour. These concerns were dealt with at the time by relevant officers.

We note your comment that your son has been a tenant for many years and that there have been no complaints about him until the publication of the ASBO against him on 4th August 2015. However, our records show that since your son's tenancy began on 14th August 2006, there has been at least one previous complaint against your son from another neighbour prior to the ASBO.

We are aware of the alleged incident that happened on 4th October 2016 as this was reported to us and this will be addressed separately as part of ongoing Anti-Social Behaviour investigations.

We note your comments regarding the police and must advise that you take up any issues with the Independent Police Complaints Commission. We also note your comment regarding an alleged incident on 14th August 2016. This was not reported to the Council and should be a matter for the police. We note your comment that your son is scared to go home due to the alleged issues with his neighbours.

Regarding the allegations of ASB against your son and the issues regarding his dog, we note your comment that you do not think it is justified to attend the meeting with Lemmy Nwabuisi prior to your formal complaint being addressed. We note your comment that you have been advised by a solicitor to wait for the SAR. We also note your comments in relation to the letter sent by Lemmy Nwabuisi on 29th November 2016 regarding reports of anti-social behaviour made against your son by his neighbours and that you will address these once the SAR is received. Please note that these allegations are serious breaches of tenancy conditions and will be addressed separately as part of an ongoing investigation. We have attempted to meet with your son to discuss the allegations made against him and give him the opportunity to respond. It is important that these issues are addressed and another meeting will be arranged to facilitate this in due course.

- Subject Access Request (SAR)

The SAR that you have submitted is being responded to separately in accordance with required timescales.

- Communications

We are aware that you left messages for Sarah Fletcher on three occasions between 16 and 21 November 2016 and she was not available at these times. We confirm that she spoke directly with Mr Simon Cordell by telephone on 22nd November 2016.

- Housing Options

As a single resident living in a one-bedroom property, the Council considers that your; son is suitably housed. We do not have sufficient evidence in relation to your son's allegations of anti-social behaviour against his neighbours to be able to refer him for a transfer on the housing register.

He can make an online application himself to be placed on the housing register by visiting the Council Housing pages of the Enfield Council website at www.enfield.Gov.uk. His eligibility for transfer will then be assessed by the Housing Options team in accordance with Council policy and they will advise whether his application is accepted.

Alternative options to move are available to him through the mutual exchange scheme, where tenants are able to swap their home with another tenant, and the fresh start scheme, where tenants can be supported in moving to a private rented home. Threats and intimidation (General)
Home visit to Ms Andrews advised that her neighbour at number 109 has for the past few months harassed, intimidated, stalked her and made a life a complete misery. He continuously plays loud music, bangs on her ceiling and door alleging that she is monitoring his movements in his flat. She feels petrified by his presence and as a result refused to leave her flat for fear bumping into him on her way out. She has missed a few appointments with her social worker as a result, she has now been subjected to making home appointments pending the time this matter is resolved. She explained that they use to be acquaintances before the relationship went sour. She believes the whole problem started when he claimed the decoration in his flat was damaged as a result of a leak coming from her flat. She confirmed that she had a leak from her overflow a few months ago which has since been repaired but, the damage alleged had occurred.

Ms Andrews also recalled an incident when the perp spat in her face. It's been one issue after the other she advised the recent event which took place a week ago. She was on her way out to attend her appointment with her CPN when he apprehended her and threatened to kill her. She was pretty shaken from the incident that instead of attending her appointment, returned home immediately. She advised that she contacted the police but, wasn't taken seriously as they assumed, she was drunk at the time of the call. She advised that she wasn't in the list drunk but, just the way she spoke due to her condition. She still wasn't taken seriously and had to abandon the call. She found this very frustrating and advised that it was not the first time this would happen to her. Her CPN also confirmed her statement and expressed her dissatisfaction at the way she was treated. Ms Andrews felt completely let down by the police and became frightful for her safety especially, as she knows the perpetrators has shells in his flat. I observed in her flat that her floors were very creaky, I was made aware by Dawn that most of the flats in the block are like that. Unfortunately, the creakiness exacerbates the noise level in the flats and cause more problems than usual. I advised that I will contact the police to make further enquiries. I will also contact MHT to enquire if Mr Cordell is known to them. At some point the perpetrator will need to be interviewed and a warning letter issued on him. I will contact the repairs team and try to arrange a surveyor to visit her flat and see what assistance can be offered I further advised that her case will be investigated and an officer will get back to her to discuss further with her. Home visit to Ms Deborah Andrews flat. Attendees Dawn Allen TMO and CPN Bola Quadri Home visit to Ms Andrews advised that her neighbour at number 109 has for the past few months harassed, intimidated, stalked her allcmade a life a complete misery. He continuously plays loud music, bangs on her ceiling and door alleging that she is monitoring his movements in his flat. She feels petrified by his presence and as a result refused to leave her flat for fear bumping into him on her way out. She has missed a few appointments with her social worker as a result, she has now been subjected to making home appointments pending the time this matter is resolved. She explained that they use to be acquaintances before the relationship went sour. She believes the whole problem started when he claimed the decoration in his flat was damaged as a result of a leak coming from her flat. She confirmed that she had a leak from her overflow a few months ago which has since been repaired but, the damage alleged had occurred. Ms Andrews also recalled an incident when the perp spat in her face. Ifs been one issue after the other she advised the recent event which took place a week ago. She was on her way out to attend her appointment with her CPN when he apprehended her and threatened to kill her. She was pretty shaken from the incident that instead of attending her appointment, returned home immediately. She advised that she contacted the police but, wasn't taken seriously as they assumed, she was drunk at the time of the call. She advised that she wasn't in the list drunk but, just the way she spoke due to her condition. She still wasn't taken seriously and had to abandon the call. She found this very frustrating and advised that it was not the first time this would happen to her. Her CPN also confirmed her statement and expressed her dissatisfaction at the way she was treated. Ms Andrews felt completely let down by the police and became frightful for her safety especially, as she knows the perpetrators has shells in his flat. I observed in her flat that her floors were very creaky, I was made aware by Dawn that most of the flats in the block are like that. Unfortunately, the creakiness exacerbates the noise level in the flats and cause more problems than usual. I advised that I will contact the police to make further enquiries. Hi Dolly, Nick and I attended 113a while ago and spoke to the lady a while ago when she originally called Police. At the time she didn't want us to speak to her neighbour as things had got better. The lady handed us a letter about what had happened but none of it made any sense. We believe she was suffering from mental health issues. On another occasion we popped round to see her and she wouldn't come and speak to us so instead she spoke through her letterbox to us. The male at 109 - Simon Cordell who is causing the problems is very well known to Police and is also very anti Police. I know some Officers went around and spoke to him and things seemed to get better. After that we have had no further calls from the lady at 118.

We will try and get around to see her when were back on duty on Monday.
Kind Regards

Good afternoon Mark,
Could you kindly assist with this query please. Following reports of ASB by the above tenant, my colleague and I visited her this morning and were alarmed by the nature of her complaints. She has in the past few months being constantly harassed, intimidated, bullied, stalked and threatened to kill by her neighbour at 109.
As a result of his behaviour, she has become too scared to leave her flat for fear of what may happen to her. She is a vulnerable tenant who requires support from services. However, the unsettling behaviour exhibited by number 109, has hindered her from attending her appointments and exacerbated her condition. At the moment, she feels very disorientated / agitated and will like the harassment to stop.
She advised that she had reported this to the police a few times but, wasn't taken seriously. I will appreciate if you could stop over at 113 to reassure her that the matter is being dealt with and also to stop by 109 and advise him that you are aware of what is going on and the repercussions should it continue.

Good afternoon Louise,
Sorry I missed your call; I was at a meeting at the time. Called and left a message on your voice mail.
Ms Andrews suffers from a history of mental health; she is currently being supported by Bola Quadri Care-coordinator / CPN / Nurse Prescriber Psychosis Service Line Barnet, Enfield & Haringey Mental Health NHS Trust / 58-60 Silver Street, Enfield EN1 3EP
She made complains about her neighbour at number 109, harassing, verbally abusing her, intimidating, shouting threatening to kill her. The mean concern here is that the perpetrator in question also suffers from mental health and is known to be very aggressive, violet and anti-police. He has on a few occasions threatened to kill her and petrified the life out of her.
It was on this basis that a decision was made to move her out immediately.
Hope the above information is useful.

Hi Louise,
Thanks for this - I'm pleased to hear you think Deborah is being properly supported and that she sounded better - she was in a right state when we spoke to her last.
Good news that it looks like she might be able to get help to move.
For the camera, we are very happy to come along for a visit. I've spoken to our Sgt and as we understand it the ideal course of action is to advise him to remove it in our presence, then if he refuses, I believe you can take it down and that should be fine so long as the camera itself is returned to Cordell. Let me know when your best days for it would be and I'll see when we can manage best.
Best wishes,

Hi James,
I spoke with Deborah Andrews this morning; the leak issue was sorted over the weekend this was from the flat above.
I do not know anything about Mr Cordell moving in two weeks' time, unless she is getting confused with his threat that he will get her in two weeks' time. Overall, I am concerned that Deborah is not managing and appears to be getting more confused the last few times I have spoken to her last week and today, she is also feeling that she needs further support by way of supported accommodation. I do agree with her as the level of support that St John of God provide is high and the dependency with other agencies is also constant and not something that housing or myself could provide long term.
Deborah was much calmer this morning and I reassured he that if she has any concerns to contact me.
With regard to the camera not he is not allowed it to be train on anything else other that his front door. Probably means I will need to visit him to get this sorted. I may request your assistance with this I don't really fancy

Hi Louise,
I hope you are well.
Since 15/01/2016 we have had further calls from Debra Andrew relating to the issues she has been having with Simon Cordell.
Given the nature of the calls, we visited Debra yesterday for a reassurance visit. She said that there has been a leak in the building causing 'flooding' in both her flat and Cordell's flat, and Cordell has been making accusations relating to it. She said that she believes Cordell is leaving his flat in two weeks, which I hadn't heard, but said I would look into it - do you know if that's true by any chance?
Debra said that if Cordell does not leave, she wants to leave her flat and move somewhere else herself.
While at the address we also noticed that Cordell has now installed a CCTV camera which is placed at the top of the internal communal door leading to flats 109 and 111, facing towards the main door of the block. I am unsure as to whether he's allowed to do this and shall look into it, but just wanted to let you know!
Best wishes,
James

Mr Cordell called this afternoon requesting to speak with yourselves in regard to his case against his neighbour.
I am sure you know the details; however, he did say that his neighbour is making noise when he undresses. He did go on to mention an incident that resulted in both himself and his neighbour in an awkward position when he attempted to help her move her bed.

Dear Sarah,
Thank you for your email and updated information. This incident yesterday J am assuming that this is a different incident from 15/1/16 where Mr Cordell approached Ms De Polla? Please can you confirm if this was reported to the police, and if this was not why? This is harassment and can be treated and reported as a criminal offence. Yes, this is a separate incident to 15.01.2016. The police were not called as a crime had not been committed and Barbara was able to walk away without Mr Cordell trying to prevent her or following her.
In relation to Deborah please can you confirm if your concerns for her welfare are being reported back to the Mental health team prior to this email (I do appreciate that Bola has been on leave for a few weeks) Yvonne has copied Bola into the same communication as yourself and expressed concerns. Debbie has also contacted Bola. I am receiving if not daily calls from Deborah or every other day, with her explaining to me that she feels she is not coping at all, she is looking to me for reassurance. Deborah has expressed that she is not managing independent living and would like to go back into supported accommodation. Supported living is something Bola would need to arrange. Can you confirm that you have reported your concerns for Debbie's welfare to the mental health team?
Please can you confirm if she has expressed this to staff at St John of god? Also, please can you confirm if you feel that Deborah is not coping at present. If so, has this been reported to the mental health team?
As you are aware, Debbie has said that she is not coping, and I understand that you are in the process of providing a report in order to facilitate Debbie to move. Can you confirm that this has been completed and if so, what the next step of the process is and how long this is likely to take?
Also given the current hours that currently allocated to Deborah if this is suitable in this situation for her need? If I recall this was expressed at a SOVA meeting that this should be extended as her needs are becoming greater? We are requested and funded to provide 6 hours support per week (3 hours twice a week for shopping). Bola is responsible for increasing the care package if Debbie is assessed as needing more support. With regard to the Safeguarding plan I do feel that a mental health strategy meeting needs to take place as issues beyond our control will also have a direct impact on the wellbeing of Deborah. I am raising this directly with George Benyure Bolas manger. My understanding was that Bola had already raised a safeguarding alert.

Subject: Debra Andrews Importance: High Sensitivity: Confidential This message has been sent on behalf of Yvonne Stacey.
Hi Louise

I am extremely concerned about Debbie Andrewes neighbour and the increased risk to the support workers and indeed Debbie, who, as you are aware is unable to leave her own home unescorted.
Yesterday it was reported to me that the neighbour approached Barbara de Polla as she entered the communal door, he was very aggressive and began shouting at her saying, you should not be coming here, she is an alcoholic, you shouldn't take her out anywhere etc." Barbara said that she did not want to talk about it and walked away from him, luckily, he did not follow her.
In relation to Debbie is safety, I strongly feel that it is only a matter of time before something serious or even fatal happens to her. As you are aware, the neighbour has a dog, which appears to be a Staffordshire bull terrier which he allows to roam free in the communal area which is highly intimidating and potentially very dangerous.
Please can you clarify the interim safeguarding protection plan and timescale as to when Debbie will be moved to a place of safety.
I have completed an internal incident form and unfortunately, if another incident occurs, I will have no other option but to temporarily withdraw our service, which will put Debbie in a situation where she is even more at risk.
I look forward to hearing from you at your earliest convenience.

Dear George & Bola,
Thank you for your email, I have only copied you both as there is other information on Mr Cordell that urgently needs to be considered.
I received an email informing me that a mental health warrant had been granted for Mr Cordell. This will cause a greater issue especially if he is released back into the community. My fear is that this will indirectly cause further distress for Deborah. A plan needs to be put in place with full considerations.

Please can an urgent mental health strategy meeting be held regarding Deborah Andrews, given the above information and the urgent need for full consideration in this case due to the complex needs and issues with both clients, who are known to your services and tenants of Enfield Council.
Deborah is contacting me if not daily every other day these calls are coming through at all different days and times. She is informing me that she is not coping with everything and wants to go back into supported accommodation, she feels extremely frightened and vulnerable. I must confirm that its Deborah stating that she is not coping as I am not in a position to make these decisions. When I speak with Deborah asking if she is attending her appointments, she states that" it js a quick jab, in and out no one speaks with you.
With regards to the management transfer this is still being prepared and waiting to be heard by panel, I am waiting to hear the next available date for this. It was explained when I suggested this action may be a route forward that this is not a quick process and all elements need to be considered. It is not necessary for Ms Andrews to currently go into emergency accommodation either. This case will be assisted by moving Ms Andrews; however, this may not resolve all of the concerns or the overall future welfare of Ms Andrews.
Transferring Ms Andrews into another independent accommodation without fully assessing her current needs and the full support required should be considered before this happens. As moving her may not solve all of Deborah Andrews concerns. She is only going out when SJOG are visiting, however they are only allocated 3 hours per week. More recommendations need to be put forward to provide a comprehensive package to support according to Sandra's note dated 21/1, Simons mother has agreed to look after dog "lady".

I spoke to mother on 020 8245 7454. she said she would be willing and able to care for dog, if Simon goes into hospital. she indicated very strongly that she believes Simon is being harassed by his upstairs neighbour, who she said has mental health problems, she said also that Simon (and the whole family) have been harassed by police for the last 20 years, she said Simon suffers from stress that is exacerbated by neighbour and police actions.
I advised she speaks to cc Amal regarding her concerns, she said Simon is happy to engage with Amal and eis. I advised of details for mha asmt so that she can be available - she said she would care for dog if Simon admitted.
I advised she does not tell Simon of the mha asmt plan, in case he decides to avoid seeing staff, I was not certain from her approach that she would adhere to this advice, she warned that police attending Simon's home would cause uproar.
to do:

- confirm locksmith availability via the council Jackie Gubby 020 8375 8131 - message left on her answer phone.
- bed manager to be alerted.

From Client: Not Concealed call received from safer neighbourhood team (snt) Sgt mark Aldwinckle 020 8345 1124. He said police snt not available until wed 3/2/16. in discussion, we agreed that although mha asmt needs to be carried out as soon as possible, there does not seem to be anything which is escalating any risk presented by Simon, at this time, we agreed that given police snt knowledge of client and ongoing quite frequent contact with him, it would be useful to have local snt staff attend to assist on the occasion of this mha asmt - rather than other police officers who are not familiar with him. we discussed issue that Simon has a dog, and that it would be possible for him to use dog as a threat against staff wishing to enter his property.
Sgt Aldwinckle said police would equip with "bite back" spray, which they may use to calm threatening dogs. we agreed 10.00 on Wednesday 3/2/16, as date for mha asmt to set up.

Hi Josey
Can you please give me an update you said on Thursday last week that you would reply to the below emails on the Friday last week and I have not heard from you still.
I sent you the information you asked for in the text on 22/01/2016 by email
Then some other information by email on the 24/01/2016 which linked Scotland Yard again.
We need to know if you have emailed Supt Adrian Coombs to get the statement he said he was willing to do back in Sep2015, this is a very important statement as it will show all the information about Essex we don't know how long he will take to reply and time is running out. I would like to see the email that is written before it is sent so I can see if there is anything that has been missed out, as there was a lot he done and said to me when he called me and spoke to me.
Also have you put in the request for the missing CAD's, and all the CADs for all the events that went on at Crown Road, I have had an updated email from Enfield Council as I emailed them. Or will this be done when we are served their updated file on the 02/02/2016
Attached is 2 emails updated from Enfield Council
RE FOI 11845 [SEC=UNCLASSIFIED]-11-01-2016 = this is the reply to asking about the April 2014 event at Crown Road.
RE FOI 11845 [SEC=UNCLASSIFIED]-11-01-2016-01 = this is my reply to his email with more dates that has never been said, which Enfield Council has not replied to.
I have also attached a letter due to a FOI I put in to a next council = die to the FOI they sent me information and a letter = 489414 = due to the FOI I put in they sent me = Document 1 = which is copies of 2 Noise Abatement Notice that were served by their council to 2 buildings. so, you can see how much power a Noise Abatement Notice has.

Why did Enfield Council never serve a Noise Abatement Notice on Crown Road it would have allowed them to take sound systems so would have stopped events going on? Crown Road events were going on for months and Enfield Council and the police did nothing allowed then to go on, which was causing a huge problem to people that lived nearby. Yet as soon as the police see Simon at progress way, they get Enfield council out to try and serve paperwork. Why did the council only try to serve this on Simon when there were loads of people at the gate of Progress Way and Simon was outside? The paperwork could have been served on any person inside of Progress Way, yet no paperwork was served, and Enfield Council just left.
Why also if Enfield Council went out on the 08th June 2014 to serve paper work at Progress Way did they not do the same to Crown Road at the same time they had police backup and an event had been running the 6th 7th 08th June at Crown road the same as progress way.
And what will be the outcome due to Val Tanner saying she could not give you the information you asked for via email. what is going to be the plain of action on how we are going to deal with this and the public order unit at Scotland Yard as they have a lot of information on events even over the last months so how was they not involved in these events like Steven Elsmore is trying to say in his last statement.
If you could give me an update with anything else that needs to be done and a full update as to how we are going to deal with everything I would be grateful.
I know that we are meant to be served the file by the 02/02/2016 by them could you please let me know as soon as it comes to the office so I can pick it up will need 2 copies one for me and one for Simon. So, we can see what has been changed and updated, as we will need to work fast as any other information, we want to put in will need to be done fast.
I also need a copy of Simon folder so he can see it as he has never seen it and he really need to go over its ASAP.
Simon File was never completed and he was never given a file for trial what if the file we made up before Christmas does not match the one the court and the police had for trial and they have more things in there's that we don't have in the file that been made up.
Also have you sorted a barrister out for the appeal I know before Christmas you said you did not have one yet and needed to find one to do the appeal, the barrister will need time to go over all this data to see if there is things we have missed and they need to know the case before the appeal, Andy Locke will have information in his files that would really help and he did agree to do the appeal hearing and he knows the case already.

Also Simon wanted to get the file that has been made up so he can see what has been done as he could not look at the last set that was sent to the court and police as there was no time in which to let him see.
Could you also please explain if you have submitted the request for the information that we need. And also wrote the email to Supt Adrian Coombs yet to get the witness statement, as that will be needed.
Simon wants to know what is going on and also the dates.
Could you please reply to my emails so I can give him an update please.

can you please give me an update.
Have you put into the police for the missing CADs and everything else that needs to be asked for from the public order unit.

Have you sent the email to Supt Adrian Coombs to get him to do the statement yet I spoke to him in Sep 2015 and I have been asking since then for an email to be sent to him as he said he was willing to do a statement and got all his notes out to do one.
I have got the tickets from Dwayne and the hall details they were not put in the file due to me not getting them till after Christmas, as he had a problem with my email.
Can you give me the date that the cps has to reply to us and send us any other information.
And can I have the date Simon trial is due to happen, and if there anything else we need to do please.

I am sorry that I keep emailing you, but I am trying to deal with things and Simon keeps asking for updates to this appeal.
Just before Christmas you said Simon trial date was meant to be set for the 6th Feb but I just checked and that is a Saturday so that cannot be the date, Ben wants to take time of work, could you please send me the full dates for everything so I know the dates as to when things have to be done for this case I have asked before for this information as when we were at court many dates were said and I did not take them all in.
Also can you tell me if you have written to Supt Adrian Coombs yet as Simon is asking everyday what is going on with the case and what has been done and what has not been done, and how we are dealing with this case and all the information that is needed, and the below emails.

Hi Josey
I hope you had a nice Christmas and New Year; I just wanted to know when you were back off holiday.
I was wondering if you had written yet to get the statement from Supt Adrian Coombs.
And was wondering if also you when you would be writing and asking for all the discloser.
We have just over 4 weeks left to get all the information. I know you had the reply from Val tanner and said you were going to deal with this.
Would it also please be possible for you to write down everything that has been done and send it to Simon Email so he can get an update as to what is going on with the case?
It is really hard for me dealing with this case like this as I am not the one that this case is about. I am trying to give Simon updates as to things that have and have not been done, but with you only wanting to deal with me until just before the appeal it is hard as I know Simon wants to know things and have things done. And he got a lot of input about things, that he wants to include.

Like you were asking the order of how things should be done.

Simon spoke to me the other day and told me, and I hope I have got this right what he said.

The environmental protection act 1990section 80 abatement notice should be put in place by the council. I have a copy of one from a FOI I put in I will attach it here for you to see there is 2 in one file that they sent me.

The abatement notice then gives them the right to take the sound systems, and then after this the section 63 can be put in place, I think but Simon understands all of this.

I not sure if I got all this correct, but Simon understands it all, Simon has never been given any paperwork from the council or the police, so no abatement notice or a section 63.

Even when they took his sound system on the 20/06/2014 Simon has never had any paperwork.

Also, no abatement notice was put in place for Crown Road by the council I have this in an email, and they were having a great deal of problems as you know with Crown Road.

Crown road was going on for months which we can prove, it was going on, on the 6th, 07th and 08th, and had been going on for weeks before this at Crown Road, yet the police get the council out on the 08th to serve an abatement notice for Progress Way but did not do this for Crown Road?

The council knows that they can put an abatement notice in place at any time, and the reason they gave me in an email for no doing so is a joke tbh.

Can you give me an update on what has to be done now please?

Regards

Lorraine

The Statutory Nuisance (Appeals) Regulations 1995 provide as follows:-

APPEALS UNDER SECTION 80(3) of the ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION ACT 1990 ("the 1990 Act")

2.- (1) The provisions of this regulation apply in relation to an appeal brought by any person under section 80(3) of the 1990 Act (appeals to the Magistrates) against an abatement notice served upon him by a local authority.

(2) The grounds on which a person served with such a notice may appeal under section 80(3) are any one or more of the following grounds that are appropriate in the circumstances of the particular case-

(a) that the abatement notice is not justified by section 80 of the 1990 Act (summary proceedings for statutory nuisances);

(b) that there has been some informality, defect or error in, or in connection with, the abatement notice, or in, or in connection with any copy of the abatement notice served under section 80A(3) (certain notices in respect of vehicles, machinery or equipment);

(c) that the authority have refused unreasonably to accept compliance with alternative requirements, or that the requirements of the abatement notice are otherwise unreasonable in character or extent, or are unnecessary;

(d) that the time, or, where more than one time is specified, any of the times, within which the requirements of the abatement notice are to be complied with is not reasonably sufficient for the purpose;

(e) where the nuisance to which the notice relates -
  (i) is a nuisance falling within section 79(1)(a), (d), (e), (f) or (g) of the 1990 Act and arises on industrial, trade or business premises, or
  (ii) is a nuisance falling within section 79(1)(b) of the 1990 Act and the smoke is emitted from a chimney, or
  (iii) is a nuisance falling within section 79(1)(ga) of the 1990 Act and is noise emitted from or caused by a vehicle, machinery or equipment being used for industrial, trade or business purposes, that the best practicable means were used to prevent, or to counteract the effects of, the nuisance;

(f) that, in the case of a nuisance under section 79(1)(g) or (ga) of the 1990 Act (noise emitted from premises), the requirements imposed by the abatement notice by virtue of section 80(1)(a) of that Act are more onerous than the requirements for the time being in force, in relation to the noise to which the notice relates, of-
  (i) any notice served under section 60 or 66 of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 ("the 1974 Act"), or
  (ii) any consent given under section 61 or 65 of the 1974 Act, or
  (iii) any determination made under section 67 of the 1974 Act;

(g) that, in the case of a nuisance under section 79(1)(ga) of the 1990 Act (noise emitted from or caused by vehicles, machinery or equipment), the requirements imposed by the abatement notice by virtue of section 80(1)(a) of the Act are more onerous than the requirements for the time being in force, in relation to the noise to which the notice relates of any condition of a consent given under paragraph 1 of Schedule 2 to the Noise and Statutory Nuisance Act 1993 (loudspeakers in streets or roads);

(h) that the abatement notice should have been served on some person instead of the appellant, being -
  (i) the person responsible for the nuisance, or
  (ii) the person responsible for the vehicle, machinery or equipment, or
  (iii) in the case of a nuisance arising from any defect of a structural character, the owner of the premises, or
  (iv) in the case where the person responsible for the nuisance cannot be found or the nuisance has not yet occurred, the owner or occupier of the premises;

(i) that the abatement notice might lawfully have been served on some person instead of the appellant being -
  (i) in the case where the appellant is the owner of the premises, the occupier of the premises, or
  (ii) in the case where the appellant is the occupier of the premises, the owner of the premises, and that it would have been equitable for it to have been so served;

(j) that the abatement notice might lawfully have been served on some person in addition to the appellant, being -
  (i) a person also responsible for the nuisance, or
  (ii) a person who is also an owner of the premises, or
  (iii) a person who is also an occupier of the premises,
  (iv) a person who is also the person responsible for the vehicle, machinery or equipment, and that it would have been equitable for it to have been so served.

(3) If and so far as an appeal is based on the ground of some informality, defect or error in, or in connection with, the abatement notice or in, or in connection with, any copy of the notice served under section 80A(3), the court shall dismiss the appeal if it is satisfied that the informality, defect or error was not a material one.

(4) Where the grounds upon which an appeal is brought include a ground specified in paragraph (2)(i) or (j) above, the appellant shall serve a copy of his notice of appeal on any other person referred to, and in the case of any appeal to which these regulations apply he may serve a copy of his notice of appeal on any other person having an estate or interest in the premises, vehicle, machinery or equipment in question.

(5) On the hearing of an appeal the court may-
  (a) quash the abatement notice to which the appeal relates, or
  (b) vary the abatement notice in favour of the appellant, in such manner as it thinks fit, or
  (c) dismiss the appeal;
  and an abatement notice that is varied under sub-paragraph (b) above shall be final and shall otherwise have effect, as so varied, as if it had been so made by the local authority.

(6) Subject to paragraph (7) below, on the hearing of an appeal the court may make such order as it thinks fit-
  (a) with respect to the person by whom any work is to be executed and the contribution to be made by any person towards the cost of the work, or
  (b) as to the proportions in which any expenses which may become recoverable by the authority under Part III of the 1990 Act are to be borne by the appellant and by any other person.

(7) In exercising its powers under paragraph (6) above, the court-
  (a) shall have regard, as between an owner and an occupier, to the terms and conditions, whether contractual or statutory, of any relevant tenancy and to the nature of the works required, and
  (b) shall be satisfied, before it imposes any requirement thereunder on any person other than the appellant, that person has received a copy of the notice of appeal in pursuance of paragraph (4) above.

SUSPENSION OF NOTICES

3. (1) Where -
  (a) an appeal is brought against an abatement notice served under section 80 or 80A of the 1990 Act, and -
  (b) either -
    (i) compliance with the abatement notice would involve any person in expenditure on the carrying out of works before the hearing of the appeal, or
    (ii) in the case of a nuisance under section 79(1)(g) or (ga) of the 1990 Act, the noise to which the abatement notice relates is noise necessarily caused in the course of the performance of some duty imposed by law on the appellant, and
  (c) either paragraph (2) does not apply, or it does apply but the requirements of paragraph (3) have not been met, the abatement notice shall be suspended until the appeal has been abandoned or decided by the court.

(2) This paragraph applies where -
  (a) the nuisance to which the abatement notice relates-
    (i) is injurious to health, or
    (ii) is likely to be of a limited duration such that suspension of the notice would render it of no practical effect, or
  (b) the expenditure which would be incurred by any person in the carrying out of works in compliance with the abatement notice before any appeal has been decided would not be disproportionate to the public benefit to be expected in that period from such compliance.

(3) where paragraph (2) applies the abatement notice -
  (a) shall include a statement that paragraph (2) applies, and that as a consequence it shall have effect notwithstanding any appeal to a magistrates' court which has not been decided by the court, and
  (b) shall include a statement as to which of the grounds set out in paragraph (2) apply.

(7) In exercising its powers under paragraph (6) above, the court-

(a) shall have regard, as between an owner and an occupier, to the terms and conditions, whether contractual or statutory, of any relevant tenancy and to the nature of the works required, and

(b) shall be satisfied, before it imposes any requirement thereunder on any person other than the appellant, that person has received a copy of the notice of appeal in pursuance of paragraph (4) above.

SUSPENSION OF NOTICES

3. (1) Where -

(a) an appeal is brought against an abatement notice served under section 80 or 80A of the 1990 Act, and -

(b) either -

(i) compliance with the abatement notice would involve any person in expenditure on the carrying out of works before the hearing of the appeal, or

(ii) in the case of a nuisance under section 79(1)(g) or (ga) of the 1990 Act, the noise to which the abatement notice relates is noise necessarily caused in the course of the performance of some duty imposed by law on the appellant, and

(c) either paragraph (2) does not apply, or it does apply but the requirements of paragraph (3) have not been met, the abatement notice shall be suspended until the appeal has been abandoned or decided by the court.

(2) This paragraph applies where -

(a) the nuisance to which the abatement notice relates-

(i) is injurious to health, or

(ii) is likely to be of a limited duration such that suspension of the notice would render it of no practical effect, or

(b) the expenditure which would be incurred by any person in the carrying out of works in compliance with the abatement notice before any appeal has been decided would not be disproportionate to the public benefit to be expected in that period from such compliance,

(3) where paragraph (2) applies the abatement notice -

(a) shall include a statement that paragraph (2) applies, and that as a consequence it shall have effect notwithstanding any appeal to a magistrates' court which has not been decided by the court, and

(b) shall include a statement as to which of the grounds set out in paragraph (2) apply.

Dear Ms. Cordell,

Thank you for your email; I have rechecked our database and indeed, I did make a mistake and missed one complaint which was received by our Residential Noise Team on 20/04/14, it was the only complaint received by the Council prior to the ones listed in the FOI response sent to you. The officer who received the complaint tried to contact the customer who made it on several occasions but was unable to do so and as such we were unable to verify the complaint. The next complaint received was then on 18/05/14 as stated in my original response.
We did not receive any further complaints after June 2014 in regard to the Man Building and therefore as far as we were aware the matter had been resolved.
A Noise Abatement Notice was not served on the squatters as we would not have been able to verify any names given, if indeed they would have given a name and it would have been unenforceable as it is extremely unlikely that we would have been able to take anybody to court who was squatting. The line taken was to pursue the owners of the building who then needed to evict the squatters and secure the premises, which they did; serving a Noise Abatement Notice would have had no effect on the owners as they were already taking the necessary steps to stop the problem.
Yours sincerely

Dear Ned Johnson
I am writing this email due to a FOI request I put in some time ago.
It has come to my attention that some of the information you have given me in incorrect and was wondering if you could comment on this.
In my FOI request you said that Crown Road information started on the 18/5/2014, but I have found newspaper information that this started much earlier than this.
I have a newspaper that is dated the 25/04/2014 which was printed after a 15-hour rave took place there on the 19/04/2014, which is much earlier than the 18/05/2014 as the date you gave me that this started.
http://www.enfieldindependent.co.uk/news/11172103.Residents fume over 15 hour rave /
And one that was in printed on 9 September 2014 a paper saying The MAN building, in Crown Road, on the junction with Southbury Road, Enfield, has also been used for illegal raves and parties in the last few months which these words would say the events was going on much later than June 2014 that you have given in the FOI request.
http://www.enfieldindependent.co.uk/news/11459487.Listed building wrecked by graffiti/
I still also cannot understand why an abatement notice order was not put in place due to the number of events that took place there. I do understand on the days of the events it could be classed as unsafe due to the amount of people, but this site was being squatted and there would have been far less people there during the weeks when these events were not going on. And cannot understand why an abatement notice order was not put in place during the time when these events were not going on.
On the 6th 07th and 08th June 2014 the council were aware an event was ongoing at Crown Road.
On the 6th 07th and 08th June 2014 the council were aware an event was ongoing at Progress way.
On the 08th June the council attended with police to Progress Way to serve paperwork this was not served to any persons within the site of Progress Way.
But if you were with police, which your team was why was paperwork not tried to be served at Crown Road site also as your team was aware off an event also going on there.

Dear Ms. Cordell,
In terms of the number of events there was one further rave that took place on 25th March 2013 at Progress Way, other than this occurrence I have provided you with the dates and locations of all the illegal raves/parties that are recorded on our database as well as all other data we hold that you requested. The rave on March 25th, 2013 was attended by the Out of Hours Noise Team, assistance was requested from the police, but they were unable to help on that occasion.
The events at Crown Road were over a period of several weeks not months, during which time we were in regular contact with the new site owners who worked to get the site secured and the power turned off. The Out of Hours Noise Team undertook observations of the noise during the event on May 31st/June 1st but did not visit the party as the team decided that it was unsafe to do so due to the nature and location of the event and provided information to the daytime officer who ensured the owners undertook the necessary works.
The complaints received on Sunday June 8th were all received after the council's Out of Hours Service had finished at 03:00 and therefore no response was possible.
The Out of Hours Team respond to all complaints received but will only visit a premises where it is safe for them to do so and in the case of illegal raves/parties quite often there are officer safety issues which prevent visits at night time during the event, unless police support can be gained. Following illegal raves/parties we do make every effort to get a building secured as soon as possible to prevent the same thing happening again.

Dear Ned Johnson
Thank you for the reply to the freedom of information act I put in.
I do however believe there is a lot of data that has been left out, so maybe I need to clarify the data that is being requested.

- To information is regarding Disused or abandoned buildings or any industrial estates buildings or open-air land. For the dates all of 2013 to date.
- This would include all data if there were occupiers/squatters in said building/parties/raves. This would include the dates these buildings/Disused or abandoned buildings/ or any industrial estates was first known to the Environment & Street Scene Department.
- All information would cover all wards boundaries for Enfield Council.

Information is also needed for some areas within the Enfield Council borough.
The information would cover if police were in attendance, if calls were made to the Environment & Street Scene Department by police, and any police officer information that the Environment & Street Scene Department holds about any police officer.
This information would also include any calls that were made from the Environment & Street Scene Department to police in relation to any Disused or abandoned buildings or any industrial estates buildings or open air land that the Environment & Street Scene Department felt could have a problem with.
There is also an issue with the information in your email

- 18/5/14: 3 calls after event
- 19/5/14: 6 calls after event
- 21/5/14: 1 call after event
- But have not given the date of the event itself, are the below layout ones was when events have taken place as it just has calls at the end of the dates could you please clarify
- 31/5/14: 2 calls
- 1/6/14: 6 calls

Also in your email it seems that there was more of a problem with crown road over some months but from how I am reading your email it seems no one ever attended from the Environment & Street Scene Department on any of the dates in your list can this also be clarified in more detail.
I know you have until the 10/03/2015 to supply the information I have asked for. But I do feel your email was very incomplete, I do hope that I have not got to wait 20 more days now as I need all the data by 10/03/2015 and I did ask for all information and I feel that has not been given.
Could you get back to me via email as to the time it will take to get all the information I have asked for within my request?

Subject: RE: RE FOI 11845 [SEC=UNCLASSIFIED]

Dear Ned Johnson,
Thank you for the reply email and the update.
I have other information due to investigations I have done and due to speaking to people within the area. That it was not just the one date in April 2014 there were events at Crown Road.
The dates I have been given that events took place at Crown Road are:
12th / 13th April 2014
19th / 20th April 2014 (confirmed)
26th / 27th April 2014
03rd / 04th May 2014
17th / 18th May 2014 (confirmed)
31st / 01st May and June 2014 (confirmed)
06th 07th 08th June 2014 (confirmed)
13th / 14th June 2014 (confirmed)
Some of these dates have already been given that events took place within the FOI I requested.
Also you say you did not serve a Noise Abatement Notice on the squatters / occupiers, as it would have had no benefit to do so as you would not have been able to take anyone to court, and I do understand that the council was working with the owners of the building to deal with this problem.
But I am sure if you had served a Noise Abatement Notice to the squatters / occupiers / Building, it would have covered not just to take someone to court. It would have covered the council to have seized sound equipment and due to this stopped the events far sooner with a Noise Abatement Notice in place on the building then not having served one at all.
I believe that is the reason a Noise Abatement Notice can be served on occupiers / Buildings under Environmental Protection Act 1990 section 80

Threats and intimidation (General)
Home visit to Ms Deborah Andrews flat. Attendees Dawn Allen TMO and CPN Bola Quadri
Home visit to Ms Andrews advised that her neighbour at number 109 has for the past few months harassed, intimidated, stalked her and made a life a complete misery. He continuously plays loud music, bangs on her ceiling and door alleging that she is monitoring his movements in his flat. She feels petrified by his presence and as a result refused to leave her flat for fear bumping into him on her way out. She has missed a few appointments with her social worker as a result, she has now been subjected to making home appointments pending the time this matter is resolved. She explained that they use to be acquaintances before the relationship went sour. She believes the whole problem started when he claimed the decoration in his flat was damaged as a result of a leak coming from her flat. She confirmed that she had a leak from her overflow a few months ago which has since been repaired but, the damage alleged had occurred.

She was on her way out to attend her appointment with her CPN when he apprehended her and threatened to kill her. She was pretty shaken from the incident that instead of attending her appointment, returned home immediately. She advised that she contacted the police but, wasn't taken seriously as they assumed, she was drunk at the time of the call. She advised that she wasn't in the list drunk but, just the way she spoke due to her condition. She still wasn't taken seriously and had to abandon the call. She found this very frustrating and advised that it was not the first time this would happen to her. Her CPN also confirmed her statement and expressed her dissatisfaction at the way she was treated. Ms Andrews felt completely let down by the police and became frightful for her safety especially, as she knows the perpetrators has shells in his flat. I observed in her flat that her floors were very creaky, I was made aware by Dawn that most of the flats in the block are like that. Unfortunately, the creakiness exacerbates the noise level in the flats and cause more problems than usual. I advised that I will contact the police to make further enquiries. I will also contact MHT to enquire if Mr Cordell is known to them. At some point the perpetrator will need to be interviewed and a warning letter issued on him. I will contact the repairs team and try to arrange a surveyor to visit her flat and see what assistance can be offered I further advised that her case will be investigated and an officer will get back to her to discuss further with her. Her CPN and TMO will be kept informed of updates Bola Quadri has already put in place a safeguard alert.

Hi Dolly,
Nick and I attended 113a while ago and spoke to the lady a while ago when she originally called Police. At the time she didn't want us to speak to her neighbour as things had got better. The lady handed us a letter about what had happened but none of it made any sense. We believe she was suffering from mental health issues. On another occasion we popped round to see her and she wouldn't come and speak to us so instead she spoke through her letterbox to us. The male at 109 - Simon Cordell who is causing the problems is very well known to Police and is also very anti Police. I know some Officers went around and spoke to him and things seemed to get better. After that we have had no further calls from the lady at 118.
We will try and get around to see her when were back on duty on Monday.
Kind Regards

Good afternoon Mark,
Could you kindly assist with this query please. Following reports of ASB by the above tenant, my colleague and I visited her this morning and were alarmed by the nature of her complaints. She has in the past few months being constantly harassed, intimidated, bullied, stalked and threatened to kill by her neighbour at 109.

As a result of his behaviour, she has become too scared to leave her flat for fear of what may happen to her. She is a vulnerable tenant who requires support from services.
However, the unsettling behaviour exhibited by number 109, has hindered her from attending her appointments and exacerbated her condition. At the moment, she feels very disorientated / agitated and will like the harassment to stop.
She advised that she had reported this to the police a few times but, wasn't taken seriously.
I will appreciate if you could stop over at 113 to reassure her that the matter is being dealt with and also to stop by 109 and advise him that you are aware of what is going on and the repercussions should it continue.
Thank you for your support and assistance

Good afternoon Louise,
Sorry I missed your call; I was at a meeting at the time. Called and left a message on your voice mail.
Ms Andrews suffers from a history of mental health; she is currently being supported by Bola Quadri Care-coordinator / CPN / Nurse Prescriber Psychosis Service Line
Barnet, Enfield & Haringey Mental Health NHS Trust / 58-60 Silver Street, Enfield EN1 3EP
She made complains about her neighbour at number 109, harassing, verbally abusing her, intimidating, shouting threatening to kill her. The mean concern here is that the perpetrator in question also suffers from mental health and is known to be very aggressive, violet and anti-police. He has on a few occasions threatened to kill her and petrified the life out of her.

It was on this basis that a decision was made to move her out immediately.
Hope the above information is useful.

Hi Louise,
Thanks for this - I'm pleased to hear you think Deborah is being properly supported and that she sounded better - she was in a right state when we spoke to her last.
Good news that it looks like she might be able to get help to move.
For the camera, we are very happy to come along for a visit. I've spoken to our Sgt and as we understand it the ideal course of action is to advise him to remove it in our presence, then if he refuses, I believe you can take it down and that should be fine so long as the camera itself is returned to Cordell. Let me know when your best days for it would be and I'll see when we can manage best.
Best wishes,
James

Hi James,
I spoke with Deborah Andrews this morning; the leak issue was sorted over the weekend this was from the flat above.
I do not know anything about Mr Cordell moving in two weeks' time, unless she is getting confused with his threat that he will get her in two weeks' time. Overall, I am concerned that Deborah is not managing and appears to be getting more confused the last few times I have spoken to her last week and today, she is also feeling that she needs further support by way of supported accommodation. I do agree with her as the level of support that St John of God provide is high and the dependency with other agencies is also constant and not something that housing or myself could provide long term.
Deborah was much calmer this morning and I reassured he that if she has any concerns to contact me.
With regard to the camera not he is not allowed it to be train on anything else other that his front door. Probably means I will need to visit him to get this sorted. I may request your assistance with this I don't really fancy seeing him on my own!! (sorry)

Hi Louise,
I hope you are well.
Since 15/01/2016 we have had further calls from Debra Andrew relating to the issues she has been having with Simon Cordell.
Given the nature of the calls, we visited Debra yesterday for a reassurance visit. She said that there has been a leak in the building causing 'flooding' in both her flat and Cordell's flat, and Cordell has been making accusations relating to it. She said that she believes Cordell is leaving his flat in two weeks, which I hadn't heard, but said I would look into it - do you know if that's true by any chance?
Debra said that if Cordell does not leave, she wants to leave her flat and move somewhere else herself.
While at the address we also noticed that Cordell has now installed a CCTV camera which is placed at the top of the internal communal door leading to flats 109 and 111, facing towards the main door of the block. I am unsure as to whether he's allowed to do this and shall look into it, but just wanted to let you know!
Best wishes,
James

Dear Sarah,
Thank you for your email and updated information. This incident yesterday J am assuming that this is a different incident from 15/1/16 where Mr Cordell approached Ms De Polla? Please can you confirm if this was reported to the police, and if this was not why? This is harassment and can be treated and reported as a criminal offence. Yes, this is a separate incident to 15.01.2016. The police were not called as a crime had not been committed and Barbara was able to walk away without Mr Cordell trying to prevent her or following her.
In relation to Deborah please can you confirm if your concerns for her welfare are being reported back to the Mental health team prior to this email (I do appreciate that Bola has been on leave for a few weeks) Yvonne has copied Bola into the same communication as yourself and expressed concerns. Debbie has also contacted Bola. I am receiving if not daily calls from Deborah or every other day, with her explaining to me that she feels she is not coping at all, she is looking to me for reassurance. Deborah has expressed that she is not managing independent living and would like to go back into supported accommodation. Supported living is something Bola would need to arrange. Can you confirm that you have reported your concerns for Debbie's welfare to the mental health team?
Please can you confirm if she has expressed this to staff at St John of god? Also, please can you confirm if you feel that Deborah is not coping at present. If so, has this been reported to the mental health team?
As you are aware, Debbie has said that she is not coping, and I understand that you are in the process of providing a report in order to facilitate Debbie to move. Can you confirm that this has been completed and if so, what the next step of the process is and how long this is likely to take?
Also given the current hours that currently allocated to Deborah if this is suitable in this situation for her need? If I recall this was expressed at a SOVA meeting that this should be extended as her needs are becoming greater? We are requested and funded to provide 6 hours support per week (3 hours twice a week for shopping). Bola is responsible for increasing the care package if Debbie is assessed as needing more support. With regard to the Safeguarding plan I do feel that a mental health strategy meeting needs to take place as issues beyond our control will also have a direct impact on the wellbeing of Deborah. I am raising this directly with George Benyure Bolas manger. My understanding was that Bola had already raised a safeguarding alert.

Hi Louise
I am extremely concerned about Debbie Andrewes neighbour and the increased risk to the support workers and indeed Debbie, who, as you are aware is unable to leave her own home unescorted.
Yesterday it was reported to me that the neighbour approached Barbara de Polla as she entered the communal door, he was very aggressive and began shouting at her saying, you should not be coming here, she is an alcoholic, you shouldn't take her out anywhere etc." Barbara said that she did not want to talk about it and walked away from him, luckily, he did not follow her.
In relation to Debbie is safety, I strongly feel that it is only a matter of time before something serious or even fatal happens to her. As you are aware, the neighbour has a dog, which appears to be a Staffordshire bull terrier which he allows to roam free in the communal area which is highly intimidating and potentially very dangerous.

Please can you clarify the interim safeguarding protection plan and timescale as to when Debbie will be moved to a place of safety.
I have completed an internal incident form and unfortunately, if another incident occurs, I will have no other option but to temporarily withdraw our service, which will put Debbie in a situation where she is even more at risk.
I look forward to hearing from you at your earliest convenience.

Dear George & Bola,
Thank you for your email, I have only copied you both as there is other information on Mr Cordell that urgently needs to be considered.
I received an email informing me that a mental health warrant had been granted for Mr Cordell. This will cause a greater issue especially if he is released back into the community. My fear is that this will indirectly cause further distress for Deborah. A plan needs to be put in place with full considerations.
Please can an urgent mental health strategy meeting be held regarding Deborah Andrews, given the above information and the urgent need for full consideration in this case due to the complex needs and issues with both clients, who are known to your services and tenants of Enfield Council.
Deborah is contacting me if not daily every other day these calls are coming through at all different days and times. She is informing me that she is not coping with everything and wants to go back into supported accommodation, she feels extremely frightened and vulnerable. I must confirm that its Deborah stating that she is not coping as I am not in a position to make these decisions. When I speak with Deborah asking if she is attending her appointments, she states that" it js a quick jab, in and out no one speaks with you.
With regards to the management transfer this is still being prepared and waiting to be heard by panel, I am waiting to hear the next available date for this. It was explained when I suggested this action may be a route forward that this is not a quick process and all elements need to be considered. It is not necessary for Ms Andrews to currently go into emergency accommodation either. This case will be assisted by moving Ms Andrews; however, this may not resolve all of the concerns or the overall future welfare of Ms Andrews.
Transferring Ms Andrews into another independent accommodation without fully assessing her current needs and the full support required should be considered before this happens. As moving her may not solve all of Deborah Andrews concerns. She is only going out when SJOG are visiting, however they are only allocated 3 hours per week. More recommendations need to be put forward to provide a comprehensive package to support

A Home MHA assessment got completed and Simon got assessed as to be not detainable.
This is the wrong date in the report?
On the 02/02/2016 is when they used the section 135 warrant to come to my home with police. On this date I been at home and had no visit of the medical team, as for this was the date when the section 135 of the Mental Health Act
The Beeping sound starts of interview: --
"Muttering"
Simon: all of your people are not coming into my house.
"Muttering"
Mother: Three two doctors and one social worker.
"Muttering" "Continues."

Mother: How do I turn this television down?
Katie: I am not sure.
Mother: Simon it will not work out when you are talking outside.
Katie: Simon stops shouting.
Simon: I want to go through all the corruption.
Katie: Simon, Simon.
Katie: Mother! how do you shut the door.
Mother: Shut what door.
Katie: That door.
Mother: Oh, hold on, how do you turn this down I am turning it up.
Simon: How are you all doing welcome to my home, I am not too happy.
Sam: There is a few of us, I am afraid!
Simon: I understand.
Sam: Where is the best place for us all to sit?
Simon: Take a seat anywhere you are all welcome to sit anywhere there are seats available for everybody.
Sam: Then we will explain why we are here.
Simon: I am not impressed with your "referring to Elan" I see you and meet you before and I see what happened to you before.
Mother: How many people are coming in what's needed, to make this assessment.
Mother: The police said that they will wait outside.
Unheard voice:
Katie: No, he didn't.
Mother: No, he didn't he said that the police would wait outside.
Sam: OK.
Simon: I am not impressed with how use lot are using your Mental Health powers to obtain, a warrant to come into my house under false allegations, stating of facts that are not true to get it.
Simon: you may take a seat anywhere you are welcomed in now and like to take a seat.
Sam: OK.
Simon: You got welcomed in now like I would rather you lot take a sit rather than I take a sit.
Sam: OK.
Simon: Take a sit, sir please.
Mother: No Sam, can I talk to you for a moment you said the police was waiting outside.
Simon: The police are not coming into these premises, you're not coming in, and you can get out.
Sam: Simon.
Simon: It's a breach of conditions.
Simon: I am explaining to the police.
Katie: You will get nowhere.
Simon: Because right now I got conflicting cases going on with the police, and I do not want that having an effect on the ongoing because of this.
Mother: His got serious issues with police cases at the moment.
Sam: Could we leave the door ajar and have the police at the entrance, is that OK with the police officers.
Sam: Yes, just leave the door open with the police not coming in, OK.
Katie: His exaggerated because of the police.
Simon: That is correct in practice and that is how it should be, that is professional.
Sam: OK.
Sam: OK.
Sam: OK, sure.
Sam: So, Simon the reason that we're here today is that concerns have go raised.
"Noise in the background made."
Sam: Oh, what's that?
Katie: Oh, it's all right, it's part of the printer.
Sam: OK.
Sam: A bout your Mental Health and we have gotten asked to carry out something called a Mental Health Act assessment, so were her to decide whether or not you need to get detained.
Simon: Section 1 or 2 or 3 and maybe a 4 of the acts in an Emergency.
Sam: Err yes.
Simon: I understand your procedures.
Sam: In order for that to happen and we have decided nothing yet that is why we want to talk to you.
Simon: There is no way that you can decide without being able to make an assessment off the case.
Sam: Let's just explain the legal situation first thing you can do you hip hop or so myself.

Mother: Let him, just talk to Simon.
Sam: Two Doctors so there is: - Doctor: Albazaz
Sam: and~ Doctor: Amin
Simon: How you both doing.
Sam: For in order for the section to go ahead, they would both need to make medical recommendations and I would need to agree.
Sam: Err but we really just want to find out about how your mental health is two days.
Mother: So, who are all the other people?
Sam: They are from.
Aman: I am from the Mental Health team.
Simon: So, I met you the other day, and I spoke to you on the phone and I got through, I got large concerns about yourself.
Alena: Yes OK.
Simon: Because this is how I will prove that you put wrong statements of facts in to get this yesterday I spoke to you and I spoke to you two days ago and did I not say to you and you said to me, at 14:22 I got you on the recording and I will play your voice to you in a second.
Mother: You do not need to.
Simon: And I would like you to honest did I not say to you that you got allowed access to my house whenever you would like on the phone last week and the week before.
Alena: Yep yes and that is in your notes.
Simon: So how has this court order got obtained under the grounds that I have not given you access, the form got filled in and when you fill that form in to get this court order it's supposed to get filled in their statement off facts of truth and that gets said under oath to a judge, someone has filled that incorrectly and you have just, absolutely, admitted that I have said that it's OK for you as I have given you permission to come into my house now.
Simon: So that court order is a breach of violations.
Sam: That is the other thing we got a warrant to come into the flat.
Simon: No, the warrant is self is valid by a judge, but the fulfilment of that warrant is incorrect.
Simon: Am I correct in practice, madam.
Alena: You have said that I can come to the house the issue is seeing the doctors.
Doctor Xxxx: We came last week, and you did not allow us in.
Mother: Hold on can I, say something.
Simon: May I say some think to you two days before that before you attended my premises for a month prior, I had a gentleman phoning me called Goodie, I was speaking to him and we were making good relations.
I liked this person attitude I liked how he was talking to me, and I thought maybe this person might help me prospect and go forward in my life, so we were building good relationships.
we arrange a meeting for him to come around to my address his says OK his coming round his going to bring a friend a colleague, I said that is perfect he said his bringing Sandra with him.
They both coming to this house and I invite them into my home.
It was tidy and it smelt clean they check the fridge and that then they took a sit down on the chair.
Sandra sits where your sitting today yes Allan two minutes later her phone rings she gets up and she walks into the hall way and then she is on the phone in the corridor yes, this door is slightly, left ajar and Goodie took a seat here.
I talk to Goodie and I showed him my business plan and I started to show him things that I am doing in my life and things like how I am going to help this community and I am going to be a good tenant and resident of the United Kingdom, he seemed happy and said that he was amazed, I am amazed Simon, to see the good things that you are doing and to see all the management systems and to see all the files that you have here.
Five minutes later the woman walks back in and she goes Goodie we got to leave, so she stops the interview that me and Goodie are having and they both leave the premises.
Two days later Goodie says to me, hold on before he left, I shook hands with Goodies and Goodie said: when I get back in four weeks, I am going to be your case handler Simon.
I am going on holiday and in four weeks, I am going to come back and I am going to visit you: in four weeks, I said Goodie that will be nice to see you again in for weeks, yes, OK.
Simon: Two days later you're self-Alan and another woman named Sandra turned back up to my front door unannounced, the woman who was so rude, when she come in and cut our interview.
Katie: No notification at all.
Simon: She writes no notes down, she took no information.
Katie: Why did you not contact him?
Simon: now can I speak to yourself and I explained to you lot at the door that I do not feel comfortable that you have turned up un-announced, I have got a visitor coming to my house and I do not want them to know my personal life, right now I am trying to make a good impression of myself to people and not show them that you are here, this could be a business prospect or a business chance I might have in the future, so you lot might tarnish that chance for me by being here, so please can you make your self-announced when you're turning up to my address, which is fair and you took offence and you threatened me I have you on camera as well because I explained to you that you was on it and I said to you, you said to me, that I will get an order and I will bring the police and come into your house I said you do not have the right to use your Mental Health powers like that.

Doctor Xxxx: I think I explained to you that where not disputed to be the facts I told you if you not allow us access.
Mother: But he has allowed you access his allowed two sets of Doctors Doctor Xxxx: Not too me.
Mother: No but he allowed two doctors.
Simon: No let him speak, let him speak because I will listen to him no go on sir.
Simon: Sorry mother.
Katie: No stop.
Doctor Xxxx: I told him that I am the independent psychiatrist, and we were there to carry out a Mental Health assessment and you insist that we only talk to you outside and you did not want us to come in so we told you.
Katie: So, should you not notify him beforehand.
Doctor Xxxx: with the mental health assessment, we do not need, I do not have to.
Simon: They do not have to the amp do not have to do that because they're two separate bodies.
Sam: Si I think if you got complaints about what has happened up till now that is fine and you can make that.
Simon: Procedures.
Simon: No, it's not just complaints it's you are in my house right now under a statement that this woman has clearly, just said to you has gotten filled out wrongly, and being handed to a judge to breech my private and family life.
Sam: Well we have used the warrant to gain access today.
Simon: Yes, but she is admitting that that warrant has been full filled wrong.
Simon: She is admitting they filled it out wrong so to breach my Human Rights.
Sam: What I would like to focus on is your Mental Health at the moment and if you need any help with your Mental Health and what is going on with you, can we talk about that for now Simon?
Simon: Sir I am happy to talk with you, sir I am happy to talk with you, I am happy to talk to a degree with yourself and I am just going to go this with you.
Sam: Because how what is your own view about your Mental Health.
Simon: My own, Health, my Mental Health, I am of good Health right now I am of good mind, body and soul, right now if you would like to see the work that I am doing I will show you what I am committing myself to every single day I can show you what I do myself, I feel an offence with the way things have gone because I was building good relationships with Goodie there two separate departments and one does need to refer the other one to yourself to come into this house Sharon has not been.
Mother: Sharon,
Simon: Sharon.
Mother: No Sandra, sorry.
Simon: Has not had permission of the department of Simon Clark, whom is the manager and Debbie is the manager of the other one they did not have the correct protocols in place for Sandra to be able to go and get this court order, but even low I will continue with what you are saying let's just forget about that it's finished.
Sam: At the moment you are talking quiet, fast, I know there is a lot of strangers that have come into your home and it must be a difficult situation.
Simon: I will speak fast.
Sam: Is this how you.
Katie: He is frustrated.
Sam: But is that, is this the usual self?
Simon: This is how I will find myself and I will explain my self, if I find somebody who is of a higher profession and gets paid the living wage the same as you do when and got the education took to be able to look after myself or another member of the public I respect you the amount of time it would have taken you to do that and the hardship it would take for you to get that stage so I know that I am educating myself and that I am of a lower education to you so I believe that you should be able to understand and keep up the pace your time is valuable to yourself and valuable too me, so I want to use that to its most efficient as possible if you want me to slow down and speak to you slower.
Sam: If you could slow down because it would also show us that ability to be calm because that would make us be able to understand your mental Health at the moment.
Mother: Yes, but he speaks fast.
Sam: He always speaks very, so this is Simon's usually personality.
Mother: Yes, he speaks fast.
Simon: I might be a bit happier in general.

Sam: Yes, this is a difficult situation right now I appreciate that right now.
Simon: What is a difficult situation right now?
Sam: The Mental Health assessment.
Simon: The only difficult situation is the that this is being paired off on too me, in such a way, when I am sitting here right now every day working my hardest righting files to look after every other member of the public and I am being treated, differently, I am an equal to your self's and we are all equals.
Doctor: We can understand all that we can understand all of that, but there Is concern raised about you that is why we are here, to assess the situation to see how and if you need any help or if we could offer any help, that is the reason too, why we are here.
Sam: How is your sleep at the moment?
Sam: Sorry to interrupt you Doctor.
Doctor Xxxx: So, it is because there is concern about you and that is why we are here.
Sam: How is your sleep at the moment?
Simon: But why are their concerns about me at the moment if I have not spoken to my doctor in years and use lot are the only people that seem to have that concern and that concern got based on this gentleman who has come to my door and I never gave him access.
Doctor Xxxx: No before that.
Simon: Before that, the only other concern was that you lot came here on the 8th December 2016 and there was no issue there I explained to your self's and everybody got comfortable and you all left me and if there was a concern, you would have raised that yourself s as professionals.
Doctor Xxxx: Tell us about your neighbours.
Simon: My neighbours I got a letter of every single one of my neighbours here right now I got a letter from my next doors I got a letter of them; I got a letter of every person here now saying that I have lived here for eleven years.
Doctor Xxxx: Please allow me to talk to please when we talk, listen to us and we will do the same to you.
Simon: Yes, for sure year for sure OK.
Doctor Xxxx: Yes please, yes so there is concern about you regarding the neighbours you feel that the neighbours are harassing you.
Simon: Who?
Mother: No that is totally, wrong.
Sam: I think it would be better if you let Simon talk.
Doctor: No let him sort this.
Simon: The only issue that I have had with my upstairs neighbour.
Doctor: No please let him talk.
Simon: The only issue that I have had with my upstairs neighbour is that she is under your team of assessments, she accepts money from you and she is supposed to have a network in place such as your self's, now I have been living in this house for eleven years she moved in here seven years ago, when she come here she was already an alcoholic the alcoholism takes perception takes over the perception off her Metal Heath she was paying for herself to be drunk, you lot have got duty of care of her, she would not get a liver transplant in them situations that is why she does not really get much help at the age she is of your self's I expect because there is other people who deserve the chance a lot more than what she does.
Sam: Have you had any difficulties with her.
Simon: Now what she does I have not had no conflicts with her.
Sam: OK.
Simon: But I have always helped her I pick her up and take her shopping when she would have her stuff coming in and I would lift her shopping upstairs, I would carry it up to her house I would see her and I would always be polite to her and say hello, blah, blah, blah I would lend her a £10.00 I would never let her In this house because I could feel something was wrong with her yet.
Katie: She used to knock and ask for money.
Simon: She used to knock on my door every day knocking, knocking, and knocking.
Simon: My last girlfriend used to be so paranoid for 13 years because of the amount she was knocking on my door and she is another female but I would never let this woman into my house I would keep her at arm's length I knew that she was an alcoholic so I would keep a few beers in my fridge for her I do not drink alcoholic myself I am t a total.
Doctor: Have you ever had any conflict with her have you ever threaten her.
Simon: Why would I threaten her I would never threaten another person.
Doctor Xxxx: Never.
Simon: I got a letter of her right here that I am the best neighbour in the world I will show you them.
Doctor Xxxx: Were.
Katie: She is causing problems.
Mother: He is having problems with her in the sense that.
Simon: She won't leave me alone.

Mother: basically, she won't leave him alone.
Simon: She keeps stalking me under the criminal justice act 1997.
Mother: She keeps putting the letters through his letter box.
Doctor: OK.
Mother: And basically, I have been trying to deal with the council with that and there is a year's worth of emails.
Simon: And she is always drunk.
Doctor: What is the content off the letters?
Simon: I have some here, right now loads of them.
Mother: she is sorry, she is sorry for her behaviour of keep on banning.
Simon: No, I am total I like to look after other people.
Doctor Xxxx: We understand that in the past we have had some anti depression with depression and you.
Simon: I do not think that there is a person in this room that has not felt depression once before in their life's them self's.
Sam: No, No that's right.
Doctor Xxxx: No, no talking about Mental Health issues, so you had depression.
Simon: When I was a kid, I hard upbringing in North London, Enfield but as you can see here right now, I have worked hard to keep myself up a float.
Doctor Xxxx: Yes, yes, that is good.
Simon: I keep myself clean I keep myself with everything I need.
Doctor Xxxx: Have you taken any medication?
Simon: I got no need to take any medication.
Doctor Xxxx: Not in the past Simon.
Simon: No, I have never taken medication.
Doctor: Have you ever taken any medication?
Doctor: How was your desperation cured?
Simon: How was my depression cured, I meet and let the beautiful people in my life and they have helped me along the road and every time somebody else might go somebody else new might come along and help me.
Doctor: And has recently, had you been feeling low in mood and depressed?
Simon: Recently, I wanted to get my civil liberties back because they have got tarnished by the police because a section 63 what to a degree what they done is set me up for being my friends to black boys funny and I then knew that I could have not committed the crimes that I am being accused me of and another police officer knows this and he is coming as a witness a superintendent is coming to talk.
"shh"
Doctor Xxxx: What crime are they.
Mother: We do not want the police to hear.
Simon: Listen there are serious issues there in a lot of trouble.
Sam: I mean we are not here to talk about all the criminal aspects, we are really concerned about are your mental.
Simon: I am Mental.
Sam: What I want to do.
Simon: I am defiantly, not mental.
Sam: Questions that we ask everybody to help us understand your mental Health at the moment do you, have you got any racing thoughts do you find your thoughts going very quick.
Simon: No all I do is working every day on my business plan if you want to see that I will show you.
Sam: that is fine and answer, their questions afterwards.
Sam: How is your sleep at the moment Simon?
Simon: I sleep perfectly, 8 hours a day some time nine hours a day and that is at the most and I stay up latter in the night, I work better on the computer at night times when It is quite and everybody is not making so much noise and there is not so much banging about because I am doing a lot of writing so I stay up late sometimes it can change I can stay up latter at nights but I then come back to the day time and make sure that I manage and everything my life so to make sure that all my paper work and ever think Is In correct order, like what I need to do, then I can go back to my place of work my place of comfort which is there sometimes?
Doctor: Are you eating?
Simon: yes, I am eating.
Sam: how is your appetite are you eating OK and any I know you said.
Simon: I am a size 36 jeans.
Sam: Are you feeling any low mood at all?
Simon: I want my civil liberties given back to me.
Mother: A bit stressed, but it’s due to the court case.

Sam: OK.
Simon: A Section 63 should not be, I basally won my case in court and I won it In court and the judge knew I won it because the facts of the matter are a section 63 you must have trespass for it's a key element for that law to exist, I do not have tress pass on my criminal record so I explained this to the judge so she said do you know what you are right, then what she done, was said: do you know what you are right then what she has done I got the transcripts what she done was breaching my human rights she told me that there is no difference between private air and public air.
Mother: No know what she actual turned around her exact words was that, basically, the applicant the case got based on illegality by the applicant.
Simon: They darkened my name in the newspaper.
Mother: Yes.
Sam: Yes.
Sam: I just popped out to the police officers to let them know everything is all right so the only other thing, sorry to Interrupt that so the only other thing have you threatened any cops so I know you're stressed at the moment has it ever affected you to the point, where you have felt life Is not worth living or other things.
Simon: No, I want to continue with all the things that I am writing, I when I show you what I am writing.
Sam: OK.
Simon: Wait a second, I got to wait for my computer to turn on.
Simon: Then you might be able to understand me.
Simon: This Is all the things I have been doing in my life I have been building a festival I been building my constitution, learning everything that I need like getting all the systems that I need In place the health and safety files all of my food safety all the files I need to look after any other person all the support programs that are in the areas and stuff like that that can get done every think is all categorized then I got all like adult and youths files and all my continuance plan I got everything that I need I got all my disability rights and all the rest of it.
Doctor Xxxx: Can you tell us exactly, what your work is all about.
Simon: I built a festival, and I built err a website and that website is going too; basically.
Simon: Built a company that I can manage that is a worth it and I will be able to.
Katie: Is an entertainment company.
Simon: Yes, it's an entertainment company.
Simon: But at the same time; I built a charity; basically, I got the business directory and what I have done is written a constitution I wrote the memorandum of articles and articles of association so what I can do is define different people in different areas so rather than just having a community hall where someone like a government would sponsor to the public or to somebody a team of people of beatifies, so I made my website so I can have six different beatifies "Directors" in different places across London.
Doctor: How long have you been building?
Simon: I have been building my company for about 10 years in total it takes time like the website.
Mother: Well his been building it.
Doctor: Hold on please.
Doctor Xxxx: How have you managed to get any jobs.
Simon: What do you mean within the website?
Doctor Xxxx: Anywhere.
Simon: Yes, I have had jobs, but it was in slow little pieces and I got shut down by the police as I explained, in the transcripts I got a judge saying to me, that I have to have permission to have private party's like in my house.
Katie: It's an addiction.
Mother: I am sorry does anyone want a cup of tea or something.
Sam: And team: No were fine thanks.
Doctor: What do you do with the big printers?
Simon: There for part of the company.
Simon: There for graphics.
Simon: I will show you now.
Katie: You know the sign writing that you `put on vans.
Sam: Oh yes, I know.
Sam: It for poster's and things.
Katie: yes.
Mother: Yes, posters and flyers and all that type of thing.
Sam: And like things for a festival.
Katie: Yes.
Mother: Yes.
Sam: OK.
Simon: No what It for is I got my catering trailer and so forth, which is going into my catalogue and is over there.
Sam: yes.

Simon: There are loads of sections and it is a bit hard to through with you.
Simon: You can have a look at it yourself; this is what I have been doing.
Sam: Hmm.
Simon: This is what I have been doing, this is the formation of the company which has to go to the commissioner and the director for CIC Company, now what this does is show how I am going to register the company and my interest in the company and how I would do it.
Simon: This is a description off company in which it intends to help.
Simon: Too Smooth's business directory it is a CIC Community Interest Company Association representing residents living in the whole of the United Kingdom and those who are signed as a member to its online functions, this got achieved by governing its members who will get signed into the use of the Too Smooth Business Directory and form. Too Smooth Business Directory gets hosted within the World Wide Web.
Simon: I will show you it I got a business directory, and I got my own LTD company section, what I will do is donate the business directory section to 6 directors.
Doctor Xxxx: So, what your company can do is help people in the whole of the United Kingdom and those who are signed a member to it functions.
Simon: Yes, that is correct.
Doctor: So, who gave you the authority to do such a thing?
Simon: Who gave me the authority?
Simon: Who gave me the authority if I own my own building it's up to me, if I want to sponsor it, if I wanted to sponsor you some think I got the right to sponsor it if I own it is up to me.
Simon: I own my own website I built the code behind my own website.
Doctor Xxxx: No sorry I am just asking you how you can delusion that you can represent the residents of the whole United Kingdom.
Simon: What it does what you can yes this is the form that you can have I will show you quickly, now yes what you have to do is have to fill out this form here, now what I am doing is letting six other people help manage my company. Now normally, you would have them six people defined in one area which would be just this area but because I got the internet and I am governing the internet I can have six separate directors one for this borough one for this estate one up in south, then one there and that means that there all managers in different areas, so that makes it so that I have a constitution and defined what sections I want, because I am not governing just one building like the old community halls used to do I have done the whole of the United Kingdom.
Simon: So now I got six people that are all directors that will all have access to a section of my business directory now what they have is they have the power to give the rest of the residents on the estates a login now they can all long in and it has a face book link and the rest and they can click on that to the Donor cause to be a Donor to any cause selected so one person say there is 33 boroughs in the surrounding areas I would have 6 of the boroughs that are company directors yes so this will be one my mum would hopefully be one I would be one for these estates and there would be another one for another area and another one for another area and they will all have log-ins.
Sam: So, it is a way of expanding your business.
Simon: No, it's not a way of expanding my business what it does is expand a Business in the Community, not for myself. because what I do is give this to beneficial which is the commissioner of charity's for England and Wales, this is who I am writing this to now asking him or her and showing them this is my proposal to you this is what I built and this is how I want to help people and with this I will be one of the first people to govern the internet and I will sponsor my business directory to the people and that is how I move on.
Doctor: And then what is the benefit of this business of the people.
Simon: I will show you what they can do this is coming along and they can add a business card to a business card directory so that they can show other people their business new starting business and existing company profiles.
Mother: Here let me show you the website.
Simon: Why just let me just do what I am doing for a sec.
Mother: Then you can show them the business directory.
Simon: Look if you would like to take a read through it, but it is not something that will take five minutes, it has taken a lot of work and a lifetime of work at that, so to be able to build it for the people exactly, how I want it done.
I am rewriting Glastonbury and others management system' and this means I am looking at the big people behind me and how they archived what they wanted to achieve I am achieving exactly, the same goals, but I am just doing it today in today's modern world and that is it.
Sam: You mentioned before that before all of this happened that you were getting on well with Goodie is that some correct Simon, how would you be if you did not go the hospital today, would you get prepared to meet with Goodie again?
Simon: If I did not go to hospital.
Simon: Well year I would be happy to meet Goodie again but it depends under what grounds there is no reason for me to worry about meeting him over than the fact being that I am just a good person doing the correct things.
Katie: Is he not on leave at the moment.
Woman: In the background: Yes.

Sam: Yes, I understand Goodie is on leave at the moment.
Mother: He is on leave.
Mother: He has already agreed to meet Goodie again.
Sam: OK
Simon: "Referring to the doctor" If you would like to read a bit more sir, you just seem real interested and I love it when people are interested in my work yet.
Sam: I am just going outside to see how the police are.
Mother: If you show him the website.
Simon: He would, probably, understand a bit more.
Simon: Have you seen the website before?
Katie: No one would.
Simon: OK, I will show the website now.
Katie: Basically, you can hire out sound equipment.
Doctor: So why have the police stopped him.
Mother: and what he wants to do is community events, he has done a couple in 2013, like he has done Ponders End festival with the council he done, Lock to Lock.
Simon: what I own at present is an LTD company which Is Too Smooth Ltd, which is my Hire of provisions company now what I want to do is keep Too Smooth Ltd as an umbrella company I want to be able to maintain my limited foundation under that and manage a charity in co-Hurst it Is for the community, what they can do is advertise in the business directory its like118 but It is a digital business directory.
Doctor: So, the charity is a business directory.
Simon: Yes, that is what it is.
Simon: And what they can do is you can come along and advertise your business, what you would do is set fee and that money will go to a chatty bar at the top and It goes to the local community.
Simon: This is another folder that I have built this is a charity that I have been building.
Simon: And this is also what I have been building for Bliss a sponsored walk that I have been building for a company called Dem's working alongside Bliss.
Simon: "Referring to another binder".
Sam: Simon I just wanted to ask you a few more and I know its 100 questions and you got all these strange people in your living room, but if I could ask you a few more questions, do you?
ever hear voices when no one is around.
Simon: No.
Sam: And the police I know you got these ongoing court cases and I do not want you to talk about the specifics of them, but do you think the police have a kind of conspiracy going or something going on with the police:
Simon: I will show you one or two things that are going on at the moment.
Simon: These are the letters going on with Debbie I will go through a couple off them with you so you can see a bit off everything that we have talked about.
Simon: Take a look at this "I show letters of Debbie."
Mother: Keep your voice down Simon.
Simon: The National call centre is a million-pound centre, yet and Met cc time stamps can't go backwards. For other start what colour am I, can every one answer me what colour am I mixed race would everyone agree that I am mixed race or light skin for a start year now I would like to show you one little snip lit, here this is a 999 call.
Mother: Sh.
Simon: This is a 999 call, and this is what I have got accused of, caller states on the day there were about 20 people pulling into this estate, I was in this house on this date yet I could never have done it, I could never have done It, I have not even done a house party for nothing for years, caller looks like they're planning to an illegal rave, caller states they have brought in alcohol and carrying decks, caller states they are carrying box's.
Katie: Who's that at the door?
Mother: I am just doing it because he is talking about the court case.
Katie: His not doing anything wrong.
Simon: Please stop for a Sec.
Simon: Caller states he can see them bring boxes into the building and states there defiantly all there.
Simon: Caller states they are all males and females and are all white people.
Katie: They're trying to listen to you outside.
Mother: They're coming in and they can hear him.
Simon: All white people.
Mother: You're trying to hear what he is saying and talking about his accepting a court case.
Doctor Xxxx: Yes, that is bad.
Simon: So that is impossible for me to have done as I am mixed race.
Simon: So that is one bad quite think yes but let me go to something else that is even worse that is a bigger problem yet.

Sam: I would Amal your part of the team could Goodie come.
Amal: It could be the way Goodie could come here or you could come to them.
Simon: Then what does this do this tarnishes my medical record, then when people what to see me looking after other people in life, it looks dead, Because right now I got the cleanest name in the world apart from the police darkening my name in on the website to which I have not because I have the transcripts I will prove that in a couple of weeks.
Sam: But Simon it won't all this is.
Simon: but I will have a clean name again, and I do not want my name on no mental health charts.
Sam: But.
Simon: It won't all this is.
Sam: There is a difference between people carrying out an assessment to see if they have a Mental Health problem.
Simon: Yes, but this is an assessment right now.
Sam: Yes, this is an assessment.
Simon: But what we are talking about is as if I have a problem and now you want me to go to meetings.
Sam: No but to have a proper understanding is whether or not, you got the illness.
I need to see you a few times and for you to see a doctor.
Simon: Do you understand what that would do to your career if someone were to do that to you right now saying that, would put you under if someone come along and done that to you and your living, right now her then that would tarnish the rest of your career
Sam: Unnecessary Simon because there is a difference between.
Simon: I am working hard.
Sam: I can see you have a really strong business face. What is there a difference between you being assessed and people cheeking that you are OK?
Simon: But it will not be the same as every time you have already done this. Same: No all I am saying is that is a few, perhaps have a meeting with one off the doctors in Goodies team.
Simon: Why would you want that from me?
Sam: Because doctors have a Pacific skill to do a proper further assessment.
Simon: Well I feel that is what you done today, and you know that you are intelligent and you know that you will leave me.
Sam: Well but I think it.
Simon: And you will know that I am healthy as anything.
Sam: Well I just think that tit is just not in you want, it will be in a period of times over a period of time.
Simon: So, you say I need another assessment then another one in a few months, what you're telling me is that it will not tarnish the rest of my life.
Sam: No because it may not be.
Simon: So, I will not get my medical record and it going to say Simon should not look after 50 kids today because his slightly, mentally, ill.
Doctor: Simon.
Sam: Simon is not having a diagnosis which has some different thought no one was diagnosing you with any mental illness at this point there has been concerns raised so it is just a matter of people wanting to do a further assessment and this is part of it and what I think we would like to do after today is for you to see someone.
Simon: I will take your advice for a little while.
Simon: As long as you're not sectioning me, and you are not a doctor.
Doctor: Simon, Simon because of all the things like this you could get shot up again "Muttering" from the services if the team follow you and see you for a couple I do not know for how long.
Sam: If you do not see people and they have just got these concerns the people will just worry about you.
Simon: But there is no reason to worry about me.
Sam: Well it is just because they haven't had the chance the opportunity to do a report and assessment.
Simon: I got my court case coming up soon and I cannot wait to prove my innocents and then finish the rest of what I am doing and put every one right once justice gets done, I will be happier more than I am.
Doctor: So, this is it you are most likely most likely most likely you will get discharged at the end of this if they cannot prove that you are mentally, ill.
Sam: Health services in the future, they can have a look and they will receive a copy of the assessment OK, what I need to do is just have a quick chat.
Katie: His had no problems in his life.
Simon: Yes, I have had no problems in my whole life and I am 35 years old.
Sam: That is fine.
Katie: It is just how everyone going about it if you go about it the wrong way you will get defensive and that has happened.

Sam: Yes, I can understand that people coming into your room with some really negative issues from mental Health services.
Katie: It is not just that.
Sam: OK.
Katie: It is not just that this guy has gone mad.
Katie: It was unnecessary to bring all the police today to be honest.
Sam: I know well, I walked into this situation for the first time today.
Katie: There dread, so you know no previous.
Sam: Previous.
Sam: What I would like to do is just have a quick word outside with the doctors just too quickly, decide what we want to do and come in and let you know which will take a couple of minutes
OK.
Sam: OK.
Sam: Simon we are just going to pop outside with the doctors for a couple of minutes and then we will come back and let you know the outcome of the Mental Health assessment OK.
Simon: You have left your bag here.
Sam: I am coming back in I am not leaving it, but you can hang on to it, I am sure it will stay safe here.
Doctor: Have you been out on your motorbike?
Simon: No not for a little while now.
Mother: No, he has not been using it.
Simon: I have just been staying indoors and relaxing for a little while, but I have kept it as an asset to be able to sell when I need to make some thinking constructive with it.
Marry: Simon my name is Mary I am one of the senior Parton's in the home treatment team.
Colin: I am Colin
Simon: How are you both?
Marry: Both of us work in the home treatment team.
Simon: It must be a hard team to work in some time.
Mother: Can I ask a quick question.
Marry: Yes.
Mother: Err due to the conditions that he got put under by the police he will not go out because he feels low the police are, constantly, on him and he's worried.
Katie: Is worried that he will get put into prison.
Mother: So, he will not go out until all of this appeal is over with and everything else and he gets his life back.
Simon: I have gotten set up, and I have done nothing wrong.
Katie: Simon, Simon, Simon.
Mother: His got an assessment tomorrow with ESA and his no going to go up there until it is there anything the mental health team can do.
Simon: Have you got the warrant.
Mother: Yes.
Mother: And can say can you write on that and give us a copy that It never got executed and that he allowed you entry.
Sam: I suppose the best thing to say, well it is up to you, you let us in so I can suppose we can say that and then send it back to the court.
Katie: Yes.
Mother: Yes, but can I keep a copy of it please.
Sam: Yes, will give you a copy.
Mother: Yes wonderful, thank you.
Simon: Would use lot like a drink.
Marry: No thanks.
Gentlemen's voice: In answer to your question and I do not have a clear answer "Muttering"
Mother: No, it is not basically, he is on six conditions at the present moment until this goes to the appeal.
Katie: It is not a curfew, but it is because he may not go to places.
Mother: Like to go out down the motorway after 10:00 pm his not allowed onto industrial estates and can't even stop at a petrol station `
Simon: I have been looking at her for over three years and I have not even got found guilty or arrested.
Mother: His got an appointment tomorrow I have contacted them and said that it will need to get rearranged and I told them that he was getting an assessment today.
Marry: Yes.
Mother: Hmm you suggested that I have contact with them.
Marry: Hmm, Hmm.
Mother: And basically, they asked me to update them today as too, what is going on err, they're open till 8:00 pm tonight.

Marry: Hmm.
Mother: High bury and Islington.
Katie: High bury.
Marry: Islington.
Simon: I am barred from the whole of the central London.
Mother: Err the building because it is classified.
Katie: His not allowed in any form of industrial estate like you know where. Salisbury is and toys r us Great Cambridge RD he can't go to the McDonald's after 10:00 pm or anything.
Simon: I cannot go MC Donald's or any think. "Muttering"
Simon: If I go into any night club I need permission any night club if I walk into a house party and you got more 20 people in your house I can go to prison the problem is normal you have got private air and public air I got freedom of speech in this house this is my private air and that Is what I believe this is our human right and what crated our statues of liberty's as human beings, now what they have done because the buildings are in side there treated as people private homes and that Is their way of living so now what they have done is breach all my human rights and all the rules and regulations and say that private air and public air are the same and that is what they have do to give me this application.
Simon: Now what the judge has written is she has written I may not have no private birthday parties in this house today if I give you an amp and you take an amp to your house if you have 20 people listening to music on that amp in your house then I can go to prison I full fit for your actions
Carl: Does it say 20?
Simon: Yes.
Katie: Yes.
Mother: Yes, but that is written in the section 63.
Simon: But they're not allowed to do that in a house in a house I allow as many people as I want like normally, you can have as many people as you want in here.
Simon: Section 63 is for outdoors unless tress pass has taken place, but they want to use it in to do me I am standing up for everybody.
Mother: It's absolutely, wrong and there is an appeal, but the appeal taking Marry: If it is your own place you can do what you want.
Katie: No, his not allowed, under the.
Marry: What is that a section 63.
Katie: I do not know the sections I know what the Asbo restrictions cover.
Sam: Hmm Simon I will shore that you are pleased to hear, that you are not going to get put under a section of the mental health Act today. Cheers in the room: -
Sam: You are not going to the hospital what would in courage you to do is to meet up with goodies and see the doctor in the Goodies team because what I think is If we got some thinking on file to say that there has been an assessment no Mental Health illness got found, so next time someone phones up we got that on our record because if you get some contact to say that there is concern about Metal Health we have a duty of care to check what is happening.
Simon: A duty of care.
Sam: So, have the assessment getting out of the way.
Simon: So now that you have said that this is exactly, the point that I wanted to raise her upstairs your team has a duty of care of her, now these letters are the letters that she has been writing me, I was in a 13 year relationship and she was stalking me, following me around but I never paid her too much bother to me, because I did not have all the court dates and orders on me so I was not in my house all the time.
Simon: Eventually, anyway I broke up with my partner and this woman wrote me letters suddenly, this shows how drunk she was and her mental state of mind in the letters.
Simon: She is like dear Simon I thank you for your support through alcoholism.
Simon: So, she is admitting that she is always drunk.
Simon: I was a where that I knocked on your door and borrowed money approximate £7 around 8 times.
Simon: So, you can see that I am always giving her money.
Simon: I am always giving her money.
Katie: That is because she is asking for it.
Simon: Yes, she is knocking on the door.
Simon: And then she is like I do not have the way or the means of stalking you.
Simon: So, she clearly, understands that she is stalking me and I am saying to her please can you stop what you are doing to me, she keeps writing it when she is drunk, it is my life.
Simon: Now because of the case I am spending 24 hours a day in my home, do you know what she does, sir she comes here and she gets the tap in her flat that the manufacture intended it to get built for a purpose and that is not in the way she uses it, what she is doing is sitting there at the tap and I mean she sleeps at the tap " Description of her using the tap" going bang, bang, bang what it was like is someone, had turned the pressure up by the stop cock.
Doctor: Can I stop you there please.

Simon: What it is I cannot even take my clothes off in my own home as she will stamp and follow me bang, bang, bang, bang on the floor all the way into the bathroom.
Mother: He has so many witnesses I been trying to get the council to help with no luck.
Sam: Have you raped I mean, surely, the housing officers know that the.
Mother: I have been I have been.
Simon: the police will do nothing.
Mother: I have been trying to deal with it, I have gotten emails upon emails upon emails that I have sent begging the council to deal with lady upstairs.
Mother: Even when I am here, she follows me into the bathroom.
Simon: There are loads of them here she writes me so many letters so many letters.
Simon: Yes, and none of my friends can take their clothes off in this house or nothing `because of what she has been doing.
Mother: It feels like she is continuing on top of your banging.
Simon: What she does every time she hears a computer keyboard; what she does is she will stand there and she will; (Mr Simon Cordell makes a loud banging sound.)
Sam: And it sounds like there is no sound proofing here at all low.
Mother: No there is not.
Simon: I cannot even work in this house because of her I mean I have been sitting down in this house for the last year still just waiting for her to stop banning and this can cause my sleep pattern to mess up a bit from time to time still.
Sam: No, I am fine, I am fine.
Mother: And I got emails upon emails asking the council to address it because it is not fair on him, he feels as if he has no privacy in `his own home.
Simon: Look Simon, thank you I think I have sorted it and I believe you and would bend over not to make an emissary of your life sorry I cannot see leaving just the wedged head board.
Katie: There are plenty of people who have been here she has done it too me.
Simon: This is how drunk she is when she wrote this.
Katie: You can hear her.
Louise Brown: Do you live in this block too?
Katie: No but I am always here I am, here a lot and I am also here a lot when mum is not here, I mean a lot of things have happened.
Louise Brown: yes.
Katie: So, it is not like he is making things up as it has gotten seen by a lot of other people and no one does anything as it is a council place for him.
Katie: I even told him that he should move away from here.
Louise Brown: Hmm.
Simon: But do you know what she means by the wedged head board yes like I said a Christmas last Christmas I brought her a box of chocolates yes and I gave everyone in the block a present yes times where hard for me as this time because I had not been up too much because I had been on curfew for two years all ready at that stage yes in this house Simon so I brought t them their boxes of chocolates then In a couple of months later in February she did all this banging on the tap on purpose and stamping bang, bang, banging but just before that she knocked on my door one day and asked me to go upstairs into her flat and help move her bed out this was the first time I had been into her flat I have not been in that flat for years since she has lived there but I still went up there as a gentleman I went up there and I went in to her house and the house smelled right it was clean but it did not just smell clean so I felt funny as I am one of them people that as if "She is lazy why is her house not clean" how could she invite me In to her house like that so I quickly moved the bed fast and UN-done it and got it out of the house and got out and got straight back to my own house yes and that is why she wrote that funny bit about the head board .
Simon: You are being the best neighbour in the world Debbie, and this is the sort off letters she keeps putting into my front door.
Mother: Even the council `has turned around and said that she has a fashion-nation with my son, but they're not doing nothing and it's driving him, he cannot even go into the toilet and have a bath as she is on top of him banging continued.
Louise Brown: Hmm OK.
Mother: Even when I am sitting here and I go to the toilet and she does not even know that it is me and she does the same too me, and It makes you feel and the council are really not doing nothing about it what so ever.
Louise Brown: Hmm.
Mother: He knows that she has got problems.
Louise Brown: And this has been going on for how long a long time.
Mother: A year.
Louise Brown: Oh right.
Mother: And I put a complaint in because Dawn Alena is his council officer.

Louise Brown: Yes.
Mother: I was making phone calls and saying to Dawn Alena, please try to address this you know please it's going to far now.
Louise Brown: Yes.
Mother: And she wouldn't come out she wouldn't deal with it and wanted Simon to come up and visit her and basically, I put a complaint in and the they said that they're going to put it over to the anti-social team and they wouldn't do anything then a Louise brown took up the case after months of not doing any think and I am writing emails upon emails and then they come out she did not take one note and he has video tapes recordings and every think and you can hear it and you can hear the taps were she was using the taps and they had the pressure up so high the noise that come into his flat was terrible the noise she was just turning it on and off on and off on and off.
Mother: He could not even sleep propel.
Louise Brown: How old is she Simon?
Simon: She is four years old now.
Mother: How old is Debbie.
Simon: Oh, she is about 12 years older than me I would say.
Louise Brown: 12.
Katie: Oh, what the dog.
Simon: Oh no the dog is four, four years of age.
Louise Brown: Arr.
"Muttering" 45:14 till 45:34
Katie: She might be older than that.
Mother: And like I put a complaint in because the Anti-Social Behaviour team was not dealing with it and they was not taking the issue seriously, and that got put in October of last year and we have not heard a thing, so I keep asking them when are we going to get a response from the formal complaint that got put in because you are not addressing thing correctly.
Louise Brown: And nothing.
Mother: nothing she phoned because I think she made a mistake, because he phoned Louise, and it now I mean Debbie was going off constant banging and he could not work or any think and it is annoying to him so he phoned Louise up and he always gives out my number so she phoned me by mistake and I turned round and said to Louis I said I said She said is Simon Cordell there I said no who is it she said it Louise Brown.
Louise Brown: I am Louise brown.
Mother: Oh, so you are Louise brown can you tell me why you have not responded to my formal complaint I sure you have and I know.
"Muttering" and I have not deleted them err, yet in another email you will have a response fast and directly, but it is still going on now and it is now February and sill nothing.
Marry: No response.
Louise Brown: It can take up to four months later.
Mother: Yes, I Know.
Louise Brown: Any way.
Mother: And I have even been up because he has knocked on her door a few times when she was bad and really banging the council has "Muttering" So that you do not hear it so badly, so bad when she is constantly, banging.
Mother: I mean, even the other day he had his entire bathroom ceiling flooded, and it knocked his entire electric out and he had to call the Emergency.
Louise Brown: Yes, the Emergency.
Mother: And he went upstairs to say to her you have got a leak, and it is all Flooding through my bathroom then and then the council come out and then she well it seems she has cleaned the mess up.
Louise Brown: Hmm.
Mother: And they have re-laid the whole of her pipes like they have re-laid his heating because they were having issues with the heating systems, so they re-laid the pipes over the wall.
Katie: You can see them on the walls over there.
Louise Brown: Yes.
Mother: And he turns around, and they turned around, then they phoned me, and they said has the ceiling dried out yet as they had to disconnect the whole light.
Simon: My bathroom light is disconnected right now.
Mother: And.
Louise Brown: Yes.
Mother: And then I contacted them back the next day, and I said to them the ceiling is still too wet to re connect that back up it would be dangerous.
Katie: So is there still no electric in the bathroom.

Mother: And I said you will need to leave to your going to need to let it dry out before you come and reconnect it back up, then I got a phone call from them say now they believe the leak is coming from 117 that is the third floor up.
Mother: Because it is privately, leased, and their going to come down and speak to Simon today, so I said OK, no problem because they have then got to pay for the damage that got then done.
Louise Brown:
Mother: Err so the people from 117 come down and they said we have got no leak we have had someone come in and check and there is no leak.
Katie: Simon.
Doctor: See you

Subject: RE: Telephone Message Importance: High
Dear all,
He told me to take notes, told me to take down the time and date of our call.
I have had a very irate call from Simon Cordell. He says that he has been informed by his mother that a warrant has been granted to access his flat. He says the mother received a call from someone earlier today to inform her and she has told Simon.
Extremely unhappy, says he is going to come here with his solicitor - took down our address. Says he has always said he would see me (this is true). Although refused me, the doc and AMHP access the other week.
Demanding I find out the nature of the warrant and what do I know about it. Asking to see me this afternoon. He wants a call back in half an hour.
He is due for a MHA assessment tomorrow at 10am. Police are coming.
The mother has clearly disclosed details of the assessment tomorrow to Simon. We are going to walk into a very hostile situation.

I believe he may have CCTV cameras outside his flat facing the street as he mentioned to me previously that he saw someone sitting in their car (although this could be part of his paranoia).
He does have CCTV in the entrance hallway.
Could the police/assessing team please for warned. Maybe we need to meet around the corner rather than park outside his flat.
Thanks,
Amal Pomphrey

  Dr Al-Allaq (independents 12 Doctor),
  Dr Albazaz (independent s12 Doctor),
  CJ and Nellie (Home Treatment Team workers),
  Amal Pomphrey (Community Mental Health Nurse based at Enfield Early Intervention Team) all attended. A s135(1) warrant was obtained but not executed as Mr Cordell gave access. A lock smith was present, but their services were not required as Mr Cordell opened the door. The police were present but remained outside the property. Mr Cordell's home was somewhat cluttered with a large printer by the door. However, it was clean and organised. He had food in the kitchen. His mother and a female friend were present. Mr Cordell was expecting the assessment to take place. He was appropriately groomed and dressed. He had put his dog in the garden. Mr Cordell expressed his unhappiness about the warrant being obtained. He said that if he had been sent an appointment letter, he would give professionals access. He mentioned on going issues with the police and that he had a court case in February. His speech was somewhat rapid at the start of the interview, but this appeared to be due to anxiety rather than thought disorder. His speech slowed as the interview went on. Mr Cordell did change topic of conversation a number of times as there was particular information that he wanted to share with the team. He spoke a project to start a community internet site and showed those present a business plan that was on his computer. He showed us documents which he said were related to his court case. He pointed out a line in the document that said that all the suspects were white and said that this was part of his legal challenge to his Anti-Social Behaviour Order. He denied any symptoms of mental illness when asked about a variety of psychotic symptoms. He denied suicidal ideation. He spoke about difficulties he had with his upstairs neighbour relating to noise disturbance. He showed us some letters which said that his neighbour had written to him. He said that his neighbour has an alcohol problem and a learning disability. There was no evidence of distraction, confusion or that he was responding to internal stimuli.
  It is my view that Mr Cordell's detention was not in the interests of his health as I did not identify evidence of mental disorder during the visit. I did not believe that Mr Cordell's detention was necessary for his safety, Mr Cordell denied experiencing any suicidal ideation and could I not identify other risks to safety apart from possible substance misuse which could not be used as the basis of detention without clear evidence of a mental disorder associated with the substance misuse issues. I also did not think that the threshold for detention on the basis of safety was met, he was having conflict with neighbour this conflict did not appear to be driven by any mental disorder.
  5. Consultation with Nearest Relative and process of identifying the Nearest Relative
  I identified Mr Cordell's Nearest Relative as his mother Lorraine Cordell. Mr Cordell lives alone and is single. As far as I could ascertain he did not have any children and was not in relationship. His father was the older of his parents but when I phoned his mother on 03.02.16

she informed me that he was in regular contact with Mr Cordell and did his shopping for him. I therefore formed the view that she provided care and was the Nearest Relative.
I phoned Lorraine at around 09:30hrs on and she advised that in her view use of a warrant and the Mental Health Act assessment were unnecessary as he would give professionals access if he had received an appointment letter. She said that he had a court case in February but would not elaborate on this. Lorraine said that she thought that the involvement of mental health services was unnecessary as Mr Cordell was not in her view experiencing any mental health difficulties and had not experienced any mental health difficulties for a number of months. I was surprised that Lorraine stated that she did not think that Mr Cordell as the recent referral to mental health services had been triggered by a referral that she had made.
09.02.16
6. Consultation with Assessing Doctors Both assessing Doctors declined to make medical recommendations and were in agreement that there was no clear evidence of any mental disorder during the assessing.
7. Views of others consulted
Prior to the assessment the police present advised me that were aware of conflict between Mr Cordell and his neighbour. They advised that the soundproofing between the two properties was poor. The police officers advised me that they were aware that on one occasion Mr Cordell had threatened to strangle his neighbour.
8. Mental Capacity Act 2005
No Capacity Act issues identified during the assessment.
9. Reason for decision to make the application (including choice of Section)
Given that Mr Cordell's diagnosis and treatment plan were not clear at the time of the assessment the assessment was for possible detention on section 2. It was my view that Mr Cordell did not meet the statutory criteria for detention. It was not clear that he was suffering from a mental disorder of a nature because at the time of the assessment it was unclear if whether or not he had a mental disorder. He did not meet the criteria for degree as there was no clear evidence that he was experiencing symptoms of mental disorder.
10. If not admitted to hospital, outline immediate plans for alternative to admission and how those plans will be co-ordinated.

He had stopped taking his medication for chromes disease four weeks and had been admitted to the North Middlesex Hospital.

Mr Cordell was assessed under the MHA act on 24.11.15 but he was not detained.

3. Record of interview with patient (Include where it was conducted who was present and use of police if required during process) on 03.02.16.

Dr Al-Allaq (independents 12 Doctor),
Dr Albazaz (independent s12 Doctor),
CJ and Nellie (Home Treatment Team workers),
Amal Pomphrey (Community Mental Health Nurse based at Enfield Early Intervention Team)

All attended. A s135(1) warrant was obtained but not executed as Mr Cordell gave access. A lock smith was present but their services were not required as Mr Cordell opened the door. The police were present but remained outside the property.

Mr Cordell's home was somewhat cluttered with a large printer by the door. However, it was clean and organised. He had food in the kitchen.

His mother and a female friend were present. Mr Cordell was expecting the assessment to take place. He was appropriately groomed and dressed. He had put his dog in the garden. Mr Cordell expressed his unhappiness about the warrant being obtained. He said that if he had been sent an appointment letter, he would give professionals access.

He mentioned on going issues with the police and that he had a court case in February. His speech was somewhat rapid at the start of the interview, but this appeared to be due to anxiety rather than thought disorder. His speech slowed as the interview went on. Mr Cordell did change topic of conversation a number of times as there was particular information that he wanted to share with the team. He spoke a project to start a community internet site and showed those present a business plan that was on his computer. He showed us documents which he said were related to his court case. He pointed out a line in the document that said that all the suspects were white and said that this was part of his legal challenge to his Anti-Social Behaviour Order.

He denied any symptoms of mental illness when asked about a variety of psychotic symptoms. He denied suicidal ideation. He spoke about difficulties he had with his upstairs neighbour relating to noise disturbance. He showed us some letters which said that his neighbour had written to him. He said that his neighbour has an alcohol problem and a learning disability.

There was no evidence of distraction, confusion or that he was responding to internal stimuli.

5. Consultation with Nearest Relative and process of identifying the Nearest Relative

I identified Mr Cordell's Nearest Relative as his mother Lorraine Cordell. Mr Cordell lives alone and is single. As far as I could ascertain he did not have any children and was not in relationship. His father was the older of his parents but when I phoned his mother on 03.02.16 she informed me that he was in regular contact with Mr Cordell and did his shopping for him. I therefore formed the view that she provided care and was the Nearest Relative.
I phoned Lorraine at around 09:30hrs on 09.02.16 and she advised that in her view use of a warrant and the Mental Health Act assessment were unnecessary as he would give professionals access if he had received an appointment letter. She said that he had a court case in February but would not elaborate on this. Lorraine said that she thought that the involvement of mental health services was unnecessary as Mr Cordell was not in her view experiencing any mental health difficulties and had not experienced any mental health difficulties for a number of months.
I was surprised that Lorraine stated that she did not think that Mr Cordell as the recent referral to mental health services had been triggered by a referral that she had made.

6. Consultation with Assessing Doctors

Both assessing Doctors declined to make medical recommendations and were in agreement that there was no clear evidence of any mental disorder during the assessing.

7 Views of others consulted

Prior to the assessment the police present advised me that were aware of conflict between Mr Cordell and his neighbour. They advised that the soundproofing between the two properties was poor. The police officers advised me that they were aware that on one occasion Mr Cordell had threatened to strangle his neighbour.

8. Mental Capacity Act 2005

No Capacity Act issues identified during the assessment.

Reason for decision to make the application (including choice of Section)

9.Given that Mr Cordell's diagnosis and treatment plan were not clear at the time of the assessment the assessment was for possible detention on section 2. It was my view that Mr Cordell did not meet the statutory criteria for detention. It was not clear that he was suffering from a mental disorder of a nature because at the time of the assessment it was unclear if whether or not he had a mental disorder. He did not meet the criteria for degree as there was no clear evidence that he was experiencing symptoms of mental disorder.

He said that his neighbour has an alcohol problem and a learning disability.
There was no evidence of distraction, confusion or that he was responding to internal stimuli.
I did not feel that there was sufficient evidence of mental illness on the day of the assessment to detain Simon under the Mental Health Act. Neither Doctor made medical recommendations. Simon agreed to attend an outpatient appointment with the Early Intervention Team psychiatrist.

Loud and truculent banging in the bathroom got worse and this got achieved by slamming objects on to the floor with evil intent of malefactor actions!
Then victimizing me with intent of using the same repeated items of the building fixtures to have tortures effects on me within my rented home is unfair living circumstances!

Lord Hope of Craighead
This view as to the meaning of the phrase "criminal charge" is reinforced by the third criterion, which is the nature and degree of severity of the penalty. The formulation of this criterion in the early case of Engel v The Netherlands (No 1) r EHRR 647, 678-679, para 82 is instructive:

"['Supervision by the court] would generally prove to be illusory if it did not also take into consideration the degree of severity of the penalty that the person concerned risks incurring. In a society subscribing to the B rule of law, there belong to the 'criminal' sphere deprivations of liberty liable to be imposed as a punishment, except those which by their nature, duration or manner of execution cannot be appreciably detrimental. The seriousness of what is at stake, the traditions of the contracting states and the importance attached by the Convention to respect for the physical liberty of the person all require that this should be so."

The underlying idea is that proceedings do not lie within the criminal sphere for the purposes of article 6 unless they are capable of resulting in the imposition of a penalty by way of punishment. In B v Chief Constable of Avon and Somerset Constabulary [2001] 1 WLR 340, 353, para 28 Lord Bingham of Cornhill CJ said that he was aware of no case in which the European Court has held a proceeding to be criminal even though an adverse outcome for the defendant cannot result in any penalty. I agree. Although there are other aspects of the procedure which suggest that in proceedings for the imposition of an anti-social behaviour order the person Is not "charged with a criminal offence", the critical question as 1 see it is whether the making of such an order amounts to the imposition of a penalty. But it is first necessary to consider whether either of the first two criteria are satisfied.

The first criterion: classification in domestic law

A finding that the proceedings were classified as criminal in domestic law is likely to be conclusive. But a finding that they are civil is of relative weight and serves only as a starting point: Benham v United Kingdom 22 EHRR 293, 323, para 56. In Lauko v Slovakia (1998) 33 EHRR 994, 1010-1011, para 57 the court observed that the criteria are alternative and ^ not cumulative: see also Garyfallou AEBE v Greece (1997) EHRR 344. As it was put in Ozturk v Germany 6 EHRR 409, 424, para 54, one criterion cannot be applied so as to divest an offence of a criminal character if that has been established under another criterion. But it was recognised in Lauko v Slovakia, at p ion, para 57, that a cumulative approach may be adopted if the separate analysis of each of them does not lead to a clear conclusion as to the existence of a "criminal charge". For the reasons already given, I consider that the position under domestic law is that the proceedings are classified as civil proceedings and not criminal. In their helpful written submissions which were developed before us in oral argument Liberty, to whom leave was given to intervene in these appeals, have contended that the essential question is how domestic law classifies the conduct which is at issue, not the proceedings themselves, d hey submit that the conduct which requires to be demonstrated falls within the scope of the criminal law, and that for this reason the proceedings should be treated as criminal proceedings in domestic law for the purposes of the Convention. They point out that the definition of "anti-social behaviour" in section 1(1) of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 is modelled on

A "harassment" in the Protection from Harassment Act 1997, which is a criminal offence under section z of that Act, and that such conduct may also be treated as criminal under section 5 of the Public Order Act 1986 and a variety of other statutory provisions dealing with offences such as assault, theft and burglary. They also invoke section 3 of the Human Rights Act 1998 in support of the proposition that an application made under section 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 3 998 should be construed in domestic law as 6 criminal proceedings in the absence of an express provision in the legislation to the contrary.

• 1 would reject these arguments. The question is whether, as it was put in Engel v The Netherlands (No 1) 1 EHRR 647, 678, para 81, the provision defining the offence belongs to criminal law, disciplinary law or both concurrently. It cannot be answered without examining the nature and purpose of the proceedings in which the conduct is alleged. The analogies to which Liberty refer are all examples of situations in which the conduct described is defined in the statute for the purpose of enabling a charge to be brought with a view to the imposition of a penalty. In Engel v The Netherlands (No 1), at p 677, para 79 the court described the aim of repressing the applicants' conduct through penalties as an objective which was analogous to the "general goal of the criminal law". I hat is not the 0 purpose for which proceedings for the imposition of an anti-social behaviour order are brought. Their purpose is to protect the public from further antisocial acts by the defendant. As for the argument regarding section 3 of the Human Rights Act 1998, it is, as Liberty themselves recognise, circular. According to the jurisprudence of the Strasbourg Court, the first criterion is how the proceedings are classified according to the legal system of the £ respondent state: Engel v The Netherlands (No 1), at p 678, para 8z. Section z of the Human Rights Act 1998 provides that a court or tribunal determining a question which has arisen in connection with a Convention right must take the Strasbourg jurisprudence into account. Strasbourg jurisprudence tells us that the question of classification is a matter for our own domestic system. Under our system, for the reasons already given, the proceedings arc civil proceedings and not criminal.

The second criterion: the nature of the offence

• This question looks to the nature of the offence charged. But there is a preliminary question that has to be examined. Do proceedings for the imposition of an anti-social behaviour order involve the bringing of a charge at all? For the reasons already given, 1 think that the answer to this question in domestic law is clear. They do not involve the bringing of a charge because the purpose of the procedure is to impose a prohibition, not a penalty. But the domestic answer to this question does not resolve the issue, because for tire purposes of the Convention it is necessary to look at the substance of what is involved and not the form. Moreover, the question cannot be answered according to what Parliament is thought to have intended. In this context it is the effect of what Parliament has done that has H to be examined. The court looks behind the appearances and investigates the realities of the procedure: Deweer v Belgium (1980) z EHRR. 439, 438, para 44.

• The grounds for making the application involve making an allegation against the defendant that he has acted in a manner which may we'll have involved criminal conduct. A formal accusation is made, and the court to which it is made has to reach a decision as to whether or not the allegation has been made out. The situation can be distinguished from that where a sex offender order is sought under section 2 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998, as it is a precondition for the making of the application that the defendant is already a sex offender as defined in section 3(1) of the Act. It can also be distinguished from that where a confiscation order is sought under the Drug Trafficking Offences Act 1986, as it is a precondition for the making of an application for such an order that the person against whom the order is sought has been convicted of a drug trafficking offence as defined in the Act. A previous conviction for the acts which are said to have amounted to anti-social behaviour is not required for the purposes of section 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998. For the defendants it was contended that these features of the proceedings showed that they were directed at the world at large, rather than a pre-defined or limited class of persons, and that offences which were of this character were apt to be regarded as involving a criminal charge within the meaning of article 6.

- I do not think that the fact that no previous criminal conviction is required before an application for an and-social behaviour order can be made under section 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act .1998 has the significance which the defendants seek to attach to it. A distinction is drawn in the jurisprudence of the Strasbourg court between charges which are addressed to a pre-defined or limited class of persons, such as those who are serving in the armed forces or are serving sentences of imprisonment as in Engel v The Netherlands (No 1) 1 EHRR 647 and McEeeley v United Kingdom (1980) 3 EHRR 161 or those who take part in proceedings before a court as in Ravnsborg v Sweden 18 EHRR 38, on the one hand and charges which are directed to the world at large on the other, as in Ben denoun u France (1994) 18 EHRR 54 which was concerned with a provision in the tax code applicable to all citizens. The distinction which is drawn here is between proceedings which are disciplinary in character and those which are criminal. Where a limited group of persons possessing a special status is involved the conclusion is more readily drawn that the proceedings are ^ disciplinary. But that is not a distinction which falls to be drawn in this case. The question is whether the person against whom an anti-behaviour order is being sought is "charged" with an offence at all. There are several indications that this is not so.

- The conduct which requires to be demonstrated is not necessarily conduct which would be capable of being treated as criminal. It has to be shown that the defendant has acted in a manner that caused or was likely to cause harassment, alarm, or distress. But in order to prove that an offence under section 1of the Public Order Act 1986 was committed by him it would be necessary to go further and prove that he intended to cause these consequences. In order to prove that an offence was committed under section 1 of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 it would be necessary to prove that he was engaged in a course of conduct which in fact amounted to harassment and that he knew or ought to have known that his conduct amounted to harassment.

- Furthermore, the decision whether or not to make the order does not depend solely on proof of the defendant's conduct. The application may only be made if it appears to the local council or the chief constable that an

An order is necessary to protect persons in the area, and consultation between them is required before the application is made. Thus, the proceedings are identified from the outset as preventive in character rather than punitive or disciplinary. This is a strong indication that they are not proceedings for the determination of a criminal charge against the defendant. In Lattko v Slovakia 33 EHRR 9514, ion, para 58 the court said that the fine imposed in that case was intended as a punishment to deter re-offending and that it had 6 "a punitive character, which is the customary distinguishing feature of criminal penalties". In Guzzardi v Italy (3980) 3 EHRR 333, 369-37°, para o the court said that proceedings under which the applicant, as a suspected Mafioso, had been placed under special supervision with an obligation of compulsory residence within a restricted area did not involve the determination of a criminal charge against him within the meaning of C article. see also Raimondo v Italy 18 EHRR 137. In M v Italy (199r) 70 DR 59, the commission held that article 6(2) did not apply to confiscation of property belonging to a person suspected of being a member of a mafia- type organisation. In neither of these cases was the imposition of the order regarded as being punitive. In Gough v Chief Constable of the Derbyshire Constabulary [2002] QB 459 the Divisional Court held that the imposition of a banning order under the Football (Spectators) Act 1989 as amended by the Football (Disorder) Act 2000, which was designed to combat what Laws

I.J described as “the shame and menace of football hooliganism”, was not in conflict with article 6. This decision has been affirmed by the Court of Appeal [2002] QB 1 2T 3.

- In contrast to those decisions, which support the proposition that a distinction is drawn between proceedings for the imposition of preventive measures and those for the imposition of a penalty or punishment, there is Steel v United Kingdom 28 FJIRR 603, In that case the court held that article 6(3) applied to proceedings in which the applicants, who had been arrested and charged with breach of the peace, were brought before a magistrate and bound over to keep the peace. As in the case of applications for an anti-social behaviour order, the procedure is initiated under section 51 of the Magistrates’ Courts Act 1980 by a complaint, and a bind over order ^ does not constitute a criminal conviction. It was contended foi the defendants that that decision is directly in point in this case and indistinguishable, and that contention was strongly supported by Liberty.

- But I would hold that it is distinguishable, for the reasons which were given by Lord Phillips of Worth Matravers MR. in the Court of Appeal in the McCann case [2001] rWLRro84, 1100H—1 to b. As he pointed out, in contrast to proceedings for breach of the peace, there is no power of arrest for the purpose of proceedings under section 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998. The fact that a warrant may be issued for the defendant’s arrest if he fails to attend the hearing or an adjourned hearing does not show that they are criminal proceedings. Rather it shows that he has failed to respond to a summons by the court. In itself this is far from conclusive, as there are numerous offences in English law which are non-arrestable. But it has to be ^ taken together with the other factors. Proof of anti-social behaviour is not the only criterion for the making of the order, nor is proof that the defendant is likely to cause further anti-social acts in the future. 'the orders must be shown to be necessary for the purpose of protecting people against further such behaviour by him. This is not a distinction of form rather than substance at all. The last criterion is of fundamental importance to the A decision as to the prohibitions that are required. And in contrast to proceedings for breach of the peace, which can lead to the immediate imposition of a sentence of imprisonment under section 11.5(3) of the Magistrates’ Courts Act 1980 for up to six months if the defendant fails to comply with the order because he does not agree to enter into a recognisance to keep the peace or to be of good behaviour, proceedings under section 1 of g the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 cannot in themselves result in the immediate imposition of a penalty.

The third criterion: is an antisocial behaviour order a penalty

- This question looks to the nature of the penalty. But here again there is a preliminary question that has to be examined. Is an anti-social behaviour order a penalty at all? The essential characteristics of an antisocial behaviour order are that the defendant is prohibited from doing something. The purpose of the prohibition is to protect people in the area to which the order relates. Section 1(6) of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 provides that the prohibitions that may be imposed are those necessary for the purposes of protecting persons from further anti-social conduct that is, from conduct which will cause, or is likely to cause, them harassment, alarm D or distress. It is true that no limits are set as to the prohibitions that may he imposed, so long as they are found to be necessary. The defendants say that prohibitions which banish the defendant from an area of the city where he lives, or which expose him to harsher penalties than he would normally face if he commits an offence, have all the characteristics of a penalty for the antisocial acts which he is found to have committed.

- An anti-social behaviour order may well restrict the freedom of the defendant to do what he wants and to go where he pleases. But these restrictions are imposed for preventive reasons, not as punishment. 1 he tests that has to be applied under section 1(6) is confined to what is necessary foi the purpose of protecting persons from further anti-social acts by the defendant. The court is not being required, nor indeed is it permitted, to consider what an appropriate sanction would be for his past conduct. Moreover, while the court may restrict the defendant’s liberty where this is shown to be necessary to protect persons in the area from further anti-social acts by him, it may not deprive him of it nor may it impose a fine on him.

Conclusion on classification

- For these reasons I do not think that any of the criteria for a finding c that proceedings under section r of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 have the character of criminal proceedings for the purposes of article 6 are satisfied. The consequence of so holding is of fundamental importance to the future of this legislation. Cases such as Unterpertinger v Austria (1986) 13 FURR .175, Kostovski v The Netherlands (1989) 1.1 F.HRR 434 and Saidi v France (1993) 17 EHRR 2.51 illustrate the reluctance of the Staatsburg court to accept that the use of hearsay evidence is compatible with a defendant’s right under article 6(3)(d) to examine or have examined witnesses against him. But I would hold that article

6(3) does not apply to these proceedings and that the rules of evidence that are to be applied are the civil evidence rules. This means that hearsay evidence under the Civil

A Evidence Act 1995, the use of which will be necessary in many cases if the magistrates are to be properly informed about the scale and nature of the anti-social behaviour and the prohibitions that are needed for the protection of the public, is admissible.

Are the proceedings civil proceedings?

Counsel for the respondents and the Secretary of State were agreed that, if your Lordships were to hold that the specific guarantees in article 6(2.) and article 6(3) did not apply to these proceedings, they were nevertheless subject to the provisions of article 6(1). The question of classification is critical in this case, so it is important that the basis for these concessions should be clearly understood. They could only be accepted as well-founded if it was clear that the proceedings involved the determination of the defendant's civil rights and obligations.

- At first sight an order which prohibits a person from behaving in an anti-social manner has nothing to do with his civil rights and obligations. He has no right in domestic private law to use or engage in abusive, insulting, offensive, threatening language or behaviour or to threaten or engage in violence or damage against any person or property, which are among the acts which the defendants have been prohibited from doing in the McCann case. But, as Lord Nicholls of Birkenhead said in In re S (Minors) (Care Order: Implementation of Care Plan) [2002] AC 291, 32,0, para 71., by virtue of the Human Rights Act 1998 the right to respect for private and family life which is guaranteed by article 8 of the Convention is now part of a person's civil rights in domestic law for the purposes of article 6(1}. In my opinion the same can be said of the rights to freedom of expression and of assembly and association which are guaranteed by articles 10 and 1 r.

- Section 1(6) of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 sets no limits to the prohibitions that may be imposed, except that they must be necessary for the protection of people in the local government area against further anti-social acts by the defendant. Among the range of orders that might reasonably be thought to be necessary are orders which may interfere with the defendant's private life, his freedom to express himself either by words or conduct and his freedom to associate with other people. Although the jurisprudence of the Strasbourg court appears to me as yet to be unclear on this point, 1 would hold that the fact that prohibitions made under section I(d) of that Act may have this effect is sufficient to attract the right to a fair trial which is guaranteed by article 6(1). This means that the court must act with scrupulous fairness at all stages in the proceedings. When it is making its assessment of the facts and circumstances that have been put before it in evidence and of the prohibitions, if any, that are to be imposed, it must ensure that the defendant does not suffer any injustice.

Standard of proof

- As Lord Phillips of Worth Matravers MR observed in the Court of Appeal in the McCann case [2001I t WLR 1.084, riot, para 65, anti-social behaviour orders have serious consequences. It was with this point in mind that', at p 1101, para 67, he commended the course which, the Recorder of Manchester followed in the Crown Court when he said that, without- intending to lay down any form of precedent, the court had decided to apply the standard of being satisfied so that they were sure that the statutory conditions were fulfilled before they would consider the making of an order in the case of each defendant. I too would endorse this approach, for the following reasons.

- Mr Crow for the Secretary of State said that his preferred position was that the standard to be applied in these proceedings should be the civil standard. His submission, as it was put in his written case, was that g although the civil standard was a single, inflexible test, the inherent probability or improbability of an event was a matter to be taken into account when the evidence was being assessed. He maintained that this view was consistent with the position for which lie contended, that these were civil proceedings which should be decided according to the civil evidence rules. But it is not an invariable rule that the lower standard of proof must be applied in civil proceedings. I think that there are good reasons, in the interests of fairness, for applying the higher standard when allegations are made of criminal or quasi-criminal conduct which, if proved, would have serious consequences for the person against whom they are made.

- This, as I have already mentioned, was the view which the Court of Session took in Constanda v M 1997 SC 217 when it decided that proof to the criminal standard was required of allegations that a child had engaged in p criminal conduct although the ground of referral to a children's hearing was not that he had committed an offence hut that he was exposed to moral danger. There is now a substantial body of opinion that, if the case for an order such as a banning order or a sex offender order is to be made out, account should be taken of the seriousness of the matters to be proved and the implications of proving them. It has also been recognised that if this is done the civil standard of proof will for all practical purposes be E indistinguishable from the criminal standard: see B *u Chief Constable of Avon and Somerset Constabulary [2001] 1 WLR 340, 354, para 31, per Lord Bingham of Cornlii.il CJ; Gough v Chief Constable of the Derbyshire Constabulary [2002] QB 1213, 1242-1243, para 90, per Lord Phillips of Worth Matravers MR. As Mr Crow pointed out, the condition in section I(1)(b) of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 that a prohibition order is necessary to protect persons in the local government area from further anti-social acts raises a question which is a matter for evaluation and assessment. But the condition in section I(I)(a) that the defendant has acted in an anti-social manner raises serious questions of fact, and the implications for him of proving that he has acted in this way are also serious. I would hold that the standard of proof that ought to be applied in these cases to allegations about the defendant's conduct is the criminal standard.

Conclusion

- In the Clingham case I would make the same order as that proposed by Lord Steyn. In the McCann case I would dismiss the appeals.

Lord Hutton

My Lords, section 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 was enacted to remedy a grave social problem. In some parts of England, particularly in urban areas, there are vulnerable people who live in constant fear and distress as a result of the anti-social behaviour of others.

The anti-social behaviour can take different forms and may consist of

R (McCann) v Manchester Crown Ct (HL)

Lord Hutton

Insults and abuse and threats or assaults or damage to houses by stone throwing or the painting of graffiti. Those who are victims of such behaviour are often too frightened to be willing to go into the witness box in criminal proceedings to give evidence against those who make their lives a misery, because they fear that they will be harassed or intimidated for so doing.

- The remedy provided by section I of the 1998 Act is to give power to a magistrates' court to make an order which imposes on the defendant the prohibitions which are necessary for the purpose of protecting persons in the local area from further anti-social, acts by him. Such an order will frequently prohibit the defendant from entering a defined area where he has been particularly troublesome and from using or engaging in any abusive, insulting, offensive, threatening or intimidating language or behaviour or from threatening or engaging in violence or damage against any person or property within a somewhat wider area.
- Section 1 (to) provides that if a person does anything which he is prohibited from doing by an anti-social behaviour order he shall be liable oil summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or to a fine not exceeding a specified amount, or to both, or on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or to a fine, or to both.
- The remedy given by section 1 has operated effectively because the courts have held that proceedings under section 1 are civil proceedings and not criminal proceedings. Therefore, it has not been necessary for those who allege that they have suffered as a result of anti-social behaviour on the part of the defendant to go into the witness box to give evidence against him, because hearsay evidence can be given of their complaints and allegations pursuant to section 1 of the Civil Evidence Act 1995 which provides that in civil proceedings evidence shall not be excluded on the ground that it is hearsay.
- It is rulings that applications for anti-social behaviour orders are civil proceedings which are challenged by the defendants in these appeals. They submit that both under domestic law and under the jurisprudence of the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms ("the Convention") the proceedings against them under section 1 of the 1998 Act are criminal proceedings and constitute criminal charges against them so that hearsay evidence is not admissible. They contend in their submissions in reliance on the Convention that the use of hearsay evidence against them violates their human rights.

The facts of the present cases and the proceedings before the magistrates and on appeal have been fully set out in the speeches of my noble and learned friends Lord Steyn and Lord Hope of Craighead. I gratefully adopt their accounts and I therefore turn to consider the submissions advanced on behalf of the defendants.

Domestic law

Counsel for the defendants submitted that an application for an antisocial behaviour order is a criminal proceeding because the complaint against the defendant alleges anti-social behaviour which, in effect, is an allegation of the commission of criminal offences. 1 bus the complaint against the defendant Clingham alleged:

R (McCann) v Manchester Crown Ct (HL(E)) Lord Hutton
It appears to the local authority, the Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea, that the following conditions are fulfilled with respect to you, namely—(a) chat you have acted between 9 December 1999 and 15 April 2.000 on or in the vicinity of the Wornington Green Estate, London W10 in an anti-social manner, that is to say, in a manner that caused or was likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress to one or more persons not of the same household as yourself, namely by: assaulting residents, threatening to assault children of residents, verbally abusing residents and police officers, threatening and intimidating shopkeepers, engaging in car related crime, throwing objects at persons and property and entering property as a trespasser; and (b) that an anti-social behaviour order is necessary to protect persons in the Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea in which the harassment, alarm or distress was caused, or was likely to be caused from further anti-social acts by you .

- Counsel submitted that the great majority of this conduct constituted the commission of separate criminal offences. They also relied on the dose similarity between the wording of section I(I)(a) of the 1998 Act and the wording of sections 4A and 5 of the Public Order Act 1986. Section 4A, as inserted by section 154 of the Criminal justice and Public- Order Act 1994, provides:

"(1) A person is guilty of an offence if, with intent to cause a person harassment, alarm or distress, he—(a) uses threatening, abusive or insulting words or behaviour, or disorderly behaviour, or (b) displays any writing, sign or other visible representation which is threatening, abusive or insulting, thereby causing that or another person harassment, alarm or distress."

Section 5 provides:

"(1) A person is guilty of an offence if he—(a) uses threatening, abusive or insulting words or behaviour, or disorderly behaviour, or (b) displays any writing, sign or other visible representation which is threatening, abusive or insulting, within the hearing or sight of a person likely to be p caused harassment, alarm or distress thereby."

Section 1. (1) of the 1998 Act provides:

"An application for an order under this section may be made by a relevant authority if it appears to the authority that the following conditions are fulfilled with respect to any person aged ten or over, namely—(a) that the person has acted, since the commencement date, in an anti-social manner, that is to say, in a manner that caused or was likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress to one or more persons not of the same household as himself. .

- In reliance on authorities, the majority of which were considering the meaning of the term "criminal cause or matter", counsel further submitted that an application under section r of the 1998 Act. is a criminal proceeding because it can result under section 1(10) in the imposition of a term of imprisonment. Counsel cited Proprietary Articles Trade Association v Attorney General for Canada [1-931] AC 310, 324 where Lord Atkin stated:

R (McCann) v Manchester Crown Ct (HL(E)
Lord Hutton
"It appears to their Lordships to be of little value to seek to confine crimes to a category of acts which by their very nature belong to the domain of 'criminal jurisprudence1; for the domain of criminal jurisprudence can only be ascertained by examining what acts at any particular period are declared by the state to be crimes, and the only common nature they will be found to possess is that they are prohibited by the state and that those who commit them are punished."
In Exp Alice Woodbail (1888) io QBD 832, 837-838, Lindley LJ stated:
"Can we say that the application in the present case is not an application in a criminal cause or matter? I think that in substance it certainly is. Its whole object is to enable the person in custody to escape being sent for trial in America upon a charge of forgery."
In Amand v Home Secretary [1943] AC 147,156 Viscount Simon LC stated:
"If the matter is one the direct outcome of which may be trial of the applicant and his possible punishment for an alleged offence by a court claiming jurisdiction to do so, the matter is criminal."
Lord "Wright stated, at p 162:
"if the cause or matter is one which, if carried to its conclusion, might result in the conviction of the person charged and in a sentence of some punishment, such as imprisonment or fine, it is a 'criminal cause or matter'." I am unable to accept these submissions. The application for an anti-social behaviour order does not charge the defendant with having committed a crime. The purpose of the application is to obtain an order prohibiting the defendant from doing anti-social acts in the future and its object is not the obtaining of a conviction against him resulting in the imposition of a punishment. I am in respectful agreement with the statement of Lord Bingham of Cornhili CJ in Customs and Excise Comrs v City of London Magistrates' Court [2000] 1 WLR 2020, 2025 that:
"criminal proceedings involve a formal accusation made on behalf of the state or by a private prosecutor that a defendant has committed a breach of the criminal law, and the state or the private prosecutor has instituted proceedings which may culminate in the conviction and condemnation of the defendant." The passages in the judgments relied on by the defendants do not, in my opinion, assist them because they emphasise that the imposition of a conviction may be a consequence of the proceedings in which the application is brought. Thus in the Proprietary Articles Trade Association case j T 9 31] AC 310, 324 Lord Atkin stated that "those who commit them are punished"; in Ex p Alice Woodball 20 QBD 832, 838 Lindley LJ stated: "[the] whole object [of the application] is to enable the person in custody to escape being sent for trial in America upon a charge of forgery"; in Amand s case 11:9431 AC 147 Viscount Simon LC stated, at p T 56, that the matter is criminal if it is one "the direct outcome of which may be trial of the applicant and his possible punishment"; and Lord Wright stated, at p 162, that a matter is a criminal one which, "if carried to its conclusion, might result in conviction and punishment. But an application for an anti-social behaviour order, if carried to its conclusion, will not result in conviction and punishment, it will result in the making of an order which cannot be regarded as a punishment. A conviction and punishment will only be imposed if the defendant, by his own choice, subsequently breaches the order and separate and distinct proceedings are brought against him.

- I further consider that a complaint brought against a defendant under section 1(3} of the 1998 Act does not constitute an allegation of a crime. The fact that the background to the complaint will very often be the alleged commission of a number of criminal offences does not mean that the complaint constitutes a charge of a criminal offence: see S v Miller 2001 SC 977, 989-990, para 23 cited subsequently in paragraph 1.02 of this opinion.
- There are two further considerations which support the conclusion C that an application for an anti-social behaviour order is a civil proceeding and not a criminal proceeding. First, section 1 is contained in Part I of the Act under the heading "Prevention of crime and disorder" whereas Part II under the heading "Criminal law" creates a number of offences and provides for their punishment. Secondly, section 1(3) provides that an application for an anti-social behaviour order shall be made by complaint to a magistrates' court, and a complaint is the appropriate procedure for commencing civil proceedings in a magistrates' court: see section 51 of the Magistrates 'Courts Act 1980.
- Accordingly, I conclude that under domestic law an application for an anti-social behaviour order is not a criminal proceeding but is a civil proceeding.

The European Convention on Human Rights

- Article 6(1) provides: "In the determination of his civil rights and obligations or of any criminal charge against him, everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing. Article 6(3) provides: "Everyone charged with a criminal offence has the following minimum rights . . . (d) to examine . . . witnesses against him . . ." The defendants submitted that under the jurisprudence of the Convention an application for an anti-social behaviour order is a criminal charge, and accordingly the defendants will not have a fair hearing under article 6 if the evidence against them of anti-social behaviour is hearsay evidence and they do not have the opportunity to cross-examine in court the persons who have made allegations of such behaviour against them. In these submissions the defendants were supported by the submissions advanced by counsel on behalf of Liberty which was given leave to intervene in these appeals.

room in deciding whether there is a criminal charge for the purposes of article 6 the European Court of Human Rights stated in Engel v The Netherlands (No 1) r EHRR 647, 678, para 82. that it has regard to three criteria, which are the classification of the proceedings in domestic law, the nature of the offence, and the severity of the penalty which may be imposed. Whilst I am satisfied that the application for an anti-social behaviour order is a civil proceeding in domestic law the European Court has stated that the classification of the proceedings in domestic law is of limited value and that the other two criteria are considerations of greater weight: see Oztiirk v Germany 6 EHRR 409, 422, para 52.

rot in relation to the second and third criteria the European Court stated in Oztiirk, at pp 423-414, para 53:

"according to the ordinary meaning of the terms, there generally come within the ambit of the criminal law offences that make their perpetrator liable to penalties intended, inter alia, to be deterrent and usually consisting of fines and of measures depriving the person of his liberty . . . the general character of the rule [of law infringed by the applicant] and the purpose of the penalty, being both deterrent and punitive, suffice to show that the offence in question was, in terms of article 6 of the Convention, criminal in nature."

- The complaints against the defendants under section 1 of the 1998 Act do not allege the commission of criminal offences for which punishment is sought. The fact that the backgrounds to the complaints were the alleged commission of a number of criminal offences does not mean that the complaints constituted charges of criminal offences. In LS' v Miller

2001 SC 977, the Inner House was considering section 52.(a.)(I) of the Children (Scotland) Act 1995 which provides that a child may be in need of compulsory measures of supervision where he "has committed an offence", and Lord President Rodger stated, at pp 989-990, para 23:
"In my view, once the procurator fiscal has decided not to proceed with the charge against a child and so there is no longer any possibility of proceedings resulting in a penalty, any subsequent proceedings under the 1995 Act are not criminal for the purposes of article 6. Although the reporter does indeed intend to show that the child concerned committed an offence, this is not for the purpose of punishing him but in order to establish a basis for taking appropriate measures for his welfare. That being so, the child who is notified of grounds for referral setting out the offence in question is not thereby 'charged with a criminal offence' in terms of article 6."

- In relation to the third criterion, I consider that the making of an anti-social behaviour order does not constitute a punishment or penalty imposed on the defendant. In my opinion the magistrate who heard the complaint against the defendant Clingham was correct when in the case stated for the opinion of the High Court he stated:
"These were civil proceedings of an injunctive nature imposing no penalty on the appellant but providing such measure of restraint as the court may find necessary to protect members of the public from his misbehaviour."

- The defendants relied on the decision of the European Commission of Human Rights ("the commission") and of the European Court in Steel v United Kingdom 28 EHRR 603. In that case some of the applicants who had been charged with a breach of the peace were committed to prison for refusing to agree to be bound over to keep the peace. The applicants complained (inter alia) that their rights under article 5 and article 6(3)(a) had been violated. In considering the claims of the applicants both the commission and the European Court expressed the opinion that, notwithstanding that breach of the peace is not classified as a criminal offence under English law, breach of the peace must be regarded as an

Lord Hutton
"offence" within the meaning of article y (I)(c). The commission stated in its A opinion, at pp 61 5-616:
The commission notes that under the domestic legal system, breach of the peace is not a criminal offence and binding over is a civil procedure. However, as the European Court of Human Rights has held [Ozturk v Germany (1984) 6 EHRR 409, 4x3-424, para 53]: '[There generally come within the ambit of the criminal law offences that make their perpetrator liable to penalties intended, inter alia, to be deterrent and usually consisting of fines and of measures depriving the person of his liberty. The rule at issue prescribes conduct of a certain kind and makes the resultant requirement subject to a sanction that is punitive . . . the general character of the rule and the purpose of the penalty, being both deterrent and punitive, suffice to show that the offence was, in terms of article 6 of the Convention, criminal in nature.'
"67. The proceedings brought against the first applicant for breaching the peace also display these characteristics: their deterrent nature is apparent from the way in which a person can be arrested for breach of the peace and subsequently bound over 'to keep the peace or be of good behaviour', in which case no penalty will be enforced, and the punitive element derives from the fact that if a person does not agree to be bound over, he will be imprisoned for a period of up to six months.
"68. In these circumstances, the commission considers the charge of breach of the peace to be a criminal offence and binding over proceedings to be 'criminal' in nature, for the purposes of article 6 of the Convention."
The court stated, at pp 63 5-636:
"48. Breach of the peace is not classed as a criminal offence under ^ English law. However, the court observes that the duty to keep the peace is in the nature of a public duty; the police have powers to arrest any person who has breached the peace or whom they reasonably fear will breach the peace; and the magistrates may commit to prison any person who refuses to be bound over not to breach the peace where there is evidence beyond reasonable doubt that his or her conduct caused or was likely to cause a breach of the peace and that he or she would otherwise cause a breach of the peace in the future.
"49. Bearing in mind the nature of the proceedings in question and the penalty at stake, the court considers that breach of the peace must be regarded as an 'offence' within the meaning of article 5(r)(c)."

- The defendants' principal submission in reliance on Steel was that both in proceedings for a breach of the peace and in proceedings for an antisocial behaviour order there was a two-stage process. First, there was a finding of a breach of the peace or a finding of anti-social behaviour and, secondly, there was imprisonment if the defendant refused to be bound over or if the defendant chose to disobey the anti-social behaviour order. Accordingly, if binding over proceedings are criminal proceedings for the purposes of article 6 it follows that an application for an anti-social behaviour order is also a criminal proceeding within the meaning of article 6.

- I am unable to accept the defendants' submissions for the reasons given by Lord Phillips of Worth Matravers MR in his judgment in McCann

Lord Hutton
[zoo1] I WLR 1084, 1100-1101, para 62, with which I am in respectful agreement. In particular I consider that the view expressed by the European Commission and the court is primarily based on the consideration that in the proceedings for breach of the peace before the magistrates' court the court has power in those proceedings themselves to commit the defendant to prison if he or she refuses to be bound over. Thus the commission stated, at 28 EHRR 603, 616, para 67: "the punitive clement derives from the fact that if a person does not agree to be bound over, he will be imprisoned for a period of up to six months" and the court stated, at p 636, para 45:
"Bearing in mind the nature of the proceedings in question and the penalty at stake, the court considers that breach of the peace must be regarded as an 'offence' within the meaning of article 5 (1) (c) The importance of the distinction between the power to commit to prison immediately on refusal to be bound over and the need for a subsequent prosecution to impose a punishment for breach of an anti-social behaviour order or a sex offender order under section 2 of the 1998 Act is referred to by Lord Bingham of Cornhill C] in B v Chief Constable of Avon and Somerset Constabulary [2001] 1 WLR 340, 353, para 27:
"In Percy v Director of Public Prosecutions I1995I 1 WLR 1382 the defendant had a choice between agreeing to be bound over and going to prison. Her refusal to agree to be bound over had an immediate and obvious penal consequence without any intervening stage. The threat of imprisonment was no doubt intended to be coercive, but it was also punitive, in my judgment that is a crucial distinction between Percy's case and any injunctive procedure such as in play here."
- The fact that the defendant would be liable to imprisonment under section 1(10) of the 1:998 Act if he chooses within the period specified in the order without reasonable excuse to do anything which he is prohibited from doing by the order, does not mean that the order itself constitutes a punishment or penalty. In my opinion, the reasoning of Lord Bingham of Cornhill CJ in B v Chief Constable of Avon and Somerset Constabulary [LOOT] IWLR 340, 3 52, para 25 in respect of a sex offender order made under section 2 of the 1998 Act applies with equal force to section 1: "The rationale of section 2 was, by means of an injunctive order, to seek to avoid the contingency of any further suffering by any further victim. It would also of course be to the advantage of a defendant if he were to be saved from further offending. As in the case of a civil injunction, a breach of the court's order may attract a sanction. But, also as in the case of a civil injunction, the order, although restraining the defendant from doing that which is prohibited, imposes no penalty or disability upon him."
- The jurisprudence of the European Court recognises that proceedings taken to obtain an order designed to prevent future harmful conduct, but not to impose a penalty for past offences, does not constitute the bringing of a criminal charge. In Guzzardi v Italy 3 EHRR 333 the complainant, a suspected Mafioso, by an order of the Milan Regional Court was placed under special supervision for three years with an obligation to reside within an area of 2.5 square kilometres on an island. He brought proceedings challenging the order and the proceedings terminated in the Court of Cassation which dismissed Guzzardi's appeal. The European Court held that article 6 was not engaged and stated, at pp 369-370, para 108:

"In the court's opinion, those proceedings did not involve the 'determination ... of a criminal charge', even when these words are construed within the meaning of the Convention. Whether the right to liberty, which was at stake (see paragraph 62 above), is to be qualified as a 'civil right' is a matter of controversy; in any event, the evidence does not reveal any infringement of paragraph 1 of article 6."
no In Raimondo v Italy 18 F.HRR 237 the applicant who was suspected of association with a Mafia-type organisation, was made subject to preventive measures which included being placed under special police supervision. He complained (inter alia) that the proceedings relating to his appeal against the special supervision had taken an unreasonable time in violation of article 6(1) of the Convention. The European Court rejected his complaint and held, referring to Guzzardi, at p 264, para 43 of its judgment:
"The court shares the view taken by the Government and the commission that special supervision is not comparable to a criminal sanction because it is designed to prevent the commission of offences. It follows that proceedings concerning it did not involve 'the determination, of a criminal charge'."
in in the present cases the determination of the applications did not involve "the determination, of a criminal charge" and the orders were designed to prevent the commission of anti-social behaviour in the future.
A fair bearing in the determination of civil rights
1.12 A further question arises whether the admission of hearsay evidence against the defendants constitutes a violation of their rights under article 6 to have a fair hearing in the determination of their civil rights.

A person against whom an anti-social behaviour order is made can have no valid claim that those parts of the order which prohibit him from using or engaging in any abusive, insulting, offensive, threatening or intimidating language or behaviour or from threatening or engaging in violence or damage against any person or property relate to his civil rights. A person has no civil right under domestic law to engage in such behaviour. To the extent that the order prohibits a defendant from entering a particular area or engaging in some activity which is prima facie lawful it can be argued that part of the order affects his civil rights so that article 6(1) is engaged. Articles 8(2) and 11(2} of the Convention permit such restrictions on the rights specified in them as are necessary in a democratic society for the prevention of disorder or crime or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others, and Lord Nicholls of Birkenhead has discussed the relationship between civil rights under domestic law {to which article 6(1) relates) and the rights guaranteed by the Convention in paragraphs 65 to 72 of his judgment in In re S (Minors) (Care Order: Implementation of Care Rian) [2002] 2 AC 291, 319-3 20. I wish to reserve my opinion on the question whether article 6(r) is engaged, but if there is a valid argument that the hearing of an application for an anti-social behaviour order against a defendant involves a determination of his civil rights and engages article 6(I), I am of the opinion that there is no unfairness in the admission of hearsay evidence against him, because the provisions of section 4 of the Civil Evidence Act 1995 lay down considerations which ensure that hearsay evidence is fairly weighed and assessed, section 4 providing:

"(1) In estimating the weight (if any) to be given to hearsay evidence in civil proceedings the court shall have regard to any circumstances from which any inference can reasonably be drawn as to the reliability or otherwise of the evidence.

"(z) Regard may be had, in particular, to the following—(a) whether it would have been reasonable and practicable for the party by whom the evidence was adduced to have produced the maker of the original statement as a witness; (b) whether the original statement was made contemporaneously with the occurrence or existence of the matters stated; (c) whether the evidence involves multiple hearsay; (d) whether any person involved had any motive to conceal or misrepresent matters; (e) whether the original statement was an edited account, or was made in collaboration with another or for a particular purpose; (f) whether the circumstances in which the evidence is adduced as hearsay are such as to suggest an attempt to prevent proper evaluation of its weight."

- The submissions of counsel on behalf of the defendants and on behalf of Liberty have laid stress on the human rights of the defendants. However the European Court has frequently affirmed the principle stated in Sporrong and Lonnroth v Sweden 5 F.HRR 35, 52, para 69, that the search for the striking of a fair balance "between the demands of the general interest of the community and the requirements of the protection of the individual's fundamental rights" is inherent in the whole of the Convention. In these cases which your Lordships have held are not criminal cases under the Convention and therefore do not attract the specific protection given by article 6(3)(d) (though even in criminal cases the European Court has recognised that "principles of fair trial also require that in appropriate cases the interests of the defence are balanced against those of witnesses or victims called upon to testify": see Doorson v The Netherlands (1996) F.HRR 330, 358, para 70), and having regard to the safeguards contained in section 4 of the 1995 Act, I consider that the striking of a fair balance between the demands of the general interest of the community (the community in this case being represented by weak and vulnerable people who claim that they are the victims of anti-social behaviour which violates their rights) and the requirements of the protection of the defendants' rights requires the scales to come down in favour of the protection of the community and of permitting the use of hearsay evidence in applications for anti-social behaviour orders.

The standard of proof

- I am in agreement with the opinions of my noble and learned friends Lord Steyn and Lord Hope of Craighead on this point and for the reasons which they give I would hold that in proceedings under section 1 of the 1998 Act the standard of proof that ought to be applied to allegations about the defendants' past behaviour is the criminal standard.

- For the reasons which I have given I would dismiss the appeals of A the McCann defendants and would declare that the House had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal of the defendant Clingham.

LORD HOBHOUSE OF WOODBOROUGH

- My Lords, for the reasons given by my noble and learned friends Lord Steyn and Lord Hope of Craighead and in agreement with the opinion of my noble and learned friend Lord Hutton, in particular what he has said e in paragraph 113 of his opinion, I too would make the orders proposed.

R. v DEAN BONESS AND OTHERS

COURT OF APPEAL (Lord Justice Hooper, Mr Justice Roderick Evans, and Mr Justice Pitchers): October 14, 2005

[2005] EWCA Crim 2395; [2006] I Cr. App. R. (S.) 120

Anti-social behaviour orders; Sentencing guidelines

Crime and Disorder Act 1998, S. 1 C—antisocial behaviour order on conviction—general considerations

H2 Observations on the considerations which are relevant to the making of orders under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998, s. 1C.

H3 Bones: the appellant pleaded guilty to one count of burglary of a dwelling and one of handling stolen goods. The appellant and another person entered an unoccupied house and stole items to the value of £4,800. Following another burglary, the next day, a search of the appellant's home resulted in the discovery of property stolen in that burglary. The appellant had six previous appearances for offences involving vehicle crime, attempted burglary, violence, handling stolen goods and using threatening behaviour. He was subject to two community orders at the time of the offences. Sentenced to three years' detention in a young offender institution, and subjected to an order under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998, S.1 for a period of five years' prohibiting him from entering any public car park within a specified area except in the course of lawful employment, entering any land or building on land which formed part of educational premises except as an enrolled pupil, wearing or having with him in any public place anything which covered or could be used to cover the face or part the face, having with him in a public place any item which could be used in the commission of a burglary or theft from vehicles except one door or bicycle lock key, having possession of any article or carried in public any vehicle that could be used as a weapon, remaining on any shop, commercial or hospital premises if asked to leave by staff or entering any premises from which he was barred, entering any private land adjoining any dwelling premises or commercial premises outside the opening hours of those premises without express permission, touching or entering any unattended vehicle without the express permission of the owner, acting or inciting others to act in an anti-social manner, congregating in groups in a manner causing or likely to cause any person to fear for their safety or congregating in groups of more than six persons in an outdoor public place, doing anything which might cause damage, not being anywhere but his home address or at an alternative address agreed in advance between the hours of 23.30 and 07.00, being carried on any vehicle other than a vehicle in lawful use, and being in company with 12 named individuals. The order was to run for five years from the appellant's release from custody.

H4 Bebbington and others: nine appellants pleaded guilty and one was convicted of affray or, in the case of Bebbington, threatening behaviour. The appellants with others were supporters of Chester City EC. They were drinking in a public house in Chester when a group of supporters of Wrexham EC. arrived at Chester station on their way home from a match. The appellants were warned by police not to leave the public house. The appellants did leave the public house and a confrontation occurred between them and the Wrexham supporters. The confrontation involved the singing of loud and abusive songs and threats of violence. Sentenced (except in the case of the appellant Bebbington) to custodial sentences of between four months and two years' imprisonment, with an order under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 S.1C prohibiting the defendant from entering any premises for the purpose of attending any football matches in England and Wales which were regulated for the purposes of the Football Spectators Act 1989, entering a specified area on any day on which Chester City were playing at home, during a period beginning three hours before kick-off and ending six hours after kick off, attending within a 10-mile radius of any premises outside Chester at which Chester City were playing on the day of any away match, and on any day on which England or Wales played a regulated football match in England or Wales, going within a three-mile radius of the stadium where the match was being played during the period commencing three hours before kick-off and ending six hours after kick off. The orders were to last between four years and eight years in the different cases.

Held: the power to make an anti-social behaviour order was introduced by the Crime and Disorder Act 1998, which came into force on April 1, 1999. There were various procedures which could lead to the making of an order, in particular one which involved an application by a relevant authority to a magistrates' court. The Court was concerned with the power to make an order following a conviction for a relevant offence. The power was granted by the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s. 1C, as inserted by the Police Reform Act 2002, and subsequently amended by the Anti-Social Behaviour Act 2003, s.86. The section provided that if the court considered that the offender had acted, at any time since April 1, 1999, in an anti-social manner, and that an order under the section was necessary to protect persons in any place in England and Wales from further anti-social acts by him, the court might make an order prohibiting the offender from doing anything described in the order. It had been held in McCann v Manchester Crown Court [2003] 1 Cr. App. R. 27 that proceedings on complaint under s. 1 of the Act were civil in nature, that hearsay evidence was admissible, and that the magistrates' court had to be satisfied to the criminal standard that the defendant had acted in an anti-social manner. The test for whether the order was necessary required an exercise of judgement or evaluation. That did not require proof beyond a reasonable doubt. In A v Acton Youth Court (unreported, April 26, 2005) it had been said that the actual and potential consequences of an order made it particularly important that procedural fairness should be scrupulously observed. In (Shane Tony) [2004] 2 Cr. App. R.(S.) 63 (p.343) the Court had stated that the terms of the order must be precise and capable of being understood by the offender, the findings of fact giving rise to the making of the order must be recorded, the order must be explained to the offender, the exact terms of the order must be pronounced in open court and a written order must accurately reflect the order as pronounced. Because an order must be precise and capable of being understood, a court should ask itself before making an order "are the terms of this order clear so that the offender will know precisely what it is that he is prohibited from doing?" The Home Office had published guidance on the use of anti-social behaviour orders.

H6 An order under s. 1C took effect on the day on which it was made, but a court might provide that requirements be suspended until the offender was released from custody. The Court had observed that where custodial sentences in excess of a few months were passed and offenders were liable to be released on licence, the circumstances in which there would be a demonstrable necessity to make a suspended anti-social behaviour order to take effect on release would be limited, although there would be cases in which geographical restraints could properly supplement licence conditions. In Vittles [2005] 1 Cr. App. R. (S.) 8 (p.3!) a suspended order had been upheld.

An order had effect for the period specified, not less than two years, or until further order. In Ionergan v Lewes Crown Court [2005] EWHC 457 (Admin), it was said that just because an order must run for a minimum of two years, it did not follow that each prohibition must endure for the life of the order.

H8 The essential requirement of the section was that an order could be made only if it was necessary to protect persons in any place in England and Wales from further anti-social acts by the offender. The lest for making an order prohibiting the offender from doing something was necessity. Each separate order prohibiting a person from doing a specified thing must be necessary to protect persons from further anti-social acts by him. Any order should be tailor-made for the individual offender, not designed on a word processor for use in every case. The court must ask itself when considering any specific order prohibiting the offender from doing something, "is this order necessary to protect persons in any place in England and Wales from further anti-social acts by him?" The purpose of an order was not to punish an offender. This followed from the requirement that the order must be necessary to protect persons from further anti-social acts by him. The Court had been told that the imposition of an order was sometimes sought by the defendant's advocate at the sentencing stage, in the hope that the court might make an order as an alternative to a custodial sentence. A court must not allow itself to be diverted in this way—it might be better to decide the appropriate sentence and then move on to consider whether an order should be made or not after the sentence had been passed, albeit at the same hearing.

H9 It followed from the requirement that the order must be necessary to protect persons from further anti-social acts by the offender, that the court should not impose an order which prohibited an offender from committing a specified criminal offence if the sentence which could be passed following a conviction for the offence should be a sufficient deterrent. If following a conviction for the offence, the offender would be liable to imprisonment, then the order would add nothing other than to increase the sentence, if the sentence for the offence was less than five years' imprisonment. If the offender was not deterred from compelling the offence by a sentence of imprisonment for the offence, the order was not likely further to deter and therefore was not necessary. It had been said in that the Court was not persuaded that the inclusion of matters among the prohibitions which were criminal offences was to be actively discouraged. The Court in that case took the view that there was no harm in reminding offenders that certain matters did constitute criminal conduct. The Court would only comment that the test for making an order was not whether the offender needed reminding that certain matters did constitute criminal conduct, but whether the order was necessary.

H10 It had been held, rightly in the Court's view, that an order should not be used merely to increase the sentence of imprisonment which an offender was liable to receive. In Kirby [2006] 1 Cr. App. R. f S.) 26 (p. 151) an order had been made prohibiting the offender from driving, attempting to drive or allowing himself to be carried in any motor vehicle which been taken without the consent of the owner, and driving or attempting to drive a motor vehicle until the expiration of the appellant's period of disqualification. The judge's purpose in making the order was to secure the result that if the appellant committed such offence again the court would not be limited to the maximum penalty for the offences themselves but would be able to impose up to five years' imprisonment for breaches of the anti-social behaviour order. The Court in Kirby considered that this was not a way in which the power should normally be exercised. This decision was in conflict with Hall |2005] 1 Cr. App. R. (S.) 118 (p.671), but in Williams [2006] 1 Cr. App. R. f S.) 56 (p.305) the Court preferred Kirby to Hall. The Court in the present case also agreed with Kirby. Different considerations might apply were the maximum sentence was only a fine, but the court must still go through all the steps to make sure that an order was necessary.

HI I The aim of an order was to prevent anti-social behaviour. What the police or other authorities needed was to be able to lake action before the anti-social behaviour look place. If for example a court was faced by an offender who caused criminal damage by spraying graffiti, then the order should be aimed at facilitating action to be taken to prevent graffiti being sprayed by him or others. An order in clear and simple terms preventing the offender from being in possession of a can of spray paint in a public place gave the police or others responsible for protecting property an opportunity to take action in advance of the actual spraying and made it clear lo the offender that he had lost the right to carry such a can for the duration of the order.

H12 In addition to the court considering that the order prohibiting the offender from doing something was necessary to protect persons from further anti-social acts by the offender, the terms of the order must be proportionate in the sense that they must be commensurate with the risk to be guarded against. This was particularly important where the order might interfere with Convention rights protected by the Human Rights Act 1998. In considering the order made against the appellant Bones, the Court accepted that the appellant had consistently engaged in antisocial behaviour over a period of approximately three years. He was a persistent prolific offender. His anti-social behaviour included threatening behaviour, vehicle crime and offences of dishonesty including burglary. He was sentenced to a custodial sentence of three years' detention and was thus subject to a period on licence subject to recall or return to custody. It was far from clear that it was necessary to make an order in respect of the appellant. Considering the detailed terms of the order, some of the terms were unnecessary or unclear. The order would be quashed. In the case of Bebbington and others it was not necessary to make an order in respect of all but two of the appellants in view of their antecedent history. So far as the other two appellants were concerned, all the prohibitions would be quashed except the prohibitions relating to attending football matches played at the home ground of Chester City, and orders would be added in both cases restricting the appellants concerned from entering a specified area in the vicinity of Chester railway station on any day on which Wrexham were playing a regulated football match away from their home stadium, during a period commencing three hours before the beginning of that match and ending six hours after the beginning of that match.

JUDGMENT
Hooper L.J.: On April 7, 2005 we reduced the sentence of imprisonment passed on the appellant Dean Bones and adjourned the appeal against the making of an anti-social behaviour order ("ASBO") to enable the CPS to instruct counsel who would be able to give us both general assistance about ASBOs and specific assistance about the ASBO in this case. We resumed the hearing on July 5, 2005 and announced, at the conclusion, that the ASBO was quashed for reasons which we would give later. Mr Rees had prepared a comprehensive skeleton argument and we are particularly grateful to him for his help and to those in the Home Office who have assisted him. We have incorporated much of what he wrote into the judgment.
- On July 5, we also heard the appeals of Shaun Anthony Bebbington and others.
We granted leave to appeal and any necessary extensions of time. At the conclusion of the hearing we announced our decision to reduce the sentence of 2 years' imprisonment passed on Lee William Schofield and substitute for it a sentence of 18 months' imprisonment. We look the view that a sentence of that length was sufficient. That was the only sentence of imprisonment which we were asked to consider (the other appellants had served their sentences). We quashed all the ASBOs other than those in respect of Schofield and Ian Jeremy Stuart Bruce. In these two cases we announced that we would alter the terms of the orders substantially but, given that we needed further material, we said that the precise detail of the amended orders would be announced with our reserved judgment. We have now received that detail.
Bones
- On April 7, Pilchers J. gave the following reasons for reducing the sentence of imprisonment passed on Bones:
a. This 18-year-old appellant pleaded guilty to one count of dwelling house burglary and one of the handing stolen goods in the Basingstoke Magistrates' Court and was committed to the Crown Court for sentence. On 17th December 2004 at the Crown Court at Winchester he was sentenced to a total of three years' custody and made subject to an Anti-Social Behaviour Order for a period of five years to run from the date of his release.
b. The events of burglary were committed during the morning of 23rd October 2004 at an unoccupied house in Basingstoke. The appellant and another entered through a kitchen window and carried out an untidy search, stealing items to the value of £4,800, some of which were of great sentiment value to the owner. When the appellant was arrested a watch, which had been taken during the burglary was recovered from him.
c. There was another burglary the next day from a house in Basingstoke. When the appellant was arrested, his home was searched and property from that burglary was recovered. He admitted buying these items knowing they were stolen.

R. v DEAN BONES AND OTHERS
- The appellant has a number of previous convictions. He was before the courts on six occasions during 2002, 2003 and 2004 for offences involving vehicle crime, attempted burglary, an offence of violence, handling stolen goods and using threatening behaviour. He received a series of community orders and in respect of two of them he was in breach by reason of these offences.
- The judge heard evidence in addition to that which he found sufficient to make the ASBO as we have indicated. That, as we have also indicated, will be considered in detail and in principle on a later occasion.
- For the purposes of today's hearing we deal simply with the custodial sentence. It is argued by counsel that the sentence of three years was loo long following a very early plea of guilty. Applying the principles contained in the well-known case of Mainerney we are satisfied that this sentence for offences in respect of which early pleas had been entered is too long. Bearing in mind the clear refusal of the appellant to comply with community orders, a sentence of custody was inevitable.
- However, the dwelling house burglary, although of quite high value and causing considerable distress, fell into the category of an offence committed by a first-time burglar, albeit with those two aggravating features. There was also the receiving of stolen goods which the appellant must have known had come from a dwelling house burglary. The total sentence appropriate for that offending, in our judgment, would be one of 18 months.
- We therefore allow the appeal to the extent of reducing the sentences to 18 months and six months concurrently. To that extent, as we say, the appeal in relation to the custodial term is allowed."
The ASBO was in the following form:
"The court found that
(i) The defendant had acted in an anti-social manner which caused or was likely to cause harassment, alarm, or distress to one or more persons not of the same household as himself as shown by:
a. The present conviction.
b. His previous convictions; and
c. The summary of anti-social behaviour acts set out in the request form attached
And that

(ii) an order was necessary to protect persons in England and Wales from further anti-social acts by him.
It is ordered that the defendant, Dean Bones is prohibited from:
In England and Wales:
Entering any public car park within the Basingstoke and Deane Borough Council area, except in the course of lawful employment.
Entering any land or building on the land which forms a part of educational premises except as an enrolled pupil with the agreement of the head of the establishment or in the course of lawful employment.

The ASBOs were in the terms of a football banning order, the court having no jurisdiction to pass an actual football banning order.
"The defendant must not for the duration of the order,

- Enter any premises for the purpose of attending any football matches in England and Wales that are regulated for the purposes of the Football Spectators Act 1989.
- On any day that Chester City AFC play at a regulated football match at the Deva Stadium during the period commencing three hours prior to kick off and ending six hours after kick-off, enter any area inside the shaded boundary as defined in the two attached maps.
- Attend within a 10-mile radius of any premises outside Chester at which football matches are played by Chester AFC on the day of any away match.
- On any day that England or Wales play a regulated football match in England or Wales, during the period commencing three hours prior to kick-off and ending six hours after lick-off, go within a 3-mile radius of the relevant stadium where the match is being played.

We take the facts from the CACD summary:
"At about 7pm on 10 January 2004, there was a confrontation between supporters of Wrexham football club and Chester City football club in the centre of Chester. The applicants were all supporters of Chester City and some members of the two rival groups associated themselves with the hard core of the hooligan element attached to both football clubs. The two rival gangs came together through a mutual interest in football and they had stayed together because of a mutual interest in hooliganism and there had been a long-standing and deep antipathy between the two groups. The supporters of Wrexham had travelled back from a game at Chesterfield and had alighted at the station in Chester. The applicants were drinking in a public house and had been warned by the police not to leave the public house when the police became aware that the Wrexham group were at the station. However, the group did leave the public house and went across the road to the station with the intention of fighting with the group from Wrexham. There was an element of pre-meditation about the incident because the group left the public house as the group of Wrexham supporters arrived at the station and attempted to leave the station. The group from Chester did not enter the station because the groups were kept apart by police officers. The actions of the Chester group were caught on CCTV, they were heard responding to the taunts of the Wrexham group and began singing loud and abusive songs. Members of the public, employees at the station and the police officers felt threatened by their actions.

R. v DEAN BONES AND OTHERS
The applicants all played different roles in the incident, some having substantially more involvement than others and, on the prosecution's case, some of the defendants, particularly Wood and Schofield, were the ringleaders and orchestrated the threats of violence. The CCTV evidence was the basis of the prosecution case against the applicants."

- We have watched the CCTV evidence.

All of the appellants were of good character other than Schofield and Bruce. Schofield had a previous conviction for affray as well as other offences. Bruce had one relevant previous conviction in 2004 for being drunk and disorderly. The authors of the various pre-sentence reports recommended non-custodial sentences given the low risk of reoffending. As the judge said in passing sentence all of the defendants other than Schofield had expressed remorse. Some of the appellants had good character references, including Bruce.

In passing sentence, the judge said that the defendants had deliberately left the public house with the intention of fighting the group from Wrexham. There could be no other sensible explanation as to what happened that day and it was clearly shown on the video. He said that the people of Chester and visitors to the city had to know that the courts would take a firm stand against this type of criminal behaviour. In addition, the evidence at Schofield's trial indicated that the numbers of the younger element in the football hooligans in Chester had grown significantly over the last two years and that was an issue that could not be ignored. The courts would not tolerate such behaviour and a message had to be sent out to people like them that such behaviour would not be tolerated. All bar Schofield had pleaded guilty and they would receive credit for those pleas. Wood was the most prominent of the protagonists. He threw a bottle at the police and he had a bad record for offences of violence, including one for an offence very similar to this. Schofield was not only the oldest of the defendants, but he also directed others. He was not shown outwardly playing an active role, but by his mere presence he made sure that others were there. He was seen shouting and on a number of occasions had clearly instructed others to do things and they had followed his lead and instructions. He was the controlling mind behind what was going on. He also had a previous conviction for a very similar offence. The others had all expressed their remorse and had acted out of character.

ASBOs

The power to make an ASBO was introduced by s. 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 (CDA 1998) which came into force on April 1, 1999. In McCann v Manchester Crown Court [2002} UKHL 39; [2003] 1 A.C. 787; [2003] 1 Cr. App. R. 27 (p.419) Lord Sleyn described the social problem that S.1 of the 1998 Act was designed to address. He referred to the fear, misery and distress that might be caused by outrageous anti-social behaviour, usually in urban areas, often by young persons and groups of young persons. He said:

"In recent years this phenomenon became a serious problem. There appeared to be a gap in the law. The criminal law offered insufficient protection to communities. Public confidence in the rule of law was undermined by a not unreasonable view in some communities that the law failed them."

There are various procedures which can lead to the making of an ASBO, in particular, that which involves an application by a relevant authority (e.g. a local authority) to a magistrates' court. We are concerned with the power to make an ASBO following conviction for a relevant offence, a power granted to avoid the need to invoke the procedure in the magistrates' court and thus a further hearing. The power was granted by s. 1C of the Crime and Disorder Act 1988 ("CDA 1998)", as inserted by s.64 of the Police Reform Act 2002 and amended by s.86 of the Anti-Social Behaviour Act 2003. However, the principles are the same irrespective of the procedural route.

Section 1 C (2) of CDA 1998 provides:

"If the court considers—

1. that the offender has acted, at any time since the commencement date [1st April 1999] in an anti-social manner, that is to say in a manner that caused or was likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress to one or more persons not of the same household as himself; and

2. that an order under this section is necessary to protect persons in any place in England and Wales from further anti-social acts by him, it may make an order which prohibits the offender from doing anything described in the order." (Underlining added)

An ASBO is an order prohibiting a person from doing the "thing" described in the order.

We deal first with some procedural points. In McCann the House of Lords held that the proceedings on complaint by a relevant authority under s. 1 of CDA 1998 were civil in nature, that hearsay evidence was admissible, that the magistrates' court had to be satisfied to the criminal standard that the defendant had acted in an anti-social manner, The test for whether the order was necessary required an exercise of judgment or evaluation and did not require proof beyond a reasonable doubt. In W. v Acton Youth Court [2005] EWHC 954 (Sedley L.J. and Pitchers J.) confirmed that proceedings under s. 1C are civil proceedings.

In that case Pitchers J. said that:

"The actual and potential consequences for the subject of an ASBO make it particularly important that procedural fairness is scrupulously observed."

(Shane Tony) [2004] EWCA Grim 287; [20041 2 Cr. App. R. (S.) 63 (p.343) Henriques J. giving the judgment of the Court (presided over by Lord Woolf C.J.) said (para.[34]):

"In our judgment the following principles clearly emerge:

Page:247
R. v DEAN BONES AND OTHERS
- The terms of the order must be precise and capable of being understood by offender.
- The findings of fact giving rise to the making of the order must be recorded.
- The order must be explained to the offender.
- The exact terms of the order must be pronounced in open court and the written order must accurately reflect the order as pronounced."

Because an ASBO must obviously be precise and capable of being understood by the offender, a court should ask itself before making an order: "Are the terms of this order clear so that the offender will know precisely what it is that he is prohibited from doing?"
The Home Office in a 2002 publication entitled "A Guide to Anti-Social Behaviour Orders and Acceptable Behaviour Contracts" gave examples of the types of anti-social behaviour which the Home Office considered could be tackled by ASBOs. The list (which does not purport to be exhaustive) comprises: harassment of residents or passers-by, verbal abuse, criminal damage, vandalism, noise nuisance, writing graffiti, engaging in threatening behaviour in large groups, racial abuse, smoking or drinking alcohol while under age, substance misuse, joyriding, begging, prostitution, kerb-crawling, throwing missiles, assault and vehicle crime.
Home Office guidance suggests that prohibitions, should amongst other things:
be reasonable and proportionate; be realistic and practical.
be in terms which make it easy to determine and prosecute a breach.
In the report of the working group set up under Thomas L.J. there is a section which identifies elements of best practice adopted within the courts when dealing with the terms of an ASBO. Included amongst these elements are:
the prohibition should be capable of being easily understood by the defendant.
the condition should be enforceable in the sense that it should allow a breach to be readily identified and capable of being proved.
exclusion zones should be clearly delineated with the use of clearly marked maps.
individuals whom the defendant is prohibited from contacting or associating with should be clearly identified. in the case of a foreign national, consideration should be given to the need for the order to be translated.
The report of the working group also provides examples of general prohibitions imposed by the courts which in their view were specific and enforceable and could be incorporated in ASBOs in order to protect persons from a wide range of anti-social behaviour. These include conditions prohibiting the offender from.

living anywhere other than a specified address without the permission of a nominated person.
entering an area edged in red on the attached map including both footways of any road which forms the boundary area.
visiting a named individual unless accompanied by a parent or legal guardian.
associating with a named individual in a public place.
leaving his home between certain hours except in the case of emergency etc.
An order made under s. 1C lakes effect on the day on which it was made, but the court may provide in any such order that such requirements of the order as it may specify shall, during any period when the offender is detained in legal custody, be suspended until his release from that custody (S.1C(5)). In the Court observed that where custodial sentences in excess of a few months were passed and offenders were liable to be released on licence (and therefore subject to recall) the circumstances in which there would be a demonstrable necessity to make a suspended anti-social behaviour order, to take effect on release, would be limited, although there would be cases in which geographical restraints could properly supplement licence conditions.
Anthony Malcolm Vittles]2004] EWCA Crim 1089 [20051 1 Cr. App. R.(S.) 8 is an example of a case in which the Court of Appeal decided that there was a demonstrable necessity to make a "suspended" ASBO, despite the fact that the appellant was sentenced to a total of three years and 10 months' imprisonment, The appellant, who was a heavy drug user, admitted breaking into between 10 and 30 vehicles belonging to American servicemen who lived off airbases used by American forces. The offences involved theft of items from the motor cars to a value of £3,500. In upholding the making of the order, although reducing the term, the Court of Appeal referred to and said that they took the view that the transient, vulnerable, nature of the American population, specifically targeted by the appellant, made it appropriate that, exceptionally, an anti-social behaviour order should be made, notwithstanding the imposition of a substantial prison sentence.
An order shall have effect for a period (not less than two years) specified in the order or until further order (S, l C (9) and 1C (7)). In Lonergan v Lewes Crown Court |20()5] EWHC 457; [2005] 1 W.L.R. 2570; [2005] A.C.D. 84 (Admin) Maurice Kay L.J. said in the course of delivering the judgment that just because an ASBO must run for a minimum of two years, it does not follow that each and every prohibition within a particular order must endure for the life of the order. Although doubt was expressed about this in the report of the working group set up by Thomas L.J., in our view Maurice Kay L.J. is right. It may be necessary to include a prohibition which would need to be amended or removed after a period of Lime for example when the offender starts work (provided that at least one prohibition is ordered to have effect for at least two years). Maurice Kay L.J. also said (para. [7)] that the statute requires the order to be "substantially and not just formally prohibitory."

R. v DEAN BONES AND OTHERS

- There are provisions for applications to vary or discharge an order (see s. 1 C (6) and s. 140 of the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 which inserts s. 1CA of the CD A 1998).
- We turn to the requirement that an order can only be made if it is necessary to protect persons in any place in England and Wales from further anti-social acts by the offender. Following a finding that the offender has acted in an anti-social manner (whether or not the act constitutes a criminal offence), the lest for making an order prohibiting the offender from doing something is one of necessity. Each separate order prohibiting a person from doing a specified thing must be necessary to protect persons from further anti-social acts by him. Any order should therefore be tailor-made for the individual offender, not designed on a word processor for use in every case. The court must ask itself when considering any specific order prohibiting the offender from doing something, "Is this order necessary to protect persons in any place in England and Wales from further anti-social acts by him?"
- The purpose of an ASBO is not to punish an offender (see Lonergan, para.[10]}. This principle follows from the requirement that the order must be necessary to protect persons from further anti-social acts by him. The use of an ASBO to punish an offender is thus unlawful. We were told during the course of argument that the imposition of an ASBO is sometimes sought by the defendant's advocate at the sentencing stage, hoping that the court might make an ASBO order as an alternative to prison or other sanction. A court must not allow itself to be diverted in this way—indeed it may be better to decide the appropriate sentence and then move on to consider whether an ASBO should be made or not after sentence has been passed, albeit at the same hearing.
- It follows from the requirement that the order must be necessary to protect persons from further anti-social acts by him, that the court should not impose an order which prohibits an offender from committing a specified criminal offence if the sentence which could be passed following conviction for the offence should be a sufficient deterrent. If following conviction for the offence the offender would be liable to imprisonment, then an ASBO would add nothing other than to increase the sentence if the sentence for the offence is less than five years' imprisonment. But if the offender is not going to be deterred from committing the offence by a sentence of imprisonment for that offence, the ASBO is not likely (it may be thought) further to deter and is therefore not necessary. In, Henriques J. said (para. [3()]):

"Next, it is submitted that (two of] the prohibitions are redundant as they prohibit conduct which is already subject to a general prohibition by the Public Order Act 1986 and the Prevention of Crime Act 1953 respectively. In that regard we are by no means persuaded that the inclusion of such matters is to be actively discouraged. So far as more minor offences are concerned, we Lake the view that there is no harm in reminding offenders that certain matters do constitute criminal conduct, although we would only encourage the inclusion of comparatively minor criminal offences in the terms of such orders."

R. v DEAN BONES AND OTHERS

We would only make one comment on this passage. The test for making an order is not whether the offender needs reminding that certain matters do constitute criminal conduct, but whether it is necessary.

It has been held, rightly in our view, that an ASBO should not be used merely to increase the sentence of imprisonment which an offender is liable to receive. In Kirby [2005] EWCA Crim 1228; [2006] I Cr. App. R.(S.) 26 (p.S51) an ASBO had been made prohibiting the offender from driving, attempting to drive or allowing himself to be carried in any motor vehicle which had been taken without the consent of the owner or other lawful authority, and driving or attempting to drive a motor vehicle until after the expiration of his period of disqualification. As the Court (presided over by Maurice Kay LJ) found, the judge's purpose in making this order was to secure the result that if the appellant committed such offences again the court would not be limited to the maximum penalty for the offences themselves but would be able to impose up to five years' imprisonment for breach of the anti-social behaviour order. David Clarke J giving the judgment of the Court said:

"In our judgment this decision of the court [in R. r P] and the earlier case of [C v Sunderland Youth Court [2003] EWHC 2385; [2004] 1 Cr. App. R.(S.) 76 (p.443)] serve to demonstrate that to make an anti-social behaviour order in a case such as the present case, where the underlying objective was to give the court higher sentencing powers in the event of future similar offending, is not a use of the power which should normally be exercised."

That decision was in conflict with an earlier decision Hall [2004] EWCA Crim 2671; [2005] 1 Cr. App. R. (S.) 118 (p.671) (Hunt and Tugenhat J. J.), the correctness of which was doubled by Dr Thomas ([2005] Crim. L.R. 152). In Williams [2006] 1 Cr. App. R. (S.) 56 (p.305), the Court (Mance L.J., Elias J. and Sir Charles Mantell) preferred Kirby to Hall. We also agree with the decision in Kirby.

- Different considerations may apply if the maximum sentence is only a fine, but the court must still go through all the steps to make sure that an ASBO is necessary.
- There is another reason why a court should be reluctant to impose an order which prohibits an offender from, or merely from, committing a specified criminal offence. The aim of an ASBO is to prevent anti-social behaviour. To prevent it the police or other authorities need to be able to take action before the anti-social behaviour it is designed to prevent takes place, if, for example, a court is faced by an offender who causes criminal damage by spraying graffiti then the order should be aimed at facilitating action to be taken to prevent graffiti spraying by him and/or his associates before it takes place. An order in clear and simple terms preventing the offender from being in possession of a can of spray paint in a public place gives the police or others responsible for protecting the property an opportunity to lake action in advance of the actual spraying and makes it clear to the offender that he has lost the right to carry such a can for the duration of the order.
- If a court wishes to make an order prohibiting a group of youngsters from racing cars or motor bikes on an estate or driving at excessive speed (anti-social behaviour for those living on the estate), then the order should not (normally) prohibit driving whilst disqualified. It should prohibit, for example, the offender whilst on the estate from taking part in, or encouraging, racing, or driving at excessive speed. It might also prevent the group from congregating with named others in a particular area of the estate. Such an order gives those responsible for enforcing order on the estate the opportunity to take action to prevent the anti-social conduct, it is to be hoped, before its takes place. Neighbours can alert the police who will not have to wait for the commission of a particular criminal offence. The ASBO will be breached not just by the offender driving but by his giving encouragement by being a passenger or a spectator. It matters not for the purposes of enforcing the ASBO whether he has or has not a driving licence entitling him to drive.

- Not only must the court before imposing an order prohibiting the offender from doing something consider that such an order is necessary to protect persons from further anti-social acts by him; the terms of the order must be proportionate in the sense that they must be commensurate with the risk to be guarded against. This is particularly important where an order may interfere with an ECHR right protected by the Human Rights Act 1998, e.g. Arts 8, 10 and 11.
- We think that bail conditions provide a useful analogy. A defendant may be prohibited from contacting directly or indirectly a prosecution witness or entering a particular area near the alleged victim's home. The aim is to prevent the defendant trying to tamper with witnesses or committing a further offence. But the police do not have to wait until he has tampered or committed a further offence and thus committed a very serious offence. If he breaks the conditions even without intending to tamper, he is in breach of his bail conditions and liable to be remanded in custody. The victim has the comfort of knowing that if the defendant enters the prescribed area, the police can be called Lo Lake action. The victim does not have to wait for the offence to happen again.
- We look at some examples of how the Divisional Court and this Court have approached ASBOs.
- In McGrath [2005] EWCA Crim 353; [2005] 2 Cr. App. R. (S.) 85 (p.529) considered the terms of an ASBO made under s. 1C in respect of an appellant, aged 25, with an appalling record who pleaded guilty to a count of theft which involved breaking into a car in a station car park and stealing various compact discs. The ASBO contained (amongst others) the following prohibitions:

Entering any other car park whether on payment or otherwise within the counties of Hertfordshire, Bedfordshire, or Buckinghamshire.

Trespassing on any land belonging to any person whether legal or natural within those counties.

Having in his possession in any public place any window hammer, screwdriver, torch or any tool or implement which could be used for the purpose of breaking into motor vehicles."

- In respect of term 2, the Court of Appeal held that it was unjustifiably draconian and loo wide; it would, for example, prevent the appellant from entering, even as a passenger, any car park in a supermarket. Similar considerations applied lo term 3.11"the appellant look a wrong turn on a walk and entered someone's property, he would be at risk of a five-year prison sentence. The Court of Appeal look the view that term 4 was unacceptably wide. The meaning of the words “too! or implement” was impossible to ascertain. Insofar as the wording of term 4 was sufficiently qualified by the final wording “which could be used for the purpose of breaking into motor vehicles”, the Court of Appeal observed that, effectively, the term overlaps with the offence of going equipped.

- In IV v DPP [2005] EWHC 1333 held that a clause in an ASBO made in respect of a young offender which prohibited him from committing any criminal offence was plainly loo wide and unenforceable. There was a danger that W would not know what a criminal offence was and what was not. It was well established that an order had to be clear and in terms that would enable an individual to know what he could and could not do. A general restriction was not necessary where specific behaviour restrictions were in place. Brooke L.J. said (para.[8]) that, given the offender’s previous convictions for theft, a prohibition against committing theft “might not have been inappropriate”. We have already expressed our reservations about such a prohibition.

- In the Court expressed doubt about whether an ASBO is appropriate if the anti-social conduct is itself a serious offence, such as robbery. The Court reviewed the propriety of making an anti-social behaviour in respect of an appellant, aged 15 at the Lime of the offences, who pleaded guilty to assault with intent to rob, robbery, theft, false imprisonment, and attempted robbery. He was involved in a number of incidents in which he approached younger boys, threatened them and in one case struck a boy with a stick and stole their mobile phones. The appellant was made the subject of an order under S.1C of CDA 1998. The effect of the order was Lo prevent the appellant from acting in various ways, principally excluding him from two parks and an airport. In the course of the judgment, Henriques J. giving the judgment observed: “It will be readily observed from a consideration of the Home Office ‘Guide Lo anti-social behaviour orders’ that the conduct primarily envisaged as triggering these orders was for a less grave offence than street robbery, namely graffiti, abusive and intimidating language, excessive noise, fouling the street with litter, drunken behaviour and drug dealing. Doubtless in drafting that report the Home Office had in mind that courts have considerable powers to restrain robbers. We do not go so far as to suggest that anti-social behaviour orders are necessarily inappropriate in cases with characteristics such as the present.”

- We see no reason why, in appropriate circumstances, an order should not be made of the kind in excluding an offender from two parks and an airport if that is where he is committing robberies (or committing other anti-social behav-iour). Such an order enables those responsible for the safety of the prescribed areas an opportunity to act before a robbery is committed by the offender.

- In Werner [2004] EWCA Grim 2931 the female appellant had committed a number of offences over a relatively short period of time which involved stealing credit cards, a cheque book, and other items from hotel rooms while the occupants were out and using the cards to obtain services and goods. In addition to passing a sentence of imprisonment, the judge made the appellant the subject of an ASBO under s. 1C of CDA 1998, prohibiting her from entering any hotel, guesthouse, or similar premises anywhere within the Greater London Area, It was submitted on the appellant’s behalf that this was an inappropriate and improper use of the power because the behaviour it sought to protect the public from was only anti-social in the sense that all criminal offences were anti-social and it was not the sort of behaviour that ASBOs were meant to target. The Court of Appeal declined to express a definitive view on this issue and quashed the order on a different ground, but they did make the following observations. The forms of conduct listed on p.8 of the 2002 Home Office guide have a direct or indirect impact on the quality of life of people living in the community. They are different in character from offences of dishonesty committed in private against individual victims, distressing though such offences are to the victims. The Court said that it would not like Lo be taken to say that in no case could offences of this sort attract such an order.

- It seems to us that there is another problem with the kind of order in Werner. In the absence of a system to warn all hotels, guesthouses, or similar premises anywhere within the Greater London Area, there is no practical way of policing the order. The breach of the ASBO will occur at the same time as the commission of any further offence in a hotel, guesthouse, or similar premises. The ASBO achieves nothing— if she is not to be deterred by the prospect of imprisonment for committing the offence, she is unlikely to be deterred by the prospect of being sentenced for breach of the ASBO. By committing the substantive offence, she will have committed the further offence of being in breach of her ASBO, but to what avail? The criminal statistics will show two offences rather than one. If on the other hand she “worked” a limited number of establishments, it would be practical to supervise compliance with the order. The establishments could be pull on notice about her and should she enter the premises the police could be called, whether her no Live in entering the premises was honest or not.

- In Rush 12005] EWCA Grim 1316; [2006] 1 Cr. App. R. (S.) 35 (p.200) the appellant appealed against a sentence of 30 months’ imprisonment and an ASBO of 10 years’ duration following a plea to burglary. The burglary involved pushing into his parents’ house (where he no longer lived) and stealing cigarettes from a cupboard. The appellant had a history of previous offending that was almost entirely targeted at his parents. The Court of Appeal reduced the sentence for the burglary to 12 months’ imprisonment and the duration of the ASBO to five years. In so doing, they said that the making of an ASBO should not be a normal part of the sentencing process especially if the case did not involve harassment or intimidation. Imposing an ASBO was a course to be taken in particular circumstances.

- In McGrath the Court observed that ASBOs should be treated with a proper degree of caution and circumspection. They were not cure-alls and were not lightly to be imposed (para.fi 2]),

R. V DEAN BONES and Other's

In Lonergan the Divisional Court held that it was lawful for a prohibition in the nature of a curfew to be included in an ASBO made under s. 1 CDA 1998 if its imposition was necessary to provide protection for others.

With these general observations in mind, we turn to the appeals against the ASBOs.

The Dean Bones ASBO

- In favour of making an ASBO was the fact that the appellant had consistently engaged in anti-social behaviour over a period of approximately three years. He was a persistent prolific offender and had admitted to drug misuse in the community. There were three main aspects to his anti-social behaviour: threatening behaviour (two incidents), vehicle crime (three incidents) and other offences of dishonesty such as burglary and theft (three incidents and other incidents of handling stolen goods). On the other hand, he was being sentenced to a custodial sentence of three years' detention in a young offender institution and was thus subject to a period on licence and subject to recall or return to custody.
- The respondent accepts, on the authorities and in particular having regard to (para.[25] above) that it is far from clear that it was necessary to make an ASBO in respect of the appellant. We agree.
- We turn to the various orders. The first order prohibited the appellant from:

Entering any public car park within the Basingstoke and Deane Borough Council area, except in the course of lawful employment.

- The respondent submits:

"The antecedent information does not state whether any of the vehicle crimes committed by the appellant took place in a public car park. However, it is submitted that it could sensibly be argued that a person intent on committing vehicle crime is likely to be attracted to car parks. The prohibition as drafted does not appear to allow the offender to park his own vehicle in a public car park or, for example, to be a passenger in a vehicle driven into a public car park in the course of a shopping trip. Thus, in the absence of evidence showing that the appellant committed vehicle crime in car parks, there would appear to be a question mark over whether the prohibition is proportional, particularly as prohibition (3) seems to be drafted with a view to allowing the appellant to ride a motorcycle. If the court contemplated the lawful use of a motorbike as an activity which the appellant could pursue, then this prohibition would significantly limit the places he might be able to park it. It is of note that in McGrath the Court of Appeal held a similar prohibition to be too wide, although it covered a much larger geographical area."

- We agree. Even if the order was necessary to prevent anti-social behaviour by the appellant, it was not proportionate.

R. v DEAN BONES AND OTHERS

- The second order prohibited the appellant from:

Entering any land or building on the land which forms a part of educational premises except as an enrolled pupil with the agreement of the head of the establishment or in the course of lawful employment.

- As to this the respondent submits:

"It is not clear what information provided the basis for making this prohibition. There is nothing in the appellant's previous offending history which suggests that he engages in anti-social behaviour in educational premises. It is submitted that the term 'educational premises' arguably lacks clarity; for example, does it include teaching hospitals or premises where night classes are held? There also appears to be a danger that the appellant might unwittingly breach the terms of the order were he, for example, to play sport on playing fields associated with educational premises."

- We agree with this analysis.

The order was not necessary and is, in any event, unclear.

- The third order prohibited the appellant from:

In any public place, wearing, or having with you anything which covers, or could be used to cover, the face or part of the face. This will include hooded clothing, balaclavas, masks, or anything else which could be used to hide identity, except that a motorcycle helmet may be worn only when lawfully riding a motorcycle.

- The respondent submits:

"It is presumed that this prohibition was based upon the assertion that the appellant is forensically aware and will use items to attempt to prevent detection. It is submitted that the terms of the prohibition are too wide, resulting in a lack of clarity and consequences which are not commensurate with the risk which the prohibition seeks to address. The phrase "having with you anything which could be used to cover the face or part of the face" covers a huge number of items. For example, it is not unknown for those seeking to conceal their identity to pull up a jumper to conceal part of the face, but surely the prohibition cannot have been intended to limit so radically the choice of clothing that the appellant can wear? It seems that the appellant would potentially be in breach of the order were he to wear a scarf or carry a newspaper in public."

- We agree.
- The fourth order prohibited the appellant from:

Having any item with you in public which could be used in the commission of a burglary, or theft of or from vehicles except that you may carry one door key for your house and one motor vehicle or bicycle lock key. A motor vehicle key can only be carried if you are able to inform a checking officer of the registration number of the vehicle and that it can be ascertained that the vehicle is insured for you to drive it. We agree with the respondent's submission that: the first part of this prohibition has been drafted too widely and lacks clarity."

The respondent points out that there are many items that might be used in the commission of a burglary, such as a credit card, a mobile phone, or a pair of gloves. Was the appellant being prohibited from carrying such items? If so, the order is neither clear nor proportionate,

The fifth order prohibited the appellant from:

Having possession of any article in public or carried in any vehicle, that could be used as a weapon. This will include glass bottles, drinking glasses and tools.

- The respondent submits and we agree:

"that the necessity for such a prohibition is not supported by the material pull forward in support of the application. There is very Little in the appellant's antecedent history which indicates a disposition to use a weapon. Furthermore, it is submitted that the wording of the prohibition is obviously too wide, resulting in lack of clarity and consequences which are not commensurate with the risk. Many otherwise innocent items have the capacity to be used as weapons, including anything hard or with an edge or point. This prohibition has draconian consequences. The appellant would be prohibited from doing a huge range of things including having a drink in a public bar."

- We have already noted judicial criticism of the use of the word "tool" (see para.[42] above).
- The sixth order prohibited the appellant from:

Remaining on any shop, commercial or hospital premises if asked to leave by staff. Entering any premises from which barred.

- The respondent submits:

"The appellant has convictions for offences of dishonesty, including an attempted burglary of shop premises and he has been reprimanded for shoplifting. Thus, there appears to be a foundation for such a prohibition. It is submitted that this term is capable of being understood by the appellant and is proportionate given that it hinges upon being refused permission to enter/ remain on particular premises by those who have control of them."

- We agree, although we wonder whether the appellant would understand the staccato sentence: "Entering any premises from which barred."

PART 5 © SWEET & MAXWELL

- The seventh order prohibited the appellant from:

Entering upon any private land adjoining any dwelling premises or commercial premises outside of opening hours of that premises without the express permission of a person in charge of that premises. This includes front gardens, driveways and paths. Except in the course of lawful employment.

- The respondent points out that in McGrath the Court of Appeal held that a term which prohibited the appellant from "trespassing on any land belonging to any person whether legal or natural within those counties" was too wide and harsh. If the appellant looks a wrong turn on a walk and entered someone's property, he would be at risk of a five-year prison sentence. In our view this prohibition, albeit less open to criticism than the one in McGrath is also loo wide and harsh. Although certain pieces of land might easily be identified as being caught by the prohibition (such as a front garden, driveway, or path) it might be harder to recognise, say, in more rural areas. The absence of any geographical restriction reinforces our view. Furthermore, there is no practical way that compliance with the order could be enforced, at least outside the appellant's immediate home area (see para.[47] above).
- The eighth order prohibited the appellant, from:

Touching or entering any unattended vehicle without the express permission of the owner.

- The respondent submits:

"The appellant has previous convictions for aggravated vehicle taking and interfering with a motor vehicle and has been reprimanded for theft of a motorcycle. It is submitted that the prohibition is sufficiently clear and precise and is commensurate with the risk it seeks to meet."

- We agree generally but we would have preferred a geographical limit so as to make it feasible to enforce the order. Local officers, aware of the prohibition, would then have a useful weapon to prevent the appellant committing vehicle crime. They would not have to wait until he had committed a particular crime relating to vehicles,
- The ninth order prohibited the appellant from:

Acting or inciting others to act in an anti-social manner, that is to say, a manner that causes or is likely to cause harassment, alarm, or distress to one or more persons not of the same household.

- The respondent submits that this was a proper order to make and is in accordance with the Home Office guidance. We would prefer some geographical limit, in the absence of good reasons for having no such limit.
- The tenth order prohibited the appellant from:

Congregating in groups of people in a manner causing or likely to cause any person to fear for their safely or congregating in groups of more than six per- sons in an outdoor public place.

Given the appellant's previous history the first part of the prohibition can be justified as necessary. As the respondent points out, the final clause would appear to prohibit the appellant from attending sporting or other outdoor events. Such a prohibition is, in our view, disproportionate. Although, as the respondent points out, the appellant would be able to argue that he had a reasonable excuse for attending the event, this is, in our view, an insufficient safeguard.

The eleventh order prohibited the appellant from:

Doing anything which may cause damage.

The respondent submits that this prohibition, even if justified (which is far from clear), is far too wide. In the words of the respondent: "Is the appellant prohibited from scuffing his shoes?" We agree.

The twelfth order prohibited the appellant from:

Not being anywhere but your home address as listed on this order between 2330 hours and 0700 hours or at an alternative address as agreed in advance with the prolific and priority offender officer or anti-social behaviour coordinator at Basingstoke Police Station.

Although curfews can properly be included in an ASBO, we doubt, as does the respondent, that such an order was necessary in this case. Although the offences of interfering with a motor vehicle and attempted burglary (for which the appellant was sentenced on 16/5/02) were both committed between 10pm and midnight on the same evening, there is no suggestion that other offences have been committed at night. Moreover, the author of the pre-sentence report states that the appellant's offending behaviour did not fit a pattern which could be controlled by the use of a curfew order.

We would go further than the respondent. Even if an ASBO was justified a 5-year curfew to follow release is not, in our view, proportionate.

The thirteenth order prohibited the appellant from:

Being carried on any vehicle other than a vehicle in lawful use.

The respondent submits this prohibition is sufficiently clear and proportionate. We are not convinced. We do not find the expression "lawful use" to be free from difficulty. If "the carrying" is likely to constitute a specific criminal offence (e.g. one of the family of taking without consent offences), what does this order add? We would also have preferred some geographical limit.

The final order prohibited the appellant from:

Being in the company of Jason Arnold, Richard Ashman, Corrine Barlow, Mark Bicknell, Joseph (Joe) Burford, Sean Condon, Alan Dawkins, Simon Lee, Daniel (Danny) Malcolm, Michael March, or Nathan Threshie.

The respondent submits:

"This prohibition seems to be based on the assertion in PC Woods' document that the appellant is associating with other criminals who were also nominated as persistent prolific offenders. The appellant admitted that the offending spree which recently brought him before the court was the result of being contacted by an old friend. It is submitted that care has been taken to identify the individuals with whom the appellant is not to associate."

- The respondent, however, has doubts whether a prohibition that prevents the appellant from associating with any of the named individuals for five years after his release, even in a private residence where one or more resides, is disproportionate to the risk of anti-social behaviour it is designed to prevent. We share those doubts.

Bebbington and others— the ASBOs

- We have no doubt that in respect of all the appellants, other than Schofield and Bruce, it was not "necessary" to make any ASBO, given their antecedent history, reports, and references.
- Counsel on behalf of Schofield attacked the judge's findings of fact. The judge conducted the trial and was in the best position to decide upon Schofield's role.
- For Scofield and Bruce, given their history and the judge's findings, an order could properly have been made to prevent a repetition of the disgraceful conduct of that night. The judge was entitled, absent any special circumstances, to make only one of the orders, namely:

On any day that Chester City AFC play at a regulated football match at the Deva Stadium during the period commencing three hours prior to kick off and ending six hours after kick-off, enter any area inside the shaded boundary as defined in the attached map.

- We amend the ASBO made in respect of Bruce by quashing the other orders and confirming this part only of the original order. In so far as Schofield is concerned, he will be living and working within the exclusion zone, so the order made is inappropriate. In his case the order will read:

On any day that Chester City AFC play at a regulated football match at the Deva Stadium during the period commencing three hours prior to kick off and ending six hours after kick-off, enter any area which is within 100 yards of the main entrance to Chester Station except for the purposes of his work with the Royal Mail.

- As the trouble that arose in this case did so on a day when Wrexham AFC was playing away and the club's supporters were returning home via Chester railway station there will be in the case of both Bruce and Schofield an additional term in the ASBO as follows.
- In the case of Bruce:

On any day that Wrexham Town AFC play a regulated football match away from their home stadium during the period commencing three hours prior to kick off and ending six hours after kicking off, enter any area inside the shaded boundary as defined in the attached map.

In the cases of Schofield:

On any day that Wrexham Town AFC play a regulated football match away from their home stadium during the period commencing three hours prior to kick off and ending six hours after kick-off, enter any area which is within 100 yards of the main entrance to Chester railway station except for the purposes of his work with the Royal Mail,

The period of 10 years for which the judge ordered the ASBOs to run is manifestly excessive. In the case of each appellant the order will last for four years from January 7, 2005, the date when they were sentenced.

INTRODUCTION

(1) The Appellant is appealing against a decision made by the district judge at Highbury Corner Magistrates' Court on 4 August 2015 pursuant to S.1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 ("the 1998 Act") to make him subject to an anti-social behaviour order (ASBO) to last for 5 years.

(2) The facts relied upon by the Respondent are set out in the bundle of evidence placed before the court and, in particular, the witness statements of the Respondent's officers [R.14-35]. The Appellant has also provided a bundle for this appeal hearing [A],

Simon Cordell Skeleton Argument.pdf

(3) The Respondent's case is that the Appellant has been integrally involved in the organisation of raves in London, particularly Enfield, and/or the supply of sound equipment to those raves. The Respondent relies on each incident set out in the application notice to support his case [Rl-3]. 'The Respondent submits that it is necessary for an ASBO to be in place to protect the public from further anti-social acts, specifically the organisation of raves, done by the Appellant.

(4) A chronology of events is appended to this Skeleton Argument.

(5) LEGAL FRAMEWORK

(6) Whilst the relevant provisions of the 1998 Act were repealed by the Anti-social Behaviour, Crime and Policing Act 2014, s.21 of that Act provides that these proceedings are unaffected except that, on 23 March 2020, the Appellant's ASBO will automatically become an Injunction under as if made under S.1 of that Act.

(7) Section 4 of the 1998 Act provides that an appeal against the making of an ASBO lies to the Crown Court.

(8) Section 79(3) of the Senior Courts Act 1981 provides that an appeal to the Crown Court is by way of a re-hearing. The relevant test, therefore, is that set out in S.1 of the Act.

(1) Pursuant to S.1 (4) of the 1998 Act, the court may exercise it discretion and make an ASBO if the two-part test set: out in S.1(l) is satisfied. Section 1(1) states:

a. An application for an order under this section may be made by a relevant: authority if it: appears to the authority that the following conditions are fulfilled with respect to any person aged ID or over, namely—that the person has acted, since the commencement date, in an and-social manner, that is to say, in a manner that caused or was likely to cause harassment:, alarm or distress to one or more persons not of the same household as himself; and

b. that such an order is necessary to protect relevant persons from further antisocial acts by him.

Simon Cordell's Skeleton Argument (2) Pdf

(9) It is for the Respondent to satisfy the court to the criminal standard that the Appellant has acted in a manner that caused or was likely to cause harassment, alarm, or distress to one or more persons not of the same household as himself. However, the second limb of the test "does not involve a standard of proof: it is an exercise of judgment or evaluation" (R (McCann) v Manchester Crown Court [2003] l A.C. 787 at [371).

(10) In R v Dean lioness [2006] 1 Cr. App. II. (S.) 120, the Court of Appeal provided general guidance as to the creation of prohibitions forming an ASBO. the court held that:

3. prohibitions should be individually tailored to the individual and that each individual prohibition must be necessary [28].
(ti) an ASBO can include prohibitions not to undertake minor criminal activity that may be covered under separate legislation [30-1]. However, an ASBO should seek to prevent a person from being able to commit that offence, rather than further penalise him when he does commit it [35]; and
(iii) the terms of the ASBO must be proportionate so as to be commensurate with the risk identified [37],

SUBMISSIONS

The first limb of the test under S. 1 (l)(a) of the 1998 Act

(11) The organisation of large-scale raves, whether or not they fall within the parameters of s.63 of the Criminal justice and Public Order Act 1994 and whether on private property or common land, fall within the definition of anti-social behaviour. 1 he Home Office Guidance: *'A Guide to antisocial beamer orders' specifies noise nuisance, particularly when late at night, as an example of anti-social behaviour.

24.11.1 It is submitted that, a person who helps organise or supplies equipment for a rave, where there is loud music late at night (except where there is a licence to do so and/or the music is played on licensed premises), has prana jade done an act in contravention of S.1(l)(a) of the 1998 Act.

(12) The Respondent relies on the evidence provided in die witness statements provided by various officers as well as supporting intelligence reports, the page references for this evidence are set out in the appended chronology. The court is invited to take particular note of the evidence supporting the conclusion that the Appellant was integrally involved in the organization of raves and/or the supply of equipment:

4. The Appellant was identified by gate security as the organizer of a rave of about 300 people on 7/8 June 2014 (see evidence of Insp. Hamill JR38] and supporting evidence of PS Miles [R36]).

5. The Appellant admitted to Insp. Skinner that he was the organiser of the rave on 7/8 June 2014 [R41].

6. The Appellant admitted to Insp. Skinner that he was the organiser of the rave organised and prevented on 19 July 2014 [R39, R41].

7. The Appellant admitted to PC Edgoose that he lent his sound equipment for use at raves and that he could get a significant number of people to turn out for a rave [R48, R88]; and

8. The Appellant was the organiser of the rave on 9 August 2014 and provided the sound equipment as well as laughing gas [R42, R44-5, R47]. When a crowd turned up and tried to force entry, the Appellant encouraged them to break the police line [R43, R45-6].

(13) The Respondent further relies on the information set out in the intelligence reports and the documents provided to the court in the Respondent's bundle. The evidences show the Appellant has witnessed by many different police officers supplying equipment for or helping to organise a rave.

(14) The court will be invited to reject the Appellant's account as t:o his activities on the relevant, days as not credible.

The second limb of the test under section 1 of the Act

(15) It is first submitted that an ASBO is, in general terms, necessary.

Simon Cordell Skeleton Argument.pdf

(16) There is a significant body of evidence showing the impact of raves on people who live near where they occur [R51-66, R155-298]. The level of distress that these individuals suffered as a result of the raves organised by the Appellant was high. 'There is a need to prevent these events occurring in the future.

(17) The ASBO (and interim ASBO beforehand) have been effective. The only time where the. Appellant's behaviour has improved is when these proceedings were commenced, and it was made clear to the Appellant that his actions could not be tolerated.

(18) "The Appellant has denied the acts alleged by the Respondent. He has shown no acknowledgment or desire to change his ways that might make an ASBO unnecessary.

(19) As to the particular prohibitions on the ASBO, significant effort was made by the Respondent and by the court to ensure that any legitimate business activities that the Appellant wished to undertake would in no way be inhibited by this order. Tor the Appellant to provide recorded music to a gathering of people he would either need to have a licence for that event or to provide the music on a licensed premises for fewer than 500 people with, a general licence to play recorded music (see s. 1 and Sch.l of the Licensing Act 2003). This order specifically does not preclude him from providing regulated entertainment under the auspices of a valid licence.

(20) The only amendment that the Respondent would seek is that the words "or s.63(l. A)" be added after the words "s.63(l)" in prohibitions a, b, and c of the ASBO.

(21) It is submitted that the terms of the ASBO as drafted are necessary and proportionate in that they should have minimal impact on the Appellant's life and legitimate business activities.

Crime — Crime and disorder — Antisocial behaviour order — Applications for antisocial behaviour orders relying on hearsay evidence — Whether proceedings civil or criminal — Whether hearsay evidence admissible — Whether criminal standard of proof to be satisfied — Crime and Disorder Act 1998 (c 37J, s r — Human Rights Act 1998 (042), Sch 1, Ft 1, act

In the first case the Chief Constable applied to the magistrates' court for anti- social behaviour orders to be made against each of the defendants, three brothers aged 16, 15 and 13, pursuant to section 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998'. The stipendiary magistrate made the orders, which, inter alia, prohibited the defendants from entering a particular area of the city in which they lived. On the defendants' appeal to the Crown Court, the judge held chat the proceedings for the making of an order were civil rather than criminal and that, therefore, they were not subject to the rules of evidence which applied in criminal prosecutions or to the protection of article 6(2) of the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, as scheduled to the Human Rights Act 1.998c However, the court applied the standard of proof of being "satisfied so that it was sure" that the orders should be made and, having done so, dismissed the appeals.

The defendants brought judicial review proceedings seeking an order of certiorari to quash the judge's decision.

The Divisional Court dismissed the application and the Court of Appeal upheld that decision. The defendants appealed.

In the second case the local authority applied to the magistrates' court for an antisocial behaviour order to be made against the defendant. The application was based primarily on hearsay evidence including evidence from anonymous complainants and evidence from complainants whose identities were not disclosed. A hearsay notice under the Magistrates' Courts (Hearsay Evidence in Civil Proceedings) Rules 1999 was served on the defendant, who challenged its validity. Following a pre-trial review, the district judge stated a case for the Divisional Court raising questions about the admissibility of hearsay evidence in the proceedings. The Divisional Court, in reliance on the decision of the Divisional Court in the first case, ruled that the proceedings were civil and that the hearsay evidence could be admitted. The defendant appealed pursuant to a certificate granted under section 1 of the Administration of Justice Act 1960.

On the appeals—

Held, dismissing the appeal in the first case and declaring that the house had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal in the second case, that since applications for antisocial behaviour orders under section 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1 998 were initiated by the civil process of complaint and did not charge the defendant with any crime or involve the Crown Prosecution Service, and since the making of such an order, the purpose of which was preventive not punitive, was not a conviction, did not appear on the defendant's criminal record and resulted in no penalty, the proceedings were civil under domestic law; that, since the proceedings did not involve the determination of a criminal charge and could not result in the imposition of an immediate penalty on the defendant, they therefore could not be classified as criminal for the purposes of article 6 of the Convention; that, in so far as the proceedings involved a determination of the defendants' civil rights and thereby engaged the right to a fair trial under article 6(r), the use of hearsay evidence admissible under the Civil Evidence Act 1995 in such proceedings was not unfair and involved no violation of that right; that hearsay evidence under the 1995 Act and the 1999 Rules was therefore admissible on an application for an anti-social behaviour order under section 1 of the 1998 Act; but that, given the seriousness of the matter involved, the court should be satisfied to the criminal standard of proof that a defendant had acted in an anti-social manner before making such an order; and that, accordingly, in rile first case the appropriate standard of proof had been applied, and since the second case was not a "criminal cause or matter" the House had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal under section 1 of the 1960 Act (post, paras 22, 2627, 30, 33-35, 36, 37, 39-40, 5H 55-5h, 64, 67, 68, 74, 76-77, 81-84, 94-98, 102103, 105-106, 108, 111, 112, 11 3-117).

The facts are stated in the opinion of Lord Hope of Craighead.

Clingham v Kensington and Chelsea Royal London Borough Council

APPEAL from the Divisional Court of the Queen's Bench Division

This was an appeal, with leave of the House granted on 23 October 2001, by the defendant, Andrew George Clingham, against a decision of the Divisional Court (Schiemann LJ and Poole J) dated 11 January 2001 dismissing his appeal by way of case stated against a decision on the admissibility of evidence by District Judge David Kennett Brown, sitting as a magistrate at Marylebone Magistrates' Court on 14 September 2000 at a pre-trial review of an application by Kensington and Chelsea Royal London I3orough Council for an anti-social behaviour order against the defendant.

In refusing leave to appeal the Divisional Court certified, under section 1(2) c of the Administration of justice Act i960, that the following point of law of general public importance was involved in its decision: "Whether hearsay evidence is admissible in proceedings to secure the making of an anti-social behaviour order under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998?"

The facts are stated in the opinion of Lord Steyn.

Stephen Salley QC and Alan Fraser for Clingham. Seen as a whole, the scheme provided for by the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 for the making of and enforcement of anti-social behaviour orders is punitive, rather than preventative, and therefore truly criminal. The sanctions for breach of such an order, which include imprisonment for a maximum of five years, are clearly penal in nature. The proper application of the relevant criteria leads to the conclusion that it is properly categorised as criminal even in respect of ^ the initial imposition of the order looked at alone. Consequently, the usual, criminal procedures apply and the Civil Evidence Act 1995 and the Magistrates' Courts (Hearsay Evidence in Civil Proceedings) Rules 1999 (SI 1999/681) do not.

The absence of any real restriction on the possible ambit of anti-social behaviour orders also presents the risk of ad hoc, novel and ill-defined "criminal offences" (founded on the terms of any such order), that is a matter of concern and possible injustice in that it is effectively creating "offences" attracting substantial penalties without the direct involvement of Parliament and in circumstances lacking the sort of certainty that should characterise any prohibition carrying such penal sanctions. The fact that the conduct originally complained of is inevitably reflected in the formulation of the "offence", it is an integral and inextricable part of a single process with punitive sanction.

Geographical exclusion from a particular area is also properly regarded as punitive. It encroaches on freedom of movement and may in some circumstances amount to an infringement of the right to respect for private and family life (contrary to article 8 of the Convention) and/or freedom of association (contrary to article 11). Although each of these rights is subject to restriction for reasons including the "prevention of crime and disorder" and the "protection of rights of others" that reinforces the argument that such, a sanction is a punitive order.

Even if it is held that the proceedings are properly characterised as "civil", defendants are entitled to a "fair" hearing in accordance with article 6 (R) "in

A determination of his civil] rights and obligations". In determining what is "fair" in this context an almost (or "quasi") criminal approach should be adopted not only in relation to the standard of proof but in interpretation of wider procedural issues. In the circumstances that would include having particular regard to the minimum requirements that would attach to criminal proceedings under article 6(3), even if those did not directly apply g by virtue of criminal status. In particular this should include the right to examine witnesses pursuant to article <5(3){d).

The application of the criminal standard of proof as being "likely to be appropriate" in the majority of applications for an anti-social behaviour order was accepted by the Court of Appeal in McCann. That is an unsatisfactory approach in relation to the appropriate standard of proof. It would lead to a lack of clarity and certainty, which in turn is likely to cause C injustice, actual or perceived. The proper interpretation is that the appropriate standard of proof to be applied in relation to the making of any anti-social behaviour order is the criminal standard. It is unrealistic to suggest some sort of sliding scale between the criminal and civil standard of proof. Application of the criminal standard of proof would go a long way to achieving a fair trial.

In Clingham the allegations involve serious criminal conduct including burglary, dealing in drugs and assaults. One of the consequences of this is that a person may find himself having to attempt to answer an allegation founded on multiple hearsay to resist an application for an order, only to later have to answer a formal criminal charge founded on the same "facts" which were only proved to the civil standard. Anything said in the course of the first proceedings could be used against hint in respect of the later criminal charge. This also has the potential of effectively depriving the person of his right to silence under article 6(2) in any such subsequent proceedings. If he is to seek to preserve this right by not exposing himself to such risk, by not seeking to challenge the basis on which the anti-social behaviour order is sought, he would be compelled to constrain himself in the initial proceedings such that his general right to a "fair" hearing under article 6(1) in determination of his "civil rights and obligations" regardless of any minimum guaranteed rights afforded in respect of a "criminal charge" under article 6(3}, would be compromised. Anonymity of witnesses probably will not be achievable in these circumstances. The problem of fearful witnesses can be dealt with improving the role of the CPS and police rather than reducing the threshold required for an order to be made.

The jurisdiction to accept Clingham is properly exercised. The definition ^ of "criminal cause or matter in section r(I)(a) of the Administration of Justice Act 1.960, for the purpose of appeal to the higher courts, is wider than the phrase "criminal proceedings": see Exp Alice Woodhall (1888} 20 QBD 832; Amand v Home Secretary [1943] AC 1:47; Bonalwni v Secretary of State for the Home Department [1985] QB 675; Carr v Atkins f 1 987] r. QB 963; Customs and Excise Comrs v City of London Magistrates' Court H [2000] 1 WLR 2020. Applying that approach the making of an anti-social behaviour order would clearly be a criminal cause or matter, as is everything that flows from it.

Adrian Eulford QC and fames Stark for the Mc Cans. Anti-social behaviour orders require proof of conduct that is criminal in nature, closely akin to offences under sections 4A and 5 of the Public Order Act 1986 and section 1 of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 and may lead to restrictions on liberty that constitute a punishment. Although the wording of sections 4A and 5 Public of the 1986' Act is not identical to section 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act .1998, the conduct involved all falls within section 1. Furthermore, there is no limitation placed on the definition of harassment in section 7(2) of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997.

English law contains a number of strict liability offences. The lack of a requirement of intent cannot render the proceedings civil. Furthermore, men's rea in both section 5 of the Public Order Act 1986 and section 2. of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 offences is knowledge based i.e. knew or ought to have known. Most tellingly of all section 1(10) of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 itself creates an offence without the requirement of intent- It is subject only to a reasonable excuse defence.

Whether a prohibited act leads to criminal proceedings depends upon the consequences arising from the act not the form of the statute within which it is described or the procedure by which proceedings are commenced. The procedure must be looked at in its totality from the beginning to the end. Although proceedings are started by complaint that is not conclusive. An anti-social behaviour order makes those against whom they are made subject to the risk of criminal sanctions in respect of conduct that would not otherwise be criminal. Conduct which is criminal in character may well take place only at the stage of breach of an order. Prohibitions against committing criminal offences or defined types of anti-social behaviour can be made, breach of which may expose the individual to far more serious penalties than the offence itself. Although it may have been Parliament's intention to create civil rather than criminal proceedings, one has to look at what has been created not what it was intended to create. The fact that there are different stages to the proceedings does not prevent both stages being criminal causes or matters: see Amand v Home Secretary [r 943] AC 147; R v Board of Visitors of Hull Prison, Ex p St Germain [1979] QB 425- Consequently, applications for anti-social behaviour orders are the initial step in a criminal cause or matter.

The second limb of section 1(1) of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998, the requirement of it being "necessary" to make an order is not at odds with the character of the proceedings being criminal Those elements come into play in other criminal proceedings. The first limb constitutes the "offence' the second limb the need for a "penalty".

The fact that a penalty, which may have severe consequences, is described as being imposed to protect the public in the future, and not as a punishment for a crime already committed does not prevent the proceedings being criminal proceedings when the correct test is applied: see Proprietary Articles Trade Association v Attorney General for Canada [1.931! AC 310; Customs and Excise Comrs v City of London Magistrates' Courts [2000] 1: WLR 2020. The object of a penalty by way of sentence is that it seeks to "protect" as well as to "punish" e.g. removing an offender from society by custody to prevent further offending. In sentencing protective considerations, rather than society's need to punish the individual, often play the major role in deciding what penalty to impose. Thus, to define an anti-social behaviour order as protective does not in any way diminish its punitive effect.

The conditions that may be attached to an anti-social behaviour order are unlimited. Curfews and orders banning people from certain areas are now expressly recognised as criminal penalties under sections 37 and 40A of the Powers of the Criminal Court (Sentencing) Act 2000. Restrictions upon liberty have also included a limit upon the number of visitors a person can have to their home or the number of persons with whom they may congregate.

The injunction analogy is a false one. Injunctions seek to prevent the interference by one person with another's civil rights whether in contract, tort, or equity or to ensure that civil obligations are carried out as in the case of a mandatory injunction. They are not aimed at preserving public order or containing anti-social behaviour. Committal is in consequence of disobedience to the court not as a punishment or penalty for the actual conduct involved. Furthermore, a contempt can be purged but an anti-social behaviour order last for two years.

There are fundamental differences between an anti-social behaviour order and a sex offender order under section 2 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998. Section 1 requires proof. Section 2 only requires "reasonable cause to believe". Thus the court does not, under section 2, apply a simple objective test of whether acts took place as in section 1 but has a further subjective element to apply that is not consistent with a criminal offence. Furthermore, the sex offender has already had his fair trial to the criminal standard of proof on the conduct which gave rise to the jurisdiction to make an order. The sex offender order is a mechanism to control the further conduct of those already convicted of criminal offences. The essential prerequisite for the order does not need to be proved in proceedings for making the order. In the context of European jurisprudence a sex offender order is made against a very limited class of persons, those already convicted of sex offences while the anti-social behaviour order is of general application. That is a significant factor: see Benbam v United Kingdom (1996) 22 EHRR 293

The relevant criteria for the consideration of whether proceedings are criminal for the purpose of article 6 of the Convention rights are: (a) the domestic classification; (b) The nature of the proceedings; (c) The nature and severity of the punishment: see Engel v The Netherlands (No 1) (1976) I EHRR 647. Those criteria are not cumulative. Any one of the three may render the proceedings as being in respect of criminal charge: see Garyfallou AEBE v Greece (1997) 28 EHRR 344; Lauko v Slovakia (1998) 33 EHRR 994. There does not have to be tile formal constituent elements of an offence as recognised in domestic law: see Deiveer v Belgium (1980) 2 EHRR 439. There is a broad similarity between proceedings for anti-social behaviour orders and breach of the peace. In both cases what is effectively sought is an order prohibiting a certain kind of behaviour. The intention was almost certainly to create a civil procedure, but it did not actually achieve that: see Steel v United Kingdom (1998) 28 EHRR 603. A penalty is still a penalty even when it takes a novel form. See also Han v Customs and Excise GAMUTS [2001 j 1 WFR 2253 for a review of the European jurisprudence.

The original anti-social behaviour is the most significant element of the criminal conduct leading to a criminal sanction under section 1(10). Thus the crucial conduct of a criminal nature that lies at the heart of the order and to which it is most important for the procedural safeguards of article 6(2) and (3) to be applied occurs at the first stage on the application for an order. It is thus impossible, when applying the autonomous test from the Convention as A to the genera! nature of the proceedings, to escape the conclusion that they are in respect of a criminal charge. Thus, the orders made in the instant proceedings on the basis that they were civil proceedings not subject to such safeguards should be quashed.

Having a shifting or varying burden of proof may impose on justices an almost impossible task and could lead to the wholly undesirable practice of g justices being asked about the approach they are going to adopt.

A professional judge could mould proceedings to meet the particular dictates of the case more easily: see Official Receiver v Stern I2000] I WLR 2230, 2257-2258. Other issues also arise: the protections under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 would not apply and there could be profound problems regarding the weight to be given to identification evidence.

Brodie Thompson QC for Liberty. There are fundamental implications in the development of criminal law involved in the use of anti-social behaviour orders. It is important that all the full protections of criminal procedure are maintained when people are in effect accused of criminal conduct. Under section I(I){a) of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 a person with no previous convictions can be accused of conduct which could equally well have been prosecuted under section 5 of the Public Order Act 1986. An individual can thus be brought before the court for the first time under section 1 (I)(a). The penalties that can be imposed are in reality much more severe than those under section 5 or under the procedure of binding over the keep the peace, which is a criminal matter under the convention: see Steel v United Kingdom 28 EHRR 603. The protections under criminal law are designed to protect the liberties of persons accused of such conduct. It is £ important that such protections exist and are changed only by the express will of Parliament. The analogies with sex offenders etc concern people who have already been convicted. It is quite different to impose a similar regime on someone who has no convictions. There is no objection to simple procedures to deal with public order disturbances. There is a long history of such powers see summary in: Percy v Director of Public Prosecutions [19 9 5 3 1 WLR 1382. The proper approach to anti-social behaviour is for principled changes in die criminal law to be made by Parliament. The alternative of regarding the matter as civil but reading in criminal protections on an "ad hoc" basis is conceivable hut less desirable in that it left to the Courts to define the protections traditionally provided by the criminal law.

Section 3 of the Human Rights Act 1998 imposes on the courts a broad general duty to construe primary, as well as secondary, legislation to accord c with Convention rights. In that respect the strong interpretive obligation imposed by section 3 necessarily subordinates the narrow intention of Parliament in the adoption of particular measures to its broader intention to avoid any implied inconsistency with protection of the Convention rights, even in primary legislation. Thus, section 3 introduces a degree of circularity into the position under domestic law, requiring the position under the Convention to be considered even in respect of the proper classification of anti-social behaviour orders in. the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 under domestic law principles. Such orders should be construed as criminal if a civil classification would fail to provide all the protections required by the Convention under a criminal classification.

John Bowers QC and Richard Banwell for Kensington and Chelsea Royal London Borough Council. Anti-social behaviour orders were specifically introduced in section x of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998, as a novel method for the police and local authorities to deter anti-social behaviour and prevent its escalation, without recourse to criminal sanctions. They are a reaction to a widely perceived social problem of crime and disorder. They were not intended to replace or modify existing criminal offences; rather they are primarily preventative in nature.

A useful contrast may be made between anti-social behaviour orders and:

- curfew orders under sections 12 and 13 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991 which are available to the court upon conviction of an offence; and (b) the terms of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 which specifically creates a criminal offence.

An anti-social behaviour order may be properly characterised in effect as, or by analogy, to a quick time injunctive order made in civil proceedings, used to restrain further behaviour which may cause harassment, alarm or distress to the relevant persons in the local government area concerned. Section 1(4) of the 1998 Act thus provides that an order may prohibit the defendant from doing anything described in the order in the future. An order is in terms restricted to the prohibition(s) necessary to protect persons in a defined area from anti-social behaviour (section 1(6)) and is manifestly an order designed to protect in the future, not to punish past misconduct. An analogy to the anti-social behaviour order is the banning order, which may be made by a magistrates' court under section 14B of the Football Spectators Act 1989. Such an order is civil in nature: see Gough u Chief Constable of the Derbyshire Constabulary [2002] QB 459. A similar comparison can be made with disqualification orders under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 which are also not criminal: see R v Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, Ex p McCormick [1998] BCC 379.

The making of an anti-social behaviour order does not involve a trial and punishment of the individual concerned. Indeed, section I{r){a) of the 1998 Act does not require that a person has caused harassment, alarm, or distress, only that the same may be likely to be caused. The contrast between the provisions of an anti-social behaviour orders and section 5 of the Public Order Act 1986 is also instructive. Section 5 expressly provides that a person using threatening, abusive, or insulting words or behaviour within the hearing of a person likely to be caused harassment, alarm and distress is guilty of an offence. There is no attribution of an offence to an anti-social behaviour order.

There is no "overall scheme" to section r. to which the application for an anti-social behaviour order can be seen as a "preliminary" (non-criminal proceeding) stage, Instead anti-social behaviour orders, like an injunction may be a possible precursor to separate penal proceedings to enforce them as a distinct second stage, but they do not constitute penal proceedings in themselves. Subsequent enforcement proceedings under the 1998 Act for breach are quite separate from the initial application and order. There is no immediate danger of an individual losing his liberty merely because an order is made.

There are other features of the application for an anti-social behaviour order which tend towards it being a civil procedure: (a) Under Section 1(3) of the 1998 Act proceedings are initiated by complaint, the appropriate procedure for commencing civil proceedings in the magistrates' court.

- The requirement to consult each other "relevant authority" and adjoining authorities where an order specifies neighbouring areas, demonstrates that it is not contemplated that penal sanctions be imposed.
- Criminal sanctions are found in Part I of the 1998 Act under the heading "Crime and Disorder: general" which covers prohibitions on sex offenders (section z) and "Crime and disorder strategies" (section 5) thus emphasizing the preventative nature of the provisions; (d) Prosecutions are not conducted by the Crown Prosecution Service.

The categorization for what constitutes a criminal offence formulated in Customs and Excise Comrs v City of London Magistrates' Court. [2000]

• WLR 2,020 should be adopted. On that basis applications for anti-social behaviour orders involve none of the hallmarks of a criminal matter; there is no formal accusation, made on behalf of the state or by any private prosecutor, that a defendant has committed a breach of the criminal law.

There is no relevant or viable concept of "quasi-criminal" in respect of hearsay evidence, although there may be varying standards of the civil standard of proof. That is a wholly different matter to a "quasi-criminal" approach to matters of admissibility of evidence.

If applications under the 1.998 Act for an anti-social behaviour order are civil in nature, the decision of the High Court in Clingham is final and no right of appeal lies to the House of Lords, as section I(I){a) of the Administration of Justice Act i960 only permits an appeal from a decision of the High Court "in any criminal cause or matter".

Charles Garside QC and Peter Cadwallader for the Chief Constable of Greater Manchester. Applications for anti-social behaviour orders are civil proceedings. Any proceedings for the breach of an order are criminal proceedings. It was the intention of Parliament that applications for antisocial behaviour orders should be civil proceedings. That result was affected by section 1 of the 1998 Act, Criminal proceedings are begun by arrest, charge, and production at court or by laying an information followed by summons or warrant. Applications for anti-social behaviour orders are begun by complaint. That is the method for commencing civil proceedings in magistrates' courts: see Part 2 and sections 51 and 52 of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980. Botross v Hammersmith and Fulham London Borough Council (1994) 93 LGR 268 was a case with special facts. It concerned section 82(1) of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. The Act and that section had a long legislative history going back to 1.875. ^ ^la<^ been decided in many cases that the nature of such proceedings was criminal, in part, because the sanctions available included a fine. The court concluded that when Parliament enacted the r.990 Act it had made a mistake in legislating for such proceedings to be begun by complaint and had never intended to change the nature of such proceedings.

The procedure for applications for anti-social behaviour orders (section 1(2) of the 1.998 Act) and sex offender orders (section 2(2) of the Act) are identical. Applications for sex offenders' orders are civil proceedings: see B t/ Chief Constable of Avon and Somerset Constabulary 1200r j r WLR 340.

Applying the three criteria laid down in Engel v The Netherlands (No I) I EHRR 647 to determine whether the proceedings are "criminal" for the purposes of article 6: first, the proceedings for anti-social behaviour orders are classified as civil in domestic law and, second, the defendants are not charged with any offence. As to the third criterion, section 1 of the Act is directed not to the detection, apprehension, trial and punishment of those who have committed crimes, but the restraint of those who have committed anti-social behaviour (which may also amount to a crime) and whose conduct is such that a measure of restraint is necessary to protect members of the public from further anti-social behaviour. The purpose of the proceedings is of importance within the European Jurisprudence: see Raitnondo v Italy (1994) 18 EHRR 2.37', Guzzardi v Italy (1980) 3 EHRR 333. The powers available in those case was at least as restrictive as chose given to the court under section 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998.

Jonathan Crow for the Secretary of State for the Horne Department. In determining whether, as a matter of domestic classification, a particular statutory provision forms part of the criminal law, there are two elements: (T) a "prohibited act" and (ii) "penal consequences": see Proprietary Articles Trade Association v Attorney General for Canada [19313! AC 310, 314. In relation to the first limb, the Act itself does not itself "prohibit" the conduct defined in any anti-social behaviour order. In relation to the second limb, it is important to consider the nature of an anti-social behaviour order independently from the possible consequences of any breach. Given that the only act that can logically be said to have been "prohibited" by section 1 is the act which triggers the making of the order, it is only permissible to consider the immediate consequences of that act—not the possible consequences of some other acts in breach of the anti-social behaviour order, that may or may not occur in the future. When properly analysed Amand v Home Secretary [1943] AC 147 and R v Board of Visitors of Hull Prison, Ex p St Germain [1979] QB 42,5 support that approach. They decide that a cause or matter would be classified as criminal if, carried to its conclusion, it might result in a conviction and sentence. That analysis demonstrates that the criminal sanction for a breach of an anti-social behaviour order cannot affect the proper classification of the proceedings that are brought for the imposition of ail anti-social behaviour order. It is also entirely consistent with the analysis adopted in many other areas of the law, for example, interim injunctions, sex offenders' orders and orders under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986.

The question whether any act is "prohibited" by section r. of the 1998 Act is not answered by reference to the question whether the preconditions for making an anti-social behaviour order are exactly co-extensive with some other substantive criminal offence— e.g. under the Public Order Act 1986 or the Prevention from Harassment Act 1997. The correct question is whether section 1 itself prohibits any act. It does not. In any event there are substantial differences between, on the one hand, section 4A of the Public Order Act 1986 and section 1 of the Protection from Harassment Act and, on the other, section 1: of the 1:998 Act.
Tor the purposes of article 6 there are several reasons why the preconditions to making an anti-social behaviour order take it outside the criminal realm. The order seeks to deal with anti-social behaviour, not with crime, and it seeks to do so by preventing future crimes rather than by punishing past ones. If a sanction is imposed for the purposes of deterrence or punishment, then it is likely to be regarded as a criminal penalty: see Oztiirk v Germany (1984) 6 EHRR 409; Han v Customs and Excise Comrs [2.001] 1 WLR 2253. By contrast, a sanction that is imposed for preventive reasons is not so regarded (even if it involves a restriction on liberty, and/or an interference with property rights, and/or it is imposed in the context of criminal proceedings: see Raimondo v Italy (1994) £HRR 237; M v Italy (1990) 70 DR 59. A decision whether to impose an anti-social behaviour order does not involve the determination of a criminal charge simply because the matters on which reliance is placed might also happen to constitute the necessary elements of a criminal offence: see Pelle v France (1986) 50 DR 263; McFeeley v United Kingdom (1980) 3 EHRR 161. Finally, the existence of past misconduct cannot of itself trigger an antisocial behaviour order: there must also be a need for protection for the future under section r(I)(b).

An anti-social behaviour order is clearly not a criminal penalty. Section 1(4) precludes any order being made other than as a prohibition. The court can neither fine nor imprison a person. There is a very significant difference in the European jurisprudence between imposing a restriction on a person's liberty (which will not be a criminal penalty) and depriving a person of his liberty (which will be a criminal penalty): see Guzzardi v Italy 3 LEIRR 333; Raimondo v Italy 18 EHRR 237. The court cannot deprive a person of his liberty under the cloak of an anti-social behaviour order, and the fact that an order might interfere with his freedom of movement (e g by excluding him from designated areas) does not convert it into a criminal penalty.
The fact that a person may be imprisoned for acting in breach of an antisocial behaviour order doc not mean that the imposition of the order itself involves any criminal penalty: see by analogy Ibhotson v United Kingdom (1998) 27 EHRR CD 332. The reason why a different conclusion was reached in Steel u United Kingdom 28 EHRR 603 was that the penalty was available to he imposed at the outset by the sentencing court in order to enforce compliance with the order. The difference in Ibbotson was that in that case separate proceedings would have to be brought for a breach of the statutory obligation before any criminal sanction could be imposed. The same is true under section 1 of the 1998 Act. ^
Steel v United Kingdom 28 EHRR 603, Garyfallou AEBE v Greece 28 EHRR 344 and Lauko v Slovakia 33 EHRR 994 merely illustrate the application in very different factual situations of the three criteria in Engel v The Netherlands (No 1) 1 EHRR 647 without adding any points of principle. ___
Applying the criminal standard of proof is wrong in three respects. First, it undermines one of the purposes of section 1 of the 1998 Act, namely, to render it easier to obtain an anti-social behaviour order than it would be to obtain a conviction for a comparable offence. Second, it conflates the two elements in section 1 of the 1998 Act. There is no reason why the criminal standard should be applied in relation to the question whether section I.(1)(b) is satisfied: that is a matter of evaluation as to future risk, and simply does not lend itself to being tested by reference to the criminal standard of proof. Third, in relation to the issues generally under section 1, the Court of Appeal's approach subverts the proper classification of an anti- social behaviour order as involving civil proceedings. The civil standard of proof should be regarded as a single fixed standard. 17 October. LORD STEYN

- My Lords, section 1. of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 ("the Act") provides for the making of anti-social behaviour orders against any person aged ten years or over. It came into force on 1 April 1999. Between 1 April 1999 and 31. December 2001. magistrates in England and Wales made 588 such orders and refused 19. It is important social legislation designed to remedy a problem which the existing law failed to deal with satisfactorily. This is the first occasion on which the House has had to examine the implications of section 1.
- There are two appeals before the House. They are unrelated but raise overlapping issues. Both cases involve the power of the magistrates' court under section 1 of the Act, upon being satisfied of statutory requirements, to make an anti-social behaviour order prohibiting a defendant from doing prescribed things. Breach of such an order may give rise to criminal liability. That stage has, however, not been reached in either case. In the case of Clingbam no order has been made. In the case of the McCann breathers antisocial behaviour orders have been made against all three. The appeals are therefore concerned only with the first stage of the procedure under the Act, namely, the application for such an order, and the making of it, and not with the second stage, namely proceedings taken upon an alleged breach of such an order.
- Clingham the district judge gave a preliminary ruling on 14 September 2000. In the McCann case the recorder gave judgment on an appeal from a stipendiary magistrate on 16 May 2000. E11 both cases the Human Rights Act 1998 is not directly applicable: R *v Kansal (No 2) I2002] 2 AC 69. The House has, however, been invited by all counsel to deal with the appeals as if the Human Rights Act 1998 is applicable. My understanding is that your Lordships are willing to do so.

- The principal issues ^
- It is common ground that proceedings taken for breach of an antisocial behaviour order are criminal in character under domestic law and fall within the autonomous concept "a criminal charge" under article 6 of the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, as scheduled to the Human Rights Act 1998. The principal general and common questions are:
- (a) whether as a matter of domestic classification proceedings leading to the making of an anti-social behaviour order are criminal in nature; and
- (b) whether under article 6 of the European Convention such proceedings involve "a criminal charge". Underlying these questions are two specific issues, namely:
- (c) whether under section 1 of the Act hearsay evidence is admissible in proceedings seeking such an order.

24.11.2 what the standard of proof is in such proceedings. The evidential c question arises primarily in the Clingham case and the question as to standard of proof arises mainly in the McCann case. On the other hand, counsel for the defendants to a considerable extent adopted each other's submissions.

- Jurisdiction
- If under domestic law an application for an anti-social behaviour order under section r of the Act properly fails to be classified as civil proceedings, the House may not have jurisdiction in the Clingham case. The House has, however, jurisdiction to inquire into its own jurisdiction and to deal with all relevant matters pertinent to that inquiry. Moreover, the jurisdictional issue causes no real problem since the points which arise in the Clingham case arguably could arise in the McCann case. All parties wish the House to deal with the genera! and specific issues outlined which could arise in many proceedings under section 1. In these circumstances the jurisdictional question can be considered briefly at the very end of this judgment.

HI Section 1. of the Act and article 6 of the European Convention

- In order to render the proceedings and issues intelligible it is necessary to set out section 1. of the Act. It appears in Part I of the Act under the heading "Prevention of Crime and Disorder". The material parts of section 1 read as follows: "(1) An application for an order under this section may be made by a c relevant authority if it appears to the authority that the following conditions are fulfilled with respect to any person aged ten or over, namely—(a) that the person has acted, since the commencement date, in an anti-social manner, that is to say, in a manner that caused or was likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress to one or more persons not of the same household as himself; and (b) that such an order is necessary to protect persons in the local government area in which the harassment, alarm or distress was caused or was likely to be caused from further antisocial acts by him; and in this section 'relevant authority' means the council for the local government area or any chief office:: of police any part of whose police area lies within that area.

A relevant authority shall not make such an application without consulting each other relevant authority.
Such an application shall be made by complaint to the magistrates' court. . .
@(4) If, on such an application, it is proved that the conditions mentioned in subsection (1) above are fulfilled, the magistrates' court g may make an order under this section (an 'anti-social behaviour order') which prohibits the defendant from doing anything described in the order.
"(5) For the purpose of determining whether the condition mentioned in subsection (I)(a) above is fulfilled, the court shall disregard any act of the defendant which he shows was reasonable in the circumstances.
"(6) The prohibitions that may be imposed by anti-social behaviour order are those necessary for the purpose of protecting from further antisocial acts by the defendant—(a) persons in the local government area; and (b) persons in any adjoining local government area specified in the application for the order. . .
"(7) An anti-social behaviour order shall have effect for a period (not less than two years) specified in the order or until further order.
"(8) Subject to subsection (9) below, the applicant or the defendant may apply by complaint to the court which made an anti-social behaviour order for it to be varied or discharged by a further order.
"(9) Except with the consent of both parties, no anti-social behaviour order shall be discharged before the end of the period of two years beginning with the date of service of the order.
"(10) If without reasonable excuse a person does anything which he is prohibited from doing by an anti-social behaviour order, he shall be liable—(a) on summary conviction, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum, or to both; or (b) on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or to a fine, or to both.
"(11) Where a person is convicted of an offence under subsection (to) above, it shall not be open to the court by or before which he is so convicted to make an order under subsection (t)(b) (conditional discharge) of section 1A of the Powers of Criminal Courts Act 1973 ('the 1973 Act') in respect of the offence."
The section falls into two distinct parts. Subsection (r) deals with the making of the application, the requirements for the making of an order, C the making of an order, and consequential matters. Subsections (10) and (T 1) deal with the consequences of a breach of the order.

- Article 6 of the European Convention provides as follows:

"(12) In the determination of his civil rights and obligations or of any criminal charge against him, everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law. Judgment shall be pronounced publicly but the press and public may be excluded from all or part of the trial in the interest of morals, public order or national security in a democratic society, where the interests of juveniles or the protection of the private life of the parties so require, or to the extent strictly necessary in the opinion of the court in special circumstances where publicity would prejudice the interests of justice.

Everyone charged with a criminal offence shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.
Everyone charged with a criminal offence has the following minimum rights: (a) to be informed promptly, in a language which he understands and in detail, of the nature and cause of the accusation against him; (b) to have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his defence; (c) to defend himself in person or through legal assistance of his own choosing or, if he has not sufficient means to pay for legal assistance, to be given it free when the interests of justice so require; (d) to examine or have examined witnesses against him and to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him; (e) to have the free assistance of an interpreter if he cannot understand or speak the language used in court."
While the guarantee of a fair trial under article 6(1) applies to both criminal and civil proceedings article 6 prescribes in paragraphs 2 and 3 additional protections applicable only to criminal proceedings. It is also well established in European jurisprudence that "the contracting states have greater latitude when dealing with civil cases concerning civil rights and obligations than they have when dealing with criminal cases": Dombo Beheer B v The Netherlands (1993) 18 EHRR 213, 2.2.9, Para 32
IV The C Mangham case

- In late February 2000, the Kensington and Chelsea Royal London Borough Council received a report by a housing trust about the behaviour of the defendant, then aged 16, who lived on an estate within the borough. After detailed investigations the borough resolved to apply to the magistrates' court for an anti-social behaviour order. The complaint was supported by witness statements containing some first-hand evidence of the defendant's behaviour. The application was, however, primarily based on hearsay evidence contained in records of complaints received by the trust and in crime reports compiled by the police. The latter contained information relating to a wide range of behaviour, from allegations of verbal abuse to serious criminal activities including assault, burglary, criminal damage, and drug dealing dating from April 1998 to December 2000. The allegations revealed a high level of serious and persistent anti-social behaviour. The material from the records of the trust and the police fell into three categories: (I) anonymous complaints where the source was never known; (ii) complaints where the source was known but was not disclosed; (iii) computerised reports made by police officers in the course of their duties, where the source of the complaint was either unknown or not disclosed. The borough served its supporting material on the defendant. In substance the material in its cumulative effect was, subject to any answer by the defendant, logically probative of the statutory requirements under section r, The statements and exhibits were not, however, accompanied by a hearsay notice under the Magistrates' Courts (Hearsay Evidence in Civil Proceedings) Rules 1999 (SI 1999/681).
- Pursuant to an order by the judge a hearsay notice was served on the defendant. The defendant challenged the validity of the hearsay notice on the ground that it did not identify the makers of the hearsay statements. At a pre-trial review the district judge ruled that on reflection, the 1999 Rules did not apply as the borough's supporting material involved no hearsay. The judge stated a case for the decision of the Divisional Court which raised questions about the admissibility of hearsay evidence in the proceedings under section 1(1) of the Act.

- In the Divisional Court [2001] EWHC Admin 582 the view of the district judge as to what amounted to hearsay evidence was rejected. In an unreported judgment Schiemann. I.,J observed that "If the policeman could only say that he had been told by such persons [who had seen the behaviour in question] that Mr Clingham had behaved in an anti-social manner that would be hearsay evidence of the behaviour": para 15. Relying on the then unreported decisions of the Divisional Court in R (McCann) v Crown Court at Manchester [2001] 1 WI..R 358 and B v Chief Constable of Avon and Somerset Constabulary [2001] 1 WLR 340 the Divisional Court ruled that the proceedings were not criminal proceedings under domestic law and did not involve a criminal charge under article 6. In these circumstances Schiemann LJ concluded, in paras 19-20:

"The |hearsay] evidence can be admitted. If its weight is slight or it is not probative the judge can say so. If he comes to an unlawful conclusion his decision can be appealed ... In the light of this judgment, it is unnecessary for us to make any order. The matter will remain to be dealt with by the magistrates' court. That court will consider the evidence on the basis that it is hearsay evidence and therefore subject to the criticisms which can be made of hearsay evidence. The court will have to consider what weight to give to the evidence in the light of those criticisms. I do not consider it appropriate for this court to express any views as to weight."

Poole [took the same view, at paras 21 and 22.

The McCann cases

- I gratefully refer to the account given by my noble and learned friend Lord Hope of Craighead of the background to these cases. I can therefore deal with the matter briefly. Between May and September 1999 die Chief Constable of Greater Manchester collected evidence with a view to seeking anti-social behaviour orders against the three McCann brothers who were then respectively aged 13, 15 and 16. They had been accused by various members of the public of criminal activity and other anti-social behaviour including burglary, theft, threatening and abusive behaviour, and criminal damage in the Beswick area of Manchester. Complaints were duly lodged by the Chief Constable against them. The applications sought various prohibitions against them including orders excluding them from Beswick. The seriousness and persistence of their alleged anti-social behaviour is dearly described by Lord Hope of Craighead, (he evidence against them consisted of oral evidence of eye witnesses, as well as hearsay evidence consisting of a number of witness statements, and police evidence of what had been reported to them by complainants.
- A stipendiary magistrate found the requirements of section 1(1) satisfied and made anti-social behaviour orders against all three McCann brothers on 15 December 1999. Each order provided as follows:

"[The defendant] is prohibited from entering the Beswick area as defined, edged in red, on the map attached- [The defendant] is prohibited from using or engaging in any abusive, insulting, offensive, threatening or intimidating language or behaviour in any public place in the City of Manchester. [The defendant] is prohibited from threatening or engaging in violence or damage against any person or property within the City of Manchester. [The defendant] is prohibited from encouraging any other person to engage in any of the acts described in paragraphs a and 3 within the City of Manchester."
The defendants appealed to the Crown Court.

- Sir Rhys Davies QC, the Recorder of Manchester, sat with two magistrates. After a review of the domestic and European case law he concluded that the proceedings under section 1(1) are correctly to be classified as civil under domestic law and for the purposes of article 6. The recorder then turned to the argument that, despite this classification, the criminal standard should apply under section 1(1). He cited an observation in B v Chief Constable of Avon and Somerset Constabulary [2.00:1) 1 WLR 340, 354, para 31, where Lord Bingham of Cornhill CJ described, in the context of section z of the Act, which deals with orders against sex offenders, the heightened civil standard of proof as "for all practical purposes . . . indistinguishable from the criminal standard". I the recorder stated:

"Having considered this authority and the arguments, we are satisfied that the standard to be applied is the civil standard, but how are we to give effect to the guidance of the Lord Chief Justice, that is to apply the civil standard with the strictness appropriate to the seriousness of the matters to be proved and the implications of proving them. This is not an easy task and we have brought to bear the judicial experience of all three of us which, it is has to be said, is considerable, and we have concluded that in reality it is difficult to establish reliable gradations between a heightened civil standard commensurate with [the] seriousness and implications of proving the requirements, and the criminal standard. And we have concluded chat for the purposes of this particular case, and we do not intend to lay down any form of precedent, so I emphasises that for the purposes of this particular case, we will apply the standard of being satisfied so that we are sure that the conditions are fulfilled before we would consider the making of an order in the case of each [defendant] severally, because, of course, each case must be considered separately."

This is an important observation, by a highly experienced judge, to which I must in due course return. ^

- The defendants appealed to the Divisional Court. Lord Woolf CJ (with the agreement of Rafferty J) ruled that the proceedings under section 1(1) were properly to be classified under domestic law and under article 6 of the European Convention as civil proceedings and not criminal proceedings. The court dismissed the appeal: R (McCann) v Croum Court at Manchester [2.001] 1 WLR 3 58,

- The defendants then appealed to the Court of Appeal (Civil Division). The leading judgment was given by Lord Phillips of Worth Matravers MR; Kennedy and Dyson IJJ agreed: R (McCann) 1/ Crown

R (McCann) v Manchester Crown Ct (HL(E)

A Court at Manchester [2001] t WLR 1084. In a detailed judgment Lord Phillips MR concluded that both under domestic law and under article 6 the correct categorisation of proceedings under section 1 of the Act is civil. He then turned to the issue whether the standard of proof should nevertheless be the criminal one. He referred to the observation of Lord Bingham of Cornhill CJ in B v Chief Constable of Avon and Somerset Constabulary that the heightened civil standard is for all practical purposes indistinguishable from the criminal standard: p 1101, para 65. He quoted the passage from the judgment of the recorder about the difficulty of establishing "reliable gradations between a heightened civil standard commensurate with the seriousness and implications of proving the requirements, and the criminal standard" and pointed out that the Crown Court decided to apply the criminal standard. Lord Phillips MR observed, at p 1102, para 67:

"I believe that the course followed by the Crown Court in this case is likely to be appropriate in the majority of cases where an anti-social behaviour order is sought, and I would commend it."

At present therefore the position is that in proceedings under section I.(T) magistrates have to decide, on a case by case basis, what standard of proof to 0 apply. The Secretary of State has challenged this ruling of the Court of Appeal. Counsel submitted on his behalf that it is preferable to apply a single fixed standard of a balance of probabilities.

V! The social problem

- Before the issues can be directly addressed it is necessary to sketch the social problem which led to the enactment of section T {I) and the

E technique which underlies the first part of section 1. It is well known that in some urban areas, notably urban housing estates and deprived inner-city areas, young persons, and groups of young persons, cause fear, distress, and misery to law-abiding and innocent people by outrageous anti-social behaviour. It takes many forms. It includes behaviour which is criminal such as assaults and threats, particularly against old people and children, F criminal damage to individual property and amenities of the community, burglary, theft, and so forth. Sometimes the conduct falls short of cognisable criminal offences. The culprits are mostly, but not exclusively, male. Usually they are relatively young, ranging particularly from about 1.0 to T,8 years of age. Often people in the neighbourhood are in fear of such young culprits. In many cases, and probably in most, people will only report _ matters to the police anonymously or on the strict understanding that they will not directly or indirectly be identified. In recent years this phenomenon became a serious social problem. There appeared to be a gap in the law. The criminal law offered insufficient protection to communities. Public confidence in the rule of law was undermined by a not unreasonable view in some communities that the law failed them. Ibis was the social problem which section 1 was designed to address.

· The legislative technique

- The aim of the criminal law is not punishment for its own sake but to permit everyone to go about their daily lives without fear of harm to person or property. Unfortunately, by intimidating people the culprits, usually small in number, sometimes effectively silenced communities, bear of the consequences of complaining to the police dominated the thoughts of people: reporting incidents to the police entailed a serious risk of reprisals.

The criminal law by itself offered inadequate protection to them. There was a model available for remedial legislation. Before 1998 Parliament had, on a number of occasions, already used the technique of prohibiting by statutory injunction conduct deemed to be unacceptable and making a breach of the g injunction punishable by penalties. It may be that the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 was the precedent for subsequent use of the technique. The civil remedy of disqualification enabled the court to prohibit a person from acting as a director: section 1(1) of the 1986 Act: *R v Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, Ex p McCormick [1998] BCC 379, 395C-F; Official Receiver v Stern [2.000] 1 WLR 2.2.30. Breach of the order made available criminal penalties: sections 13 and 14 of the 1986 Act. In 1994 c Parliament created the power to prohibit trespassory assemblies which could result in serious disruption affecting communities, movements, and so forth: see section 70 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 which amended Part II of the Public Order Act 1986 by inserting section 14A. Section 14B which was introduced by the 1994 Act, created criminal offences in respect of breaches. In the field of family law, statute created the power to make residence orders, requiring a defendant to leave a dwelling house; or non-molestation orders, requiring a defendant to abstain from threatening an associated person: sections 3 3 (3)(4) and 42 of the Family Law Act 1996. The penalty for breach is punishment for contempt of court. The Housing Act 1996 created the power to grant injunctions against anti-social behaviour: section 152; section 153 (breach). This was, however, a power ^ severely restricted in respect of locality. A broadly similar technique was adopted in the Protection from Harassment Act 1997: section 3; section 3(6) (breach). Post-dating the Crime and Disorder Act 1998, which is the subject matter of the present appeals, Parliament adopted a similar model in sections 14A and 14J (breach) of the Football Spectators Act T989, inserted by section 1(1) of and Schedule 1 to the Football (Disorder) Act 2000: Gough v Chief Constable of the Derbyshire Constabulary [2002J QB 459. In all these cases the requirements for the granting of the statutory injunction depend on the criteria specified in the particular statute. The unifying clement is, however, the use of the civil remedy of an injunction to prohibit conduct considered to be utterly unacceptable, with a remedy of criminal penalties in the event of disobedience.

- There is no doubt that Parliament intended to adopt the model of a civil remedy of an injunction, hacked up by criminal penalties, when its enacted section 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998. The view was taken that the proceedings for an anti-social behaviour order would be civil and would not attract the rigour of the inflexible and sometimes absurdly technical hearsay rule which applies in criminal cases. If this supposition was wrong, in the sense that Parliament did not objectively achieve its aim, it would inevitably follow that the procedure for obtaining anti-social behaviour orders is completely or virtually unworkable and useless. If that is what the law decrees, so be it. My starting point is, however, an initial scepticism of an outcome which would deprive communities of their fundamental rights: sec Brown v Stott I2003] 1: AC 681, per Lord

- The classification under domestic law

· It is necessary to consider whether under domestic law proceedings under the first part of section 1 should be classified as criminal or civil fi proceedings. In law it is always essential to ask for what purpose a classification is to be made or a definition is to be attempted. It is necessary in order to decide whether the provisions of the Civil Evidence Act 1995, which permits the admission of hearsay evidence in civil proceedings, and the Magistrates' Courts (Hearsay Evidence in Civil Proceedings) Rules 1999, are available to establish the requirements of section 1(1). It is also relevant to the appropriate standard of proof to be adopted.

2.0 In a classic passage in Proprietary Articles Trade Association v Attorney General for Canada [1:931] AC 310, 314 Lord Atkin observed:

"Criminal law connotes only the quality of such acts or omissions as are prohibited under appropriate penal provisions by authority of the state. The criminal quality of an act cannot be discerned by intuition; nor can it be discovered by reference to any standard but one: Is the act ^ prohibited with penal consequences?"

In Customs and Excise Conns v City of London Magistrates' Court [2000] 1 WLR 2,02,0, 2025 Lord Bingham of Cornhill C.1, expressed himself in similar vein:

"It is in my judgment the general understanding that criminal proceedings involve a formal accusation made on behalf of the state or by a private prosecutor that a defendant has committed a breach of the criminal law, and the state or the private prosecutor has instituted proceedings which may culminate in the conviction and condemnation of the defendant."

24.11.3 Absent any special statutory definition, in the relevant contexts, this general understanding must be controlling. Counsel for Gingham invited the House CO approach the question from the point of view of the meaning given in decided cases to the words "criminal cause or matter" which appear in section I(r)(a) of the Administration of justice Act 1.960 and section 1 8(I)(a) of the Supreme Court Act 198 1. The decided cases on both sides of the line are helpfully summarised in Taylor On Appeals (2000), pp 51:6—518, paras 14-020-14-021. The cases were decided in the context of regulating and determining the appropriate appeal route. Often pragmatic considerations played a role. These cases do not help the true inquiry before the House and distract attention from the ordinary meaning of civil proceedings which must prevail Similarly, the fact that proceedings under the first part of section r of the Act are classified as criminal in order to ensure the availability to defendants of legal assistance is in my view entirely W neutral: see section 12(2) of the Access to Justice Act 1.999 and paragraph T(I) of the Access to justice Act 1999 (Commencement No 3, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2000 (SI 2000/774). I would approach rite matter by applying the tests enunciated by Lord Atkin and Lord Bingham of Cornhill CJ.

- Counsel for the defendants accepted that the purpose of Parliament A was to cast proceedings under the first part of section I, as opposed to proceedings for breach, in a civil mould. However, counsel submitted that objectively considered the objective was not achieved. They argued that in reality and in substance such proceedings are criminal in character. This is an important argument which must be carefully examined. The starting point is that in proceedings under the first part of section I the Crown Prosecution Service is not involved at all. At that stage there is no formal accusation of a breach of criminal law. The proceedings are initiated by the civil process of a complaint. Under section x(I}(a) all that has to be established is that the person has acted "in an anti-social manner, that is to say, in a manner that caused or was likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress to one or more persons not of the same household as himself '. This is an objective inquiry: men's rea as an ingredient of particular offences need is not proved. It is unnecessary to establish criminal liability. The true purpose of the proceedings is preventative. This appears from the heading of Part I. It is also clearly brought out by the requirement of section I(I)(b}:

"that such an order is necessary to protect persons in the local government area in which the harassment, alarm or distress was caused or was likely to be caused from further anti-social acts by him. It follows that the making of an anti-social behaviour order is not a conviction or condemnation that the person is guilty of an offence. It results in no penalty whatever. It cannot be entered on a defendant's record as a conviction. It is also not a recordable offence for the purpose of taking fingerprints: see section 27 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1:984.

- Counsel for the defendants sought to avoid the consequences of this analysis by various arguments. First, they argued that the procedure leading to the making of an order under section 1(4) must be considered together with the proceedings for breach under section 1(1.0), the latter being undoubtedly criminal in character. I do not agree. These are separate and independent procedures. The making of the order will presumably sometimes serve its purpose and there will be no proceedings for breach. It is in principle necessary to consider the two stages separately.

- Counsel next made a comparison between the requirements of section 1 and the ingredients of an offence under section 4A of the Public Order Act 1986. They submitted that there was a striking similarity. This proposition was not made good. It is sufficient to point out that section 4A of the 1986 Act requires proof of men's rea whereas section 1(1) does not. In any event, this is a barren exercise. It elides the critical point that section 1 itself does not prohibit any act. An anti-social behaviour order under C section 1(4) does prohibit conduct specified in the order but by itself does not amount to a condemnation of guilt, ft results in no penal sanction.

- Counsel for the defendants also emphasised the consequences which an anti-social behaviour order may have for a defendant. This is an important factor. Section 1 is not meant to be used in cases of minor unacceptable behaviour but in cases which satisfy the threshold of persistent and serious anti-social behaviour. Given the threshold requirements of section 1 (1) it can readily be accepted that the making of such an order against a person inevitably reflects seriously on his character. In response to this argument Lord Phillips of Worth Matravers MR observed 1200 t] 1: W I R 1084,1094-1095, para 39:

"Many injunctions in civil proceedings operate severely upon those against whom they are ordered. In matrimonial proceedings a husband may be ordered to leave his home and not to have contact with his children. Such an order may be made as a consequence of violence which amounted to criminal conduct. But such an order is imposed not for the purpose of punishment but for protection of the family. This demonstrates that, when considering whether an order imposes a penalty or punishment, it is necessary to look beyond its consequence and to consider its purpose."

Similarly, Mareva injunctions, which are notified to a defendant's bank, may have serious consequences. An Anton Filler order operates in some ways like a civil search warrant and may be particularly intrusive in its operation. Breach of such orders may result in penalties. Nevertheless, the injunctions are unquestionably civil.

- The view that proceedings for an anti-social behaviour order under section 1 are civil in character is further supported by two important decisions. In B v Chief Constable of Avon and Somerset Constabulary [2001] 1 WLR 340 the question arose whether proceedings for a sex offender order under section 2 of the Act are civil. Section 2 is different in conception from section 1 in as much as an order can only be made in respect of a person who has already been convicted as a sex offender. On the other hand, its purpose is preventative "to protect the public from serious harm from him". Lord Bingham of Cornhill CJ held, at p 3 52, para 25:

"The rationale of section 2 was, by means of an injunctive order, to seek to avoid the contingency of any further suffering by any further victim. It would also of course be to the advantage of a defendant if he were to be saved from further offending. As in the case of a civil injunction, a breach of the court's order may attract a sanction. But, also as in the case of a civil injunction, the order, although restraining the defendant from doing that which is prohibited, imposes no penalty or disability upon him. I am accordingly satisfied that, as a matter of English domestic law, the application is a civil proceeding, as Parliament undoubtedly intended it to be."

To the same effect was the detailed reasoning in Gough v Chief Constable of the Derbyshire Constabulary [2002] QB 459; an^ 0,1 appeal [2002] QB 121.3. h was held that a football banning order under sections 14A and 1.4B of the Football Spectators Act 1989 do not involve criminal penalties and are therefore civil character.

- conclude that proceedings to obtain an anti-social behaviour order are civil proceedings under domestic law.

· The classification under article 6

- The question now arises whether, despite its domestic classification, an anti-social behaviour order nevertheless has a criminal character in accordance with the autonomous concepts of article 6. The fair trial guarantee under article 6(1) applies to both "the determination of a (person's) civil rights" and "the determination of any criminal charge". On the other hand, only the latter attract the additional protections under article 6(2} and 6(3). In so far as the latter provisions apply to "everyone charged with a criminal offence" it is well established in the jurisprudence of the European Court of Human Rights that this concept is co-extensive with A the concept of the determination of any criminal charge: *Lutz v Germany {1987) 10 EHRR i8z. Germane to the present case is the minimum right under article 6'(3)(d) of everyone charged with a criminal, offence to examine or have examined witnesses against him or to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him. If the proceedings under section 1 of the Act are fi criminal within the meaning of article 6, this provision is applicable. If it is civil, article 6(3){d) is inapplicable.

- Before I examine directly in the light of European jurisprudence the question whether proceedings involve a criminal charge, it is necessary to make clear that this is not one of those cases where the proceedings may fall outside article 6 altogether. Examples of such cases are given by Emmerson & Ashworth, Human Rights and Criminal Justice (2001), pp 152—166. In C the cases before the House the two principal respondents accept that the proceedings are civil in character and that they attract the fair trial guarantee under article 6(1). Counsel for the Secretary of State in the McCann case reserved his position. For my part, in the light of the particular use of the civil remedy of an injunction, as well as the defendant's right under article 8 to respect for his private and family life, it is dear that a defendant Q has the benefit of the guarantee applicable to civil proceedings under article 6(1). Moreover, under domestic English law they undoubtedly have a constitutional right to a fair hearing in respect of such proceedings.

- In Engel v The Netherlands (No 1) (1976) 1 EHRR 647, 678-679, para 82, the European Court established three criteria for determining whether proceedings are "criminal" within the meaning of the Convention, namely (a) the domestic classification, (b) the nature of the offence, and (c) the severity of the potential penalty which the defendant risks incurring. The character and attributes of the proceedings for an anti-social behaviour order have been outlined. Domestically, they are properly classified as civil.

That is, however, only a starting point. Turning to factor (b), the position is that the order under the first part of section 1 does not constitute a finding that an offence has been committed: contrast the community charge decision in Benhatn v United Kingdom (1996) 22 EHRR 293. It is right, however, to observe that the third factor is the most important. Here the position is that the order itself involves no penalty. The established criteria suggest that the proceedings were not in respect of a criminal charge.

- The House has been taken on a tour d'horizon of the leading decisions of the European Court: see the judgment of Potter LJ in Han v Customs and Excise Comrs [2001] 1 WLR 2253, 2269-2273, paras 55-64 C for a recent review of the European case law. It will serve no purpose to review again decisions far removed from the present case. What does emerge, however, is that there is, as Lord Bingham of Cornhill CJ pointed out in B v Chief Constable of Avon and Somerset Constabulary [2001]

1 WLR 340, no case in which the European Court has held proceedings to be criminal even though an adverse outcome for the defendant cannot result in ^ any penalty. It could be said, of course, that there is scope for the law to be developed in this direction. On the other hand, an extensive interpretation of what is a criminal charge under article 6(r) would, by rendering the injunctive process ineffectual, prejudice the freedom of liberal democracies to maintain the rule of law by the use of civil injunctions.

A 32 The closest case in support of the defendants' submission is Steel v United Kingdom (1998) 28 EHRR 603, 635-636, paras 48-49, which is authority for the proposition that proceedings whereby in England and Wales a person may be bound over to keep the peace involve the determination of a criminal charge for the purposes of article 6. This power goes back many centuries: see Percy v Director of Public Prosecutions [1995] 1 WLR 1382, 138911-139011. It is in a very real sense a judicial power sui generis. The European Court found a punitive element in the fact that the magistrates may commit to prison any person who refuses to be bound over not to breach the peace where there is evidence beyond reasonable doubt that his or her conduct caused or was likely to cause a breach of the peace and that he would otherwise cause a breach of the peace: para 48. There was an immediate and obvious penal consequence. Properly analysed this case does not assist the defendant's argument.

- The conclusion I have reached is reinforced by a cogently reasoned judgment on the interpretation of article 6 by the Lord President (Lord Rodger of Earls ferry) in S v Miller 2001 SC 977. Section 52(2) of the Children (Scotland) Act 1995 provides that a child may have to be subjected to compulsory measures of supervision when he "has committed an offence". The question arose whether in such proceedings article 6 is applicable. The Lord President observed, at pp 989-990: at the stage when S was arrested and charged by the police on 31 October, he was indeed 'charged with a criminal offence' in terms of article 6, since he was liable to be brought before a criminal court in proceedings which could have resulted in the imposition of a penalty. He remained 'charged with a criminal offence' in terms of article 6 until the procurator fiscal decided the following day—in the language of section 43(5) of the Criminal Procedure Act— 'not to proceed with the charge'. At that point the criminal proceedings came to an end and the reporter initiated the procedures under the 1995 Act by arranging a hearing in terms of section 63(1), In my view, once the procurator fiscal has decided not to proceed with the charge against a child and so there is no longer any possibility of proceedings resulting in a penalty, any subsequent proceedings under the 1995 Act are not criminal for the purposes of article 6. Although the reporter does indeed intend to show that the child concerned committed an offence, this is not for the purpose of punishing him but in order to establish a basis for taking appropriate measures for his welfare. That being so, the child who is notified of grounds for referral setting out the offence in question is not thereby 'charged with a criminal offence' in terms of article 6. "24, It is not now disputed, of course, that the children's hearing proceedings involve the determination of civil rights and obligations. Article 6 therefore applies. But, since the proceedings are not criminal, the specific guarantees in article 6(2) and (3) do not apply."

I am in complete agreement with this reasoning as correctly reflecting the purpose of article 6. And it applies a fortiori to proceedings under section 1. After all, section 1(1) does not require proof of a criminal offence.

- In my view an application for an anti-social behaviour order does not involve the determination of a criminal charge.

- The admission of hearsay evidence

• Having concluded that the proceedings in question are civil under domestic law and article 6, it follows that the machinery of the Civil Evidence Act 1995 and the Magistrates' Courts (Hearsay Evidence in Civil Proceedings) Rules 1999 allow the introduction of such evidence under the first part of section 1. The weight of such evidence might be limited. On the other hand, in its cumulative effect it could be cogent. It all depends on the particular facts. In my view the ruling of the Divisional Court, set out in paragraph Ro above, was correct.

• It is submitted that, even if the relevant proceedings are civil, words must be implied into the Civil Evidence Act 1995 which give the court a wider power to exclude hearsay evidence. As the Divisional Court judgment makes clear this is unnecessary and unwarranted. Counsel in the Clingham case then argued that, even if the proceedings are civil, nevertheless the introduction of hearsay evidence infringes a defendant's right to a fair trial under article 6(1) "in the determination of his civil rights and obligations". This is a misconceived argument. The case has not been heard. Such a challenge is premature. Upon a due consideration of the evidence, direct or hearsay it may turn out that the defendant has no answer to the case under section 1 (1). For the sake of completeness, I need only add that the use of the Civil Evidence Act 1:995 unless in cases under the first part of section 1 are not in any way incompatible with the Human Rights Act 1998.

- The standard of proof

• Having concluded that the relevant proceedings arc civil, in principle it follows that the standard of proof ordinarily applicable in civil £ proceedings, namely the balance of probabilities, should apply. However,
I agree that, given the seriousness of matters involved, at least some reference to the heightened civil standard would usually be necessary: In re H (Minors) (Sexual Abuse: Standard of Proof) [1996] AC 563, 586D-H, per Lord Nicholls of Birkenhead. For essentially practical reasons, the Recorder of Manchester decided to apply the criminal standard. The Court of Appeal said that would usually be the right course to adopt. Lord Bingham of Cornhill has observed that the heightened civil standard and the criminal standard are virtually indistinguishable. I do not disagree with any of these views. But in my view pragmatism dictates that the task of magistrates should be made more straightforward by ruling that they must in all cases under section 1 apply the criminal standard. If the House takes this view it will be sufficient for the magistrates, when applying section T(I){a) to be sure c that the defendant has acted in an anti-social manner, that is to say, in a manner that caused or was likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress to one or more persons not of the same household as himself. The inquiry under section I(I)(b), namely that such an order is necessary to protect Persians from further anti-social acts by him, does not involve a standard of proof: it is an exercise of judgment or evaluation. Ibis approach should facilitate correct decision-making and should ensure consistency and predictability in this corner of the law. In coming to this conclusion I bear in mind that the use of hearsay evidence will often be of crucial importance. For my part, hearsay evidence depending on its logical proactiveness is quite capable of satisfying the requirements of section 1.

A XII The submissions of Liberty

- The House gave permission to Liberty to intervene in the McCann case in writing and orally. The contribution of Liberty has helped to sharpen the focus of the debate on issues under the Human Rights Act 1998. It is, however, unnecessary to deal separately with the submissions of Liberty. The reasons I have given are also dispositive of the issues and arguments g raised by Liberty.

• Jurisdiction

- Section x(x)(a) of the Administration of Justice Act i960 only permits an appeal from a decision of the High Court "in any criminal cause or matter". In my view the proceedings under the first part of section 1 do not satisfy this criterion. It follows that in the Clingman case the House did not have jurisdiction to entertain the appeal.

• Disposal

- For these reasons as well as the reasons given by Lord Hope of Craighead I would dismiss the appeals in the McCann case and formally declare that there was no jurisdiction to hear the Clingham case.

LORD HOPE OF CRAIGHEAD

- My Lords, in a democratic society the protection of public order lies at the heart of good government. This fundamental principle has a prominent place in the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms. Among the grounds on which a public
- authority may interfere with the rights described in articles 8 to T 1: of the Convention, are public safety, the protection of public order and the protection of the rights and freedoms of others. It is only in article 10(1) that one finds an express declaration that the exercise of freedoms carries with its duties and responsibilities. But it is a theme which runs right through the Convention. Respect for the rights of others is the price that we must all pay for the rights and freedoms that it guarantees.

- On the whole we live in a law-abiding community. Most people respect the rights of others, most of the time. People usually refrain from acts which are likely to cause injury to others or to their property. On the occasions when they do not, the sanctions provided by the criminal law are available. But it is a sad fact that there are some individuals for whom respect for the law and for the rights of others has no meaning. Taken one by one, their criminal or sub-criminal acts may seem to be, and indeed often are, relatively trivial. But, taken together, the frequency and scale of their destructive and offensive conduct presents a quite different picture. So does the aggression and intimidation with which their acts are perpetrated. 1 he social disruption which their behaviour creates is unacceptable. So too is the apparent inability of the criminal law to restrain their activities. This provides the background to the enactment of section 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 with which your Lordships are concerned in these appeals.

- The main question which they raise is the familiar one of classification. If proceedings under section 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 are to be classified as criminal proceedings for the purposes of article 6 of the Convention, all the normal rules of evidence which apply to a criminal prosecution in domestic law must be applied to them. This is of crucial importance to the use which may be made in these proceedings of hearsay evidence. In domestic terms, hearsay evidence under the Civil Evidence Act 1995 would be inadmissible in these proceedings if they are too, he classified as criminal. In Convention terms, the persons against whom anti-social behaviour orders were sought would be entitled to the protection g of article 6(3){d) if it applies to them. Under that paragraph every person charged with a criminal offence has the right to examine or have examined the witnesses against him. But much of the benefit which the legislation was designed to achieve would be lost if this is how these proceedings have to be classified. It would greatly disturb the balance which section 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 seeks to strike between the interests of the individual and those of society.

- The reason for this is not hard to find. So often those who are directly affected by this conduct lack both the inclination and the resources to do anything about it. Above all, they have been intimidated and they are afraid. They know that they risk becoming targets for further anti-social behaviour if they turn to the law for their protection. It is unrealistic to expect them to seek the protection of an injunction under the civil law. Reports to the police about criminal conduct are likely to result in their having to give evidence. In this situation the opportunity which civil proceedings provide for the use of hearsay evidence is a valuable safeguard.

It greatly increases the prospect of persuading those who are likely to be exposed to further anti-social behaviour to co-operate with the authorities in protecting them from such conduct.

The facts

- The facts of the Clingham case have been described by my noble and learned friend Lord Steyn, and I gracefully adopt his account. As he has pointed out, it is a striking feature of that case that two of the statements relied on were anonymous and two of them were by persons who were in fear of reprisals if they were to be called on to give evidence. I should like to ^ deal in my speech with the facts in the case of McCann, which has similar characteristics.

- The defendants in the case of McCann are three brothers who all live in the Ardwick area of Manchester. They were aged 16, 15 and 1.3 011 1:7 May 2000 when anti-social behaviour orders were made against them by Judge Rhys Davies QC, the Recorder of Manchester, sitting in the Crown Court with lay magistrates.

- The Chief Constable of Greater Manchester had been collecting evidence against the defendants for a period of about five months between May and September 1999. They had been accused by various members of the public in the Beswick area of Manchester of threatening and abusive behaviour, causing criminal damage, theft, and burglary. On 28 September 1999 the Chief Constable consulted with Manchester City Council, the council for the relevant local government area, as required by section 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998. I hey agreed that an application for antisocial behaviour orders should be made. 1 the Chief Constable laid complaints against the defendants at Manchester Magistrates' Court on 22 October 1999, and summonses were served on them on 1 November 19951. On 15 December 1999 Mr Alan Berg, a stipendiary magistrate, made anti-social behaviour orders against each of them, which they then appealed. Their appeal was heard in the form of a rehearing by the Crown Court.

- The stipendiary magistrate held that the defendants had acted in a manner which caused or was likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress to one or more persons not of the same household as themselves by offensive, abusive, insulting, threatening and intimidating words and behaviour as well as violent behaviour towards people in the local authority area of Manchester. He also held that an anti-social behaviour order was necessary to protect persons in that area and he made prohibitions against each of them. Dismissing their appeals, the Crown Court made identical orders to those made by the magistrate which prohibited each of them: (x) from entering the Beswick area as defined, edged in red on the map attached; (2) from using or engaging in any abusive, insulting, offensive, threatening or intimidating language or behaviour in any public place in the City of Manchester; (3) from threatening or engaging in violence or damage against any person or property within the City of Manchester; (4) from encouraging any other person to engage in any of the acts described in paragraphs 2 and 3 within the City of Manchester.

- The evidence against the defendants consisted in part of direct evidence and in part of hearsay evidence. Four members of the public gave evidence of various acts of anti-social behaviour. One said that he had been abused on one occasion by two of the defendants and that he had been threatened and assaulted on another occasion by the third. The second said that he had been abused on one occasion by one of the defendants, who on the same occasion also assaulted an unknown youth. the third was an employee of a local supermarket who said that on a number of occasions between April and November 1999 she had been abused, threatened, harassed, and alarmed by all three defendants. The fourth said that he and his customers had been abused by all three defendants between April and September 1999 and that the defendants had sought to intimidate them. Three police officers also gave evidence. One said that on one occasion the oldest defendant caused alarm and physical danger to others by driving a vehicle recklessly. Another said that, on another occasion the same defendant was party to the theft of a bag from a car. A third gave direct evidence of threats and abuse by two of the defendants of a householder by banging on the door and interfering with the electrics of the property. This incident was also the subject of anonymous hearsay evidence. Anonymous hearsay evidence was also given by the police of four other incidents. One was burglary of domestic premises by two of the defendants. The second was damage to a motor vehicle by the same two defendants. The third was the throwing of items into the street from scaffolding which they had climbed. The fourth was the abuse by one of them of market stall holders. There was also a hearsay witness statement of the abuse by two of the defendants of firefighters. _

- The overall picture which was painted by the evidence was of a prolonged course of behaviour which caused or was likely to cause harassment, alarm, or distress to many people in the local government area during this six-month period. The contribution which was made to the picture by the hearsay evidence, while not perhaps crucial, was certainly significant.

Classification in domestic law

- I agree with Lord Steyn, for all the reasons that he has given, that proceedings leading to the imposition of an anti-social behaviour order under section r of the Crime and Disorder Act 199^ are civil proceedings in domestic law. I should like to add only a few observations to what he has said. .

- Section 19 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 provides tor the g imposition of anti-social behaviour orders in Scotland. There are some differences of detail in the scheme which this section lays down from that which section 1 lays down for use in England and Wales. But the broad aim is the same. It is designed to deal with persons who have acted in an antisocial manner or have pursued a course of anti-social conduct that caused or was likely to cause alarm or distress. A conviction for breach of an antisocial behaviour order in Scotland carries with it the same penalties under section 22(1) as those prescribed for England and Wales by section r(io)- The important point for present purposes lies in the choice which Parliament has made as to the proceedings which are to be used for making these applications in Scotland. Section 19(2) provides that an application for an anti-social behaviour order shall be made by summary application to the sheriff within whose sheriffdom the alarm or distress was alleged to have been caused or was likely to have been caused.

3 The question whether a summary application to a sheriff a civil proceeding in Scots domestic law is quite straightforward in comparison with the equivalent and more complex question under English law. This is because the Scottish system has always maintained a firm distinction at levels between criminal and civil procedure. The civil nature of the _ procedure for the imposition of anti-social behaviour order is indicated at the outset by the fact that section 19(1) of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 provides that an application for an anti-social behaviour order is to be made by the local authority. Criminal proceedings cannot be brought by a local authority in Scotland. They can be brought only by or on the authority of the Lord Advocate. Then there is the nature of the procedure that is prescribed by section 19(2). A summary application to the sheriff is defined by section 3 (p) of the Sheriff Courts (Scotland) Act 1907 as including all applications, whether by appeal or otherwise, brought under any Act of Parliament which provides, or, according to any practice in the sheriff court, which allows that the same shall be disposed of in a summary manner, but which does not more particularly define in what form it is too he heard, tried or determined. The long title of the 1907 Act states that it is an Act to regulate and amend the laws and practice relating to the civil procedure in sheriff courts in Scotland. An appeal against the judgment of the sheriff on a summary application lies to the sheriff principal and to the Court of Session, cither direct or from the sheriff principal, under sections 27 and 28 of the 1907 Act. The fact that appeals do not He to the High Court of Justiciary, which has exclusive jurisdiction for the hearing of appeals in criminal cases, is a further sign, if more were needed, that in domestic terms this is a civil proceeding.

It is worth noting that in S v Miller 2001 SC 977, 988, para 19 Lord President Rodger said that children's hearings under section 52 of the Children (Scotland) Act 1995, a«<J- the related proceedings before the sheriff, have always been regarded as being civil in character, even where they contain a ground for referral under section 5i(I){I) which is chat the child has committed an offence. In McGregor v D 1977 SC 330, 336 Lord President Emslie said, with reference to the provisions of Part III of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 which have now been re-enacted with amendments in Part II of the Children (Scotland) Act T.995, that in no sense were these proceedings criminal proceedings. As he put it, they are on the contrary civil proceeding's sui generis. Where the ground of referral is that the child has committed an offence and the sheriff is asked to consider whether this ground has been established under section 68 of the 1995 Act, the standard of proof which must be applied is that which is required in criminal procedure: section 68(3)(b). The Civil Evidence (Scotland) Act 1988 provides for the abolition of corroboration and the admission of hearsay evidence in civil proceedings. But section 9 of that Act excepts from the definition of "civil proceedings" for the purposes of chat Act any hearing by a sheriff of an application under what is now Part II of the Children (Scotland) Act 1995 where the ground of referral was that the child has committed an offence. Nevertheless, the proceedings which Parliament has laid down for the determination of these applications by the sheriff is civil procedure. The reason for this, as the Lord President said in S v Miller 2001 SC 977, 988, para 20, is that, even though the proceedings may involve establishing that the child has committed an offence, there is no possibility of the child being punished for the offence under them by the imposition of a penalty. This approach is consistent with the principle which was referred to by Lord Wright in Amand v Home Secretary [1943] AC 147, r6T where he said that a criminal cause or matter was one which, if carried to its conclusion, might result in the conviction of the person charged and in a sentence of some punishment.

I think that two important points can be derived from these provisions relating to Scotland in support of the proposition that proceedings which are brought in England and Wales under section 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 are civil proceedings. The first is that the fact that Parliament chose to provide for the use of civil proceedings in applications for anti-social behaviour orders in Scotland strongly suggests that its intention was that applications for these orders which were made in England and Wales should be made by way of civil proceedings also. The grounds on which these applications may be made in both jurisdictions are similar, and the consequences of the making of an anti-social behaviour order are the same. In neither jurisdiction does an anti-social behaviour order have them. character of a punishment for an offence such as a fine or imprisonment. The fact that an anti-social behaviour order has been made against him does not appear on the person's criminal record. On the contrary, the order is described in both section 1(4) and section 1:9(3) as a prohibition. In this respect it has the character of a civil injunction or, in Scotland, a civil interim interdict. A criminal sanction is available in both jurisdictions if the person is convicted of having breached the order: see section 1 (Ro) for England and Wales and section 1 for Scotland. But the proceedings which must be brought in the event of a breach are separate proceedings. Overall, the scheme is so similar in both jurisdictions that the intention of Parliament as to the nature of the proceedings under which the application was to be made can be taken, in the absence of any contrary indication, to have been the same.

[2003] AC

The second point is that it would not be inconsistent with a finding that the proceedings under section I(I) of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 were civil proceedings for your Lordships to hold that the standard of proof to be applied was that which is required in criminal proceedings. In Constanda v M r 997 SC 217 the ground on which the child had been referred to a children's hearing was that he was exposed to moral danger in terms of section 3 2.(2.)(b) of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968. The Court of Session held that, as the whole substratum of the ground of referral was that the child had performed certain acts which constituted criminal offences, the commission of these offences had to be proved to the criminal standard. This was despite the fact that the proceedings before the sheriff were civil proceedings, and in the absence of any rule laid down by the Act which required the criminal standard to be applied in any case other than where the child had been referred under section 32(2)^) on the ground that he had committed an offence.

Classification under the Convention

- The fact that the proceedings are classified in our domestic law as civil proceedings is not conclusive of the question whether they are of that character for the purposes of article 6 of the Convention. It provides no more than a starting point, as the question has to be examined in the light of the common denominator of the legislation of the contracting states: Engel v The Netherlands (No 1) 1 EHRR 647, 678, para 82.
- The examination must begin with the wording of article 6 itself, and in particular with the opening sentence of article 6(1). It provides:

"In the determination of his civil rights and obligations or of any criminal charge against him, everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law."

Then there are the opening words of article 6(3) which provides chat everyone "charged with a criminal offence" is to have the minimum rights which are set out in that article.

- There are two aspects of the wording of article 6 that I think are worth noting before I turn to the authorities. The first is that, for article 6 to apply at all, the proceedings must be capable of being classified either as proceedings for the determination of the person's "civil rights and obligations" or as proceedings for the determination of a "criminal charge" against him. Rut it would be wrong to approach the article on the assumption that all that is in issue is the question as to which of these two descriptions better fits the nature of the proceedings. It is not a straight choice between one description and the other. It is possible that the proceedings which are in. issue in a given case will fit neither description. In Albert and Le Compte v Belgium (1983) 5 EHRR 533, 539, para 25 the court observed that there are some cases which are not comprised within either of these categories and which thus fall outside the ambit of article 6(1). For example, in Ravnsborg v Sweden (1994) r8 EHRR 38 the court held that article 6 did not apply to proceedings where the applicant had been fined for making improper statements in written observations before the Swedish courts. The proceedings were regarded as being outside the ambit of article 6 because they were disciplinary in character: p 51, para 34. In

A Raimondo v Italy (1994) 18 EHRR 237 the court held that article 6 did not apply to the proceedings which led to the applicant being placed under special police supervision.

- The second aspect of the wording that is worth noting is that those parts of article 6 which refer to criminal proceedings make it clear that the essential feature of proceedings that have that character for the purposes of g the Convention is that the person is "charged with a criminal offence". This expression is to be interpreted as having an autonomous meaning in the context of the Convention: Adolf v Austria (1982) 4 EHRR 313, 322, para 30. So careful attention must be paid to the meaning which has been attached to these words by the Strasbourg court. As is by now very well known, the case law has established that there are three criteria to be considered. They are not always stated in precisely the same language, but they are usually said to be (1) the classification of the proceedings under national law, (2) the nature of the offence and (3) the nature and degree of severity of the penalty: Engel u The Netherlands (No 1) 1 EHRR 647, 678-679, paras 82-83; Benham v United Kingdom 22 EHRR 293, 323, para 56.
- The words "criminal charge" themselves suggest that the proceedings which they have in mind are not just proceedings where a "charge" is made. The question is whether they are proceedings which may result in the imposition of a penalty. This point emerges clearly from the French text of article 6(r), as Lord President Rodger pointed out in S v Miller z001 SC 977, 988, para 21. It states that the matter which is to be determined must be either a dispute "sur ses droits et obligations de £ caractere civil" or an "accusation en matiere penale". The words "en matiere penale" indicate it is envisaged that there will be a penal element. The court seems to have had this point in mind when, in Engel v The Netherlands (No 1), at p 678, para 82, it asked itself when it was setting out the first criterion "whether the provision(s) defining the offence charged belong, according to the legal system of the respondent state, to criminal law, disciplinary law or both concurrently." In other words, proceedings ^ involving a charge which is merely disciplinary in character will not fall within the ambit of article 6.

- In Oztiirk v Germany (1984) 6 EHRR 409, 421, para 50 the court said that the first matter to be ascertained was "whether or not the text defining the offence in issue belongs, according to the legal system of the respondent state, to criminal law". In the continental systems the texts in question are likely to be found in a code, and there is often a separate criminal code which can readily be identified. As the Lord President observed in S v Miller 2001 SC 977, 988-989, para 21:

“the very titles of such codes of criminal law will often reveal that they are indeed concerned essentially with ‘matiere penale’. For instance, in France there is a ‘code penaie’, in Italy a codice penale1, in Spain a codigo penal’ and in Germany a ‘Strafgesetzbuch’. It follows that when, in such cases as Ozturk, the court investgiates whether the text defining the offence belongs to criminal law, it is investigating whether the text belongs to an area of the law where proceedings can result in a penalty being imposed.”=

Ministerial foreword

It is now seven years since anti-social behaviour orders (ASBOs) were introduced following the Crime and Disorder Act 1998. Since then over 7,300 ASBOs have been issued. We often hear from residents up and down the country about how useful they are in bringing respite to communities suffering anti-social behaviour, The drive to tackle anti-social behaviour has been pioneered by anti-social behaviour practitioners and other interested parties all over England and Wales.

During this time much has happened:

- For our part we have adjusted policy and response to changing demands prompted by practitioners to ensure that the tool continues to be effective.
- The Together Action Line, website and Academy events have provided an excellent source of advice and ensured spread of good practice.
- Practitioners have developed protocols and helpful leaflets to improve communication between themselves.
- A number of organisations have also organised seminars and conferences to bring practitioners together, debate problem areas and resolve issues between them.
- The courts have responded and played their part and we particularly welcome Lord Justice Thomas’s guidance, which has been referred to substantially for the revision of this guidance, and which provides the latest case law for practitioners in a very clear and methodical manner.

The fundamental ethos of ASBOs remains that they combine the twin-track approach of enforcement and support. However, there have also been some developments and policy adjustments as the courts have interpreted ASBO legislation as more and more cases come before them.

After ASBOs were first introduced, orders on conviction were introduced to improve access and timing; and interim orders for extreme cases where communities needed protecting urgently. Since May 2004 courts have been able to issue individual support orders to juveniles issued with ASBOs on application. This is a positive measure, attaching positive conditions to ensure that young people get all the support they need to change their behaviour. I urge agencies to make the greatest possible use of them.

We are also extending the power to apply for orders to the Environment Agency and Transport for London.

We continue to listen to the views of practitioners and stakeholders and to adjust policy and legislation accordingly. One illustration of this has been the development of the one-year review of ASBOs issued to young people, which is explained in this guidance. Although it is not yet enshrined in legislation, we feel that this formalises existing good practice to ensure that young people are provided with the right support throughout the duration of their ASBO.

We also hope to introduce later this year measures to empower the courts to apply rigorous case management in ASBO proceedings.

This guidance is also issued in the context of the Respect programme which builds on the Government’s anti-social behaviour strategy. Under the Respect drive, we will maintain and build on the strong enforcement action that has helped us make so much progress, but extend this further through a comprehensive strategy to deliver:

- a new approach to tackling problem families.
- a wide-ranging programme to address poor parenting.
- measures to improve behaviour and attendance in schools.

Introduction
This guidance on ASBOs draws on the experience of the police service, local authorities, youth offending teams, the courts and other organisations, it is intended for use by practitioners - people with a professional responsibility for tackling anti-social behaviour, whether they represent local authorities, the police, youth offending teams, registered social landlords, prosecutors, the courts, or any other agency which seeks to tackle the problem of anti-social behaviour.
The crime and disorder reduction partnership lies at the heart of the Government's approach to the reduction of both crime and anti-social behaviour (much of which is of course criminal in nature). All crime and disorder reduction partnerships have an antisocial behaviour co-ordinator and access to them is published on the Together website (www.together.gov.uk).All partnerships, too, are required to draw up strategies for the reduction of anti-social behaviour in their areas, and the anti-social behaviour co-ordinators are in the best position to ensure that those strategies genuinely reflect the needs of the community served by the partnerships.
Anti-social behaviour is given a wide meaning by the legislation - to paraphrase the (Time and Disorder Act 1998, it is behaviour that causes or is likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress to one or more people who are not in the same household as the perpetrator. Among the forms it can take are.
- graffiti - which can on its own make even the tidiest urban spaces look squalid and can act as a magnet for further anti-social behaviour and crime.
- abusive and intimidating language too often directed at minority groups.
- excessive noise, particularly late at night.
- fouling the street with litter.
- drunken behaviour in the streets, and the mess it can result in; and
- dealing drugs, with all the problems to which it gives rise.
- There has been considerable criticism of the current wording being too wide. However, the House of Commons Select Committee looked at this in its report on anti-social behaviour and concluded that it would be a mistake to make it more specific because:
- the definitions work well from an enforcement point of view and no significant practical problems appear to have been encountered.
- exhaustive lists of the kind of behaviour considered anti-social by central government would be unworkable and anomalous; and
- anti-social behaviour is inherently a local problem and may be of a different nature in different localities.
- This flexibility is therefore a major strength of the current statutory description of antisocial behaviour.

Anti-social behaviour is an issue that concerns everyone in the community. Incidents that cause harassment, alarm and distress cannot be written off as generational issues - they impact on the quality of life of young and old alike. And they require a response that puts partnership into action.
Just as the problems of anti-social behaviour are wide-ranging, the solutions too must operate equally effectively on many levels. While an energetic and constructive police response is essential, it must be supplemented by engagement from a wide variety of partners. To take only the most obvious, schools need to have effective policies in place against truancy and bullying, and the police need to work closely with licensing authorities in order to tackle alcohol-related problems. Local authorities and registered social landlords need to take responsibility for acting against anti-social behaviour by them tenants and against their tenants. Social services need to ensure that they are taking the welfare of the whole community fully into account when making decisions, as well as taking care of the perpetrators. And, just as important, all of these bodies need to be sharing information with each other to the fullest possible extent in order to act fairly and decisively against the problems of antisocial behaviour.

- Anti-social behaviour orders: the basics

What are anti-social behaviour orders?

Anti-social behaviour orders (ASBOs) were introduced by section 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 in England and Wales and have been available since April 1999.The powers to deal with anti-social behaviour were strengthened and extended by the Police Reform Act 2002, which introduced the power to make similar orders on conviction in criminal proceedings, and in county court proceedings, and the power to make interim orders. Orders can now also extend across any defined part of England and Wales. The provisions relating to orders on conviction under section 1C and interim orders under section ID in the magistrates' courts were inserted in the 1998 Act by the Police Reform Act 2002 and came into force on 2 December 2002.

The provisions relating to orders in county court proceedings (section 1B) were also inserted in the 1998 Act by the Police Reform Act 2002 and came into force on 1 April 2003.

ASBOs are civil orders to protect the public from behaviour that causes or is likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress. An order contains conditions prohibiting the offender from carrying out specific anti-social acts or from entering defined areas and is effective for a minimum of two years. The orders are not criminal sanctions and are not intended to punish the offender.

Applications for ASBOs are made to the magistrates' court by 'relevant authorities' which include local authorities, chief officers of police, registered social landlords, housing action trusts or any other person or body specified by the order of the Secretary of State (as previously mentioned, it is intended that the Environment Agency and Transport for London be specified for this purpose).

A similar order can be applied for during related proceedings in the county court and can be requested on conviction of certain offences in the criminal courts. It remains a civil order irrespective of the issuing court.

ASBOs are community-based orders that involve local people not only in the collection of evidence to support an application but also for the purpose of helping to enforce breaches. By their nature they encourage local communities to become actively involved in reporting crime and disorder and to contribute actively to building and protecting the community. The civil status of ASBOs has implications for the nature of the proceedings at which applications are heard. For example, hearsay and professional witness evidence can be heard. This is an extremely important feature of ASBOs that can help protect victims and witnesses of anti-social behaviour.

What sort of behaviour can be tackled by ASBOs?

Anti-social behaviour that can be tackled by ASBOs includes:

1. harassment of residents or passers-by.
2. verbal abuse.
3. criminal damage.
4. vandalism.
5. noise nuisance.
6. writing graffiti.
7. engaging in threatening behaviour in large groups.
8. racial abuse.
9. smoking or drinking alcohol while underage.
10. substance misuse.
11. joyriding.
12. begging.
13. prostitution.
14. kerb-crawling.
15. throwing missiles.
16. assault; and
17. vehicle vandalism.

Anti-soda! behaviour orders' the basics

The terms of each order should be tailored to the circumstances of the individual case.

Tackling prostitution and drug-related anti-social behaviour at Kings Cross

Issue

Kings Cross was one of the most infamous drug and vice hotspots in the country. For years the authorities had struggled to improve the area.

Approach

'flic anti-social behaviour partners meet to discuss individual cases and offer appropriate help, including housing and rehabilitation services. If the perpetrators of the anti-social behaviour fail either to engage or to change their behaviour, acceptable behaviour agreements (ABAs) are often used to bring to the offenders' attention the impact of their behaviour on the community.

Outcomes

This worked very well with only 4 out of 32 ABAs progressing to ASBO applications. But where the ASBO was deemed necessary by the partners, Camden police officers put together bundles of evidence, with Camden Council's legal team making the ASBO application. Impact statements were taken from local community activists and councillors to prove the need for the orders. Since then, having issued 45 ASBOs with prohibitions within the area, Kings Cross is completely unrecognisable from its previous image. The partners have also been successful in working with perpetrators to facilitate a significant sustainable change in behaviour. One crack cocaine addict recently wrote to the local paper apologising to the people of Kings Cross for his behaviour. Another went on to be a drugs worker in Brixton while a third is now working in the Home Counties and has had her ASBO discharged with the consent of the authorities.

Legal definition of anti-social behaviour for the purpose of obtaining an order

Under section 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998, the agency applying for an ASBO must show that:

- the defendant behaved in an anti-social manner; and an order is necessary for the protection of people from further anti-social behaviour by the defendant.

This is sometimes referred to as the 'two-stage test'.

Section 1(1) of the Act describes acting in an 'anti-social manner' as acting in 'a manner which causes or is likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress to one or more persons not of the same household as the perpetrator.

The wording is intentionally wide-ranging to allow for the orders to be used in a variety of circumstances.

The expression likely to cause' has the effect that someone other than a victim of the antisocial behaviour can give evidence of the likelihood of its occurring. This is intended specifically to enable the use of professionals as witnesses where those targeted by the behaviour feel unable to come forward, for example for fear of reprisals or intimidation.

Standard of proof

In the case of McCann (R v Crown Court at Manchester ex parte McCann (FC) and Others (FC)), the House of Lords, while confirming that ASBOs were civil orders, set out the law on the standard of proof as follows:

'they [magistrates] must in all cases under section 1 apply the criminal standard... it will be sufficient for the magistrates, when applying section 1(1)(a) to be sure that the defendant has acted in an anti-social manner, that is to say in a manner which caused or was likely to cause harassment, alarm, or distress to one or more persons not of the same household as himself.' (Lord Steyn, paragraph 37)

Simon Cordell's Skeleton Argument (2) Pdf

Antisocial behaviour orders; the basics

This means that the criminal standard of proof applies to acts of anti-social behaviour alleged against the defendant. However, Lord Steyn went on to explain:

'The inquiry under section 1(1)(b), namely that such an order is necessary to protect persons from further anti-social acts by him, does not involve a standard of proof: it is an exercise of judgement or evaluation.'

It should be noted that it is the effect or likely effect of the behaviour on other people that determines whether the behaviour is antisocial. The agency applying for the order does not have to prove an intention on the part of the defendant to cause harassment, alarm or distress. Under section 1(5) of the 1998 Act, the Court will, however, disregard any behaviour shown to be reasonable in the circumstances.

The most common behaviour tackled by ASBOs is general loutish and unruly conduct such as verbal abuse, harassment, assault, graffiti and excessive noise. ASBOs have also been used to combat racial harassment, drunk and disorderly behaviour, throwing fireworks, vehicle vandalism and prostitution. Many other problems, for instance the misuse of air guns, could also lend themselves to this approach.

The wide range of anti-social behaviour that can be tackled by ASBOs and the ability to tailor the terms of the order to each specific case illustrates their flexibility. There have been cases where the chief executive of a company has been issued with an ASBO for anti-social behaviour committed by the company. This is because ASBOs must be issued against individuals and not against organisations. ASBOs may also be used, for example in the misuse of mini motors, where warnings and other measures have failed.

Against whom can an order be made?

An order can be made against anyone aged 10 years or over who has acted in an anti-social manner, or is likely so to act, and where an order is needed to protect people and the wider community from further anti-social acts. A list of interventions available for children under 10 is at Appendix A. the orders are tenure-neutral and can be used against perpetrators living in any type of housing (not just social housing). Because the order is specific to the person, if someone moves to a new house, it still remains in force, ASBOs can be used to combat anti-social behaviour in a wide range of situations and settings.

They are highly relevant to misconduct in public spaces such as parks, shopping centres and transport hubs, but they are by no means confined to such areas.
Where groups of people are engaged in anti-social behaviour, a case needs to be made against each individual against whom an order is sought. However, the cases can be heard together by the court. Agencies have found that targeting ringleaders with orders is an effective deterrent to other members of the group.
When investigating complaints about antisocial behaviour, it is vital that agencies satisfy themselves that complaints are well founded. In particular, they should consider the possibility that complaints may have been motivated by discrimination, perhaps on racist grounds, or to further a pre-existing grudge. However, failing to act against instances of anti-social behaviour can lead to an escalation of the problem by increasing fear of crime or leading those subjected to the anti-social behaviour to retaliate. Nipping unacceptable behaviour in the bud is therefore the best option.
Who can apply for an order?
Agencies able to apply for orders are referred to as 'relevant authorities' in the legislation (section 1(1 A) of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998). These are:
- local authorities - by virtue of sections 1(A) and 1(12) of the 1998 Act, a local authority is, in England, the council of a county, district or London Borough, the Isle of Wight or the Isles of Scilly, or, in Wales, the council of a county or county borough; police forces, including the British Transport Police (BTP);
- registered social landlords (RSLs), that is a body registered as a social landlord under section 1 of the Housing Act 1996; and Housing Action Trusts (I-IATs).

Anti-social behaviour orders: the basics

The Environment Agency and Transport for London are to be designated as relevant authorities in due course.
Local authorities and the police may apply for an order where they consider it necessary to protect persons in their area ('relevant persons') from further anti-social behaviour irrespective of where the original anti-social behaviour took place.
An order can be sought which provides protection not just to the relevant persons but also, where necessary, to any persons in England and Wales.
The BTP, RSLs and HATs are empowered to apply for orders by virtue of changes introduced under the Police Reform Act 2002, which enable these agencies to deal with their particular problems of anti-social behaviour in a more effective and timely manner. RSLs and HATs may apply for orders against non-residents as well as residents and should consider doing so where the antisocial behaviour of non-residents is affecting the quality of life for residents.
Applications from the BTP, RSLs or HATs must concern anti-social behaviour related to the premises for which they are responsible by persons who are on or in the vicinity of such premises or likely to be either on or in the vicinity of such premises.
The BTP, RSLs and HATs are required to consult both the local authority and local police force when applying for an order. The agencies are not compelled to use the power. The police or local authority may still apply for ASBOs on their behalf.
Under section 17 of the 1998 Act, the police and local authorities have a joint responsibility to develop and implement strategies for tackling anti-social behaviour and disorder in the local area. This responsibility is not changed in any way by allowing the BTP, RSLs and HATs to apply for orders.
Which courts can make ASBOs?
ASBOs can be made by:
* magistrates' courts (acting in their civil capacity).
- county courts (where the relevant authority or the person against whom the - order is sought is a party to the proceedings and the non-party is joined to these proceedings);
- magistrates' courts (on conviction in criminal proceedings).
- the Crown Court (on conviction in criminal proceedings).
- youth courts (on conviction in criminal proceedings); and
- at the time this guidance was being revised, 11 county courts, which were trialling hearings for ASBO cases for children and young people. These are as follows:

- Bristol
- Central London
- Clerkenwell
- Dewsbury
- Huddersfield
- Leicester
- Manchester
- Oxford

- Tameside
- Wigan
- Wrexham

The pilot will be evaluated in autumn 2006.
The table overleaf sets out what each type of court can do.
Length of orders
Orders are issued for a minimum of two years and can be issued for an indefinite period pending a further order. They can also be varied or discharged on application by either party, although they cannot be discharged in the first two years without the consent of both parties. In the ease of young people, ASBOs should be reviewed each year as explained on page 45.
Anti-social behaviour response courts
Within Her Majesty's Courts Service there is now a network of specialist anti-social behaviour response courts across the country - existing courts that are better able to respond to the issue of Anti-social behaviour. They ensure that magistrates and court staff are specially trained and follow a framework - including specialist sessions, witness care, local community engagement and appropriate media strategies. This ensures courts are able to respond properly to anti-social behaviour cases in a visible and consistent way.

Untouchable gang's reign of terror on a anti-social behaviour response courts Issue

A gang of 10 youths who believed they were beyond the reach of the law were regularly terrorising vulnerable residents on a street in Thornton, Merseyside. The youths had been smashing windows, breaking into and throwing missiles at vehicles, and verbally abusing people, Victims included the young, elderly and vulnerable and the gang's behaviour created such fear locally that residents would not go out after dark or leave their properties unattended. Many of them installed CCTV Only the most serious incidents were repented at the time they occurred but victims would not press charges for fear of being singled out and targeted by the gang.
Merseyside street ends in the Approach
The neighbourhood police officer carried out a detailed investigation of the problem to bring a case for arresting the perpetrators and bringing them before the courts.
Previous police logs and reports were scrutinised, and impact statements taken from the majority of witnesses in anonymity to use as hearsay evidence. One family, which had been singled out by the perpetrators, was given support by the police with daily contact and visits. The victims installed CCTV and kept a diary of all the incidents which was exhibited as evidence.
The police and Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) worked closely together to prepare the case and the police gathered strong evidence. Interviews with perpetrators were carefully planned so that when faced with the evidence against them all 10 perpetrators admitted their responsibility.

In advance of the case, the CPS specialist prosecutor for the area worked to set up a special anti-social behaviour response court. Advance disclosure of evidence to the judge and other parties prior to the court hearing meant that the case was dealt with quickly once in court.
At the hearing, nine perpetrators were charged on criminal offences ranging from disorderly behaviour to attempted arson. Three of the gang were given ASBOs and six of the gang signed acceptable behaviour agreements.
Conditions attached to the ASBOs were designed to protect the community from any recurrence of the behaviour. The perpetrators were restricted to sleeping at their nominated address and were not allowed out between 6.00pm and 6.00am unless accompanied by a parent or appropriate adult. They were clearly instructed not to approach or interfere with any prosecution witnesses. They were also prohibited from being verbally abusive and from throwing missiles at any residential property or from carrying anything which they could use to launch a missile.
The CPS advised the local media of the antisocial behaviour response court and the press reported this operation on the front pages of the local papers. This is part of a strategy to publicise successful action of the police, CPS and judiciary working in partnership to tackle anti-social behaviour. Its aim is to encourage the community to report anti-social behaviour, knowing that it will be dealt with effectively.
Outcome
The operation provided much needed relief for the residents in the area. A parent of one of the gang members has since become proactive in a local community action group which is working to increase diversionary activities for young people in the area.
For the professionals involved in the case, the operation has underlined the importance of taking impact statements as a matter of course when victims fail to press charges due to fear of reprisals. The multiagency partnership approach works best if one officer who is aware of all the facts of the case co-ordinates the case.
Orders made in county court proceedings (section IB of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998)
For an application to be made in the county court, both the applicant and the person against whom the application is made must be parties to the 'principal proceedings' (such as an eviction). Where the relevant authority is not a party to the principal proceedings, an application to be had a party and the application for an order should be made as soon as possible after the authority becomes aware of the principal proceedings. Where the person alleged to have committed the anti-social behaviour is not a party but the relevant authority thinks that his anti-social acts are material to the principal proceedings, the authority can apply to have him joined in the proceedings and apply for an order. The county court will be able to grant orders where the principal proceedings involve evidence of anti-social behaviour.
Enabling the county courts to make orders may remove the need for a separate legal process in the magistrates' court and make it possible for the public to be protected from anti-social behaviour more quickly and more efficiently.
An order made in county court proceedings might, for example, be useful to prevent an individual, evicted from his accommodation for harassing his neighbours and/or others in the area, from returning to the same area to continue the abusive behaviour.

Orders can only work properly when they are based on partnership in action. They are powerful instruments, and they will be at their most effective when all the agencies confronted by an individual's anti-social behaviour collaborate to make the best possible use of them.

Orders made on conviction in criminal proceedings

Criminal courts - the magistrates' court, the Crown Court and the youth court - can make- orders against an individual who has been convicted of a criminal offence, and this is known as an 'order on conviction' (sometimes also called a 'CRASBO'). Some county courts are currently trialling stand-alone ASBO cases for children and young people until the end of September 2006.These are not proceedings on conviction.

The order on conviction is considered at a civil hearing after the verdict. It is not part of the sentence the offender receives for the criminal offence.

The order will be granted on the basis of the evidence presented to the court during the criminal proceedings and any additional evidence provided to the court after the verdict, although it is possible for the order to be granted on the basis of the criminal proceedings alone. There is a statutory requirement for a conviction to be for an offence committed after the date on which the insertion of the relevant provisions by the Police Reform Act took effect.

The court may make an order on conviction either on its own initiative or following an application by the prosecutor (see section 1 C (3) of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998). Alternatively, the order can be requested by the police or local authority, who may make representations to the court in support of the request. Orders on conviction cannot be made if there is a deferred sentence for the relevant offence.

The court may adjourn the proceedings following conviction to allow an application for an order on conviction to be made. By virtue of section l D (l)(b) of the 1998 Act (inserted by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005), the court may also make an interim order.

The order on conviction is a civil order and has the same effect as an ASBO made on application - ft contains prohibitions rather than penalties and is made in civil proceedings. It is similar to the football banning order on conviction in that it is a civil order made following a criminal procedure,2 3

If the offender is detained in custody, the court may make provision for requirements of the order on conviction to become effective on their release. For this period the order takes effect immediately, but its terms are suspended until release.

Where is an ASBO valid?

Before the changes introduced by the Police Reform Act 2002, the conditions an order could impose extended only to the applicant's area and adjoining areas. An order can now extend across any defined area within England and Wales. '

The power to make an order over a wide area is for use where there is reason to believe that the person concerned may move or has already moved. It goes some way to addressing the problem of offenders moving to other areas and continuing the behaviour.

An order covering a wider area could address problems such as ticket touting at different train stations or anti-social behaviour on trains, and could help deal with the minority

Section 10(21 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 states that the court may make an order which prohibits the offender from doing anything described in the order. Section 14A of the Football Spectators Act 1989 places a duty on the court to impose a football banning order if a person is convicted of a relevant offence or to state in open court why such an order has not been made.

The geographical area which an order may cover is indicated by section 1(6) for ASBOs and orders made in county court proceedings; and by section l C (2)(b) for orders made on conviction in criminal proceedings.

of the travelling community who persistently engage in anti-social behaviour around the country, Careful thought needs to be given to the consequences of extending the exclusion area so that it does not simply result in displacing the behaviour into a neighbouring area.

Any evidence of the itinerant nature of the defendant's lifestyle, of the likelihood of the individual moving to another area, or of wide geographical spread of offending behaviour should be submitted with the application file, The applicant does not have to prove that anti-social behaviour will occur elsewhere, just show that it is likely to.

The more serious the behaviour, the greater the likelihood that the court will grant a geographically wide order. Orders that seek to operate in the whole of England and Wales will not be granted without evidence that that is the actual or potential geographical extent of the problem. Further detail about effective prohibitions is given in Chapter 7.

Can interim orders be made?

Interim orders are available under section ID of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 (as amended by section 65 of the Police Reform Act 2002 and the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act (SOCPA) 2005) in both the magistrates' court and the county court. This is an order made at an initial court hearing held in advance of the full hearing. This temporary order can impose the same prohibitions and has the same penalties for breach as a full order.

The interim order can, with leave of the justices' clerk, be made without notice of proceedings being given to the defendant.

A without notice interim order has no effect until it has been served on the defendant. If it is not served within seven days, it will cease and will not have effect. The benefit of the interim order is that it enables the courts to order an immediate stop to anti-social behaviour and thereby to protect the public more quickly. It reduces the scope for witness intimidation by making it unlawful for the offender to continue the behaviour while the ASBO application is being processed. It also removes any delay in the proceedings.
Section 139 of SOCPA 2005 gives the court the power to grant an interim order pending an adjourned hearing for an order on conviction.
The interim order will send a clear message to the community that swift action against anti-social behaviour is possible. The order can be made at the outset of proceedings for an ASBO application if the court considers that it is just to make such an order. The applicant authority should, if possible, request an interim order at the same time as submitting an application for a full order.
When considering whether to make an interim order, the court will be aware that it may not be possible at the time of the interim order application to compile all the evidence which would prove that a full ASBO is necessary. Rather the court will determine the application for the interim order on the question of whether the application for the full order has been properly made and where there is sufficient evidence of an urgent need to protect the community
Applications for interim orders will be appropriate, for example, in cases where the applicant feels that persons need to be protected from the threat of further antisocial acts which might occur before the main application can be determined.
Where an interim order is granted without notice of proceedings to the defendant, it is expected that the court will usually arrange an early return date.
An individual who is subject to an interim order will have the opportunity to respond to the case at the hearing for the full order. The defendant is also able to apply to the court for the interim order to be varied or discharged. In this instance the matter will be dealt with at a hearing dealing specifically with the interim order.
The interim order:

- will be for a fixed period.
- can be varied or discharged on application by the defendant.
- will cease to have effect if the application for the ASBO or county court order is withdrawn or refused.

- may extend over any defined area of England and Wales; and

18. has the same breach penalties as for a full order.
The court procedures and forms to be used when applying for or making an interim order are set out in the Magistrates' Courts (Anti-Social Behaviour Orders) Rules 2002 (available at www.opsi.gov.uk/si/si2002/ 20022784.htm).
Interim orders made in the county courts
A relevant authority may apply for an interim order in the county court once it is party to the 'principal proceedings. The application for an interim order should be made early in the proceedings.
The procedure for making applications for orders in the county court is set out in the Practice Direction of the updated Cavil Procedure Rules 65.24 to 26 (Appendix B).
Orders against children and young people
Under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998, applications for ASBOs against young people aged 10 to 17, and in certain circumstances 18-year-olds, can be heard in the magistrates' court. As a result of the recent practice direction (the Magistrates' Courts (Anti-Social Behaviour Orders) Composition of Benches practice direction, February 2006), the justices constituting the court should normally be qualified to sit in the youth court unless to do so would result in a delayed hearing. Applications for orders are not heard in the youth court as a matter of course because of the civil status of the orders, although youth courts may make orders where appropriate on conviction.
Practitioners familiar with dealing with young people's cases will be aware of the restrictions on reporting that apply under the Children and Young Persons Act 1933- However, automatic reporting restrictions do not apply to stand-alone ASBOs as they are civil orders.
In orders on conviction cases, the court does have discretion under section 39 of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 to impose reporting restrictions. Reporting restrictions will always apply to the criminal proceedings on which the order on conviction is based but in till other cases, the presumption is that publicity will be allowed. See page 52 for detailed guidance on promoting awareness of orders.
A court making an ASBO does have the power to impose restrictions to protect the identity of a person under 18. But the imposition of reporting restrictions may restrict the effectiveness of the order if the effectiveness of the ASBO will largely depend on the wider community knowing the details. Please see the separate sections on publicity and on children and young people.
Breach of an order
Breach of an order is a criminal offence; criminal procedures and penalties apply.

The standard of proof required is the criminal standard. Guilt must be established beyond reasonable doubt. Breach proceedings are heard in the magistrates' court and may be committed to the Crown Court. Such proceedings are the same irrespective of whether the order is a full or interim order made on application to the magistrates' court or the county court, or an order on conviction in criminal proceedings.

Expert prosecutors

A team of 14 anti-social behaviour expert prosecutors has been set up with funding from the Together campaign to support all Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) prosecutors dealing with anti-social behaviour-related cases. The team drives improvements in performance across the country.

The team:

19. promotes better partnership working between local prosecutors, the police, focal authorities, registered social landlords and others involved in taking action against anti-social behaviour.

20. delivers training to prosecutors on the new powers to obtain orders on conviction provides advice to prosecutors on the full range of enforcement measures and key issues such as prosecution of ASBO breach; and

• works with court clerks and magistrates in improving their response to anti-social behaviour.

In addition to the 14 specialist prosecutors, anti-social behaviour co-ordinators have now been appointed CPS-wide to ensure that there is a focus on anti-social behaviour issues in every CPS area. Their role is to drive this work forward. Further information can be obtained from Sarah Johnston at sarah.johnston@cps.gsi.gov.uk.

Standard ASBO form

A copy of the order form used by the magistrates' courts can be found at Appendix C.

Disposals

The maximum penalty for breach of an order is five years' imprisonment tor an adult offender. A conditional discharge is not available for breach of an ASBO.

The full range of disposals of the youth court is available, and custody should only be considered as a last resort in cases of serious and persistent breach (if appropriate, breach may be dealt with by way of a final warning). Where custody is deemed by the court to be necessary, the maximum sentence for breach by children and young people is a detention and training order (DTO), which has a maximum term of 24 months - 12 months of which is custodial and 12 months is in the community. The DTO is available for 12 to 17-year-olds (although 12 to 14-year-olds must be persistent (criminal) offenders to be given a DTO). A 10 to 11 -year-old can be given a community order for breach of an ASBO. The sentence given should be proportionate and reflect the impact of the anti-social behaviour. It must relate to all the relevant circumstances, such as the number of breaches and how the breach relates to the finding of anti-social behaviour. Proceedings should be swift and not fractured by unnecessary adjournments either during the proceedings or before sentencing. Information on how to handle breaches of ASBOs by young people is contained in page 26 of the anti-social behaviour guidance issued by the Youth Justice Board, Home Office and Association of Chief Police Officers.

The leading precedent for the approach on sentencing on this point is R v Lamb \ 20051 EWCA Crim 2487. In this judgment the court drew the distinction between a breach that represents further anti-social behaviour and those that are merely breaches of the terms of an order, for instance, as in that case, not to enter a particular metro system. Differing from earlier decisions - in particular from the case of R v Morrison [2005] EWCA Crim 2237 - the court held that the orders are properly designed to protect the public from frequent and distressing repeated misbehaviour.

In the case of Morrison, it was determined that if the breach amounted to a specific criminal offence that carried a particular penalty, the sentence for breach of the ASBO could not be greater than that.

As the court in Lamb pointed out, this would merely encourage people to commit criminal offences rather than breach their ASBOs in other ways. The court has therefore laid down a series of steps for consideration prior to the imposition of a sentence.

Where a breach does not involve harassment, alarm or distress, a community order may be considered to assist the defendant to learn to live with the terms of the ASBO. This is entirely consistent with the guideline on breach proceedings issued by the Sentencing Guidelines Council, where it is pointed out that custody should be used as a last resort, and the primary purpose of breach proceedings should be to ensure that the order itself is observed.

However, Lamb confirmed that where there is a persistent breach without harassment, alarm or distress, it may become necessary to impose custody to preserve the authority of the court. In those circumstances, the sentence should be as short as possible, and in Lamb the individual sentences were reduced to two months in custody. However, where the new breach amounts to further harassment, alarm or distress, then the court thought orders of eight months, on a guilty plea, were appropriate, applying R v Braxton [2005] 1 CRAPP R (S) 36,7? v Tripp [20051

When the offender has been found guilty of breaching an order, and before sentencing, the court may take reports from the local authority or police and any applicant agency. The court should also consider the original reasons for the making of the order.

A copy of the court order (ASRO) as granted (including any maps and details of any prohibitions) can be put before the court during breach proceedings as evidence that an order has been made without the need for a statement formally proving that an order was made. This provision was introduced by SO CPA 2005 on 1 July 2005.

- Managing the application process

This section focuses on the main issues involved in applying for an order. For an ASBO to be effective, the process of evidence gathering and applying to the courts should be as swift as possible.

Groups of organisations and partnerships such as crime and disorder reduction partnerships (CDRPs) may wish to consider buying specialist legal advice in blocks or pooling expertise and experience. This is likely to be more cost effective than buying in legal advice on a case-by-case basis.

Partnership working

A fully co-ordinated approach is essential if anti-social behaviour is to be tackled. Effective defence of communities depends on all agencies - including housing organisations, social services, education authorities and youth services - accepting that the promotion of safe anti orderly neighbourhoods is a priority and working together to agree a response to unacceptable behaviour. The consultation arrangements are important but should be organised so that they do not cause delays in dealing with cases.

Agencies and communities join to tackle anti-social behaviour in Slade Green

Issue

Slade Green in Bexley was once described as 'a cluster of low-rise estates centred on a precinct of shops and Slade Green railway station, where vandalism, burglary and drugs blight the lives of residents'. Slade Green has experienced high levels of crime and social deprivation and features among the top 1.6% of the most deprived wards in England. Bexley Police identified Slade Green as a hot spot for residential and non-residential burglary, auto crime, disorder, domestic violence and race crime. Residents, local housing providers and the leader of the Slade Green Community Safety Forum were alarmed at the escalation of anti-social behaviour in the area. Residents regularly experienced threats and actual violence, making them afraid of giving evidence to the police.

Approach

A meeting between resklents and the local partnership team produced an outline action plan. Community meetings, local press coverage and 'Have A Say' days led to key witnesses being willing to give evidence.

The partnership team applied for ASBOs against the six men identified as the most prolific perpetrators. In total, 30 witnesses gave evidence, most in the form of hearsay, with nine giving evidence in person at the court hearing. The policing team involved in the case supported witnesses by being at court to provide additional reassurance. Victim Support's witness support service also helped. Strong witness evidence and a compelling case prepared by the police and the council legal department convinced the court to agree to all six applications.

Outcome

The impact of these ASBOs on crime and fear of crime in the area was significant. For the period 2003/04, robbery incidents fell by 53%, burglary by 21%) and auto crime by 40%. Of the original six to receive an ASBO, one person has been prosecuted for breach of the ASBO condition relating to criminal damage to a car, for which he received a custodial sentence.

A community safety action zone (CSAZ) was established in Slade Green with the aim of reducing crime and disorder in the area.

A multi-agency operations group was formed to find the grass roots issues leading to these problems. The addition of environmental and security improvements has enhanced the appearance of the area and have made it a safer and more secure place to live. These improvements have included improved street lighting, removal of graffiti, removal of fly-tipping, removal of abandoned and unlicensed cars and improvements to play areas.

A survey was carried out before the start of the CSAZ which found that 22% of residents in Slade Green who responded felt safe at night in their area. After the CSAZ had been set up, 93% of residents surveyed in Slade Green felt safe at night in their area.

Taking ownership

It is vital that a specified individual within the lead agency takes on a lead role with responsibility for the ownership, director, and management of the case. 1'his will help ensure that there is no confusion about who is expected to make sure that the necessary actions are taken on the right timescale.

The lead individual should manage and co-ordinate the involvement of other agencies so that they add value by contributing their own specialist knowledge and expertise.

A multi-agency approach should be adopted so that all agencies that could hold information on the individual in question are involved in the process at an early stage.

Such agencies include the Probation Service, social services, health services, the youth offending team (YOT) and voluntary organisations, all of which may have come into contact with the individual or members of their family.

GDRPs should consider adopting the antisocial behaviour action group (ASBAG) approach developed by Watford Borough Council.

Watford's partnership approach involves all relevant statutory and voluntary agencies and engages the local community in taking a stand against the perpetrators of anti-social behaviour.

They have developed a problem-solving approach to issues and apply the SARA model:

- Sean for all available intelligence in relation to the anti-social behaviour issue.
- Analyse the intelligence, looking for the root cause of the problem.
- Respond with a clear action plan designed to address the behaviour.
- Assess the progress/success of the action plan on a monthly basis.

Delivery is through the monthly multi-agency ASBAG, which includes cross-boundary working as required.

Watford's anti-social behaviour strategy allows for a range of diversionary activities and intervention as alternatives to enforcement, if the ASBAG agrees they are appropriate to effectively tackle an individual and their anti-social behaviour, such as:

- verbal warnings.

» written warnings.

- acceptable behaviour contracts (ABGs);
- mentoring programmes.
- intervention programmes.
- educational programmes.
- supporting youths and their parents; and
- restorative justice (when and where appropriate for victims and localities).

Information is exchanged between stakeholders and members of the CDRP at each monthly ASBAG meeting.

This strategy works in parallel with the prolific and priority offender strategy and a representative from the prolific offender unit is represented on the ASBAG to avoid duplication of work.

If the level of anti-social behaviour is such that the risk of further behaviour or escalation of behaviour is imminent, the Watford anti-social behaviour co-ordinator may convene an immediate action plan meeting with the police anti-social behaviour officer and a legal representative from Watford Borough Council acting on the ASBAG's behalf in the interests of managing the risk to public safety without delay.

Watford CDRP works to the principles of the National Intelligence Model for tasking and co-ordination.

Each action plan is performance-managed by the ASBAG and is subject to monitoring and scrutiny by quarterly feedback to the Watford responsible authority group by the Watford Borough Council anti-social behaviour co-ordinator. The ASBAG performs a full self-evaluation and review every 12 months.

Other considerations

Local authorities have a duty under the NHS and Community Care Act 1990 to assess any person who may be in need of community care services. If there is any evidence to suggest that the person against whom the order is being sought may be suffering from drug, alcohol or mental health problems or an autistic spectrum disorder, the necessary support should be provided by social services or other support agencies. Such support should run parallel with the collection of evidence and application for an order, where an application for an order is deemed necessary. This ensures that the court can balance the needs of the community with the needs of any alleged perpetrator.

From December 2006, provisions in the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 will come into force which make unlawful discrimination by a public authority in the exercise of public functions. There are some exemptions for listed persons and certain acts including (in broad terms) legislation, prosecution and judicial acts. However, the new prohibition of discrimination covers functions carried out, for example, by local authorities and the police. The definition of discrimination includes, in some circumstances, not making a reasonable- adjustment to the way a function is carried out. Chapter 11 of the guidance, which the Disability Rights Commission will issue shortly (entitled Code of Practice - Rights of Access: services to the public, public authority functions, private clubs and premises) includes advice on how the Act now impacts on those carrying out public authority functions. It will be available on the Commission's website (www.drc.org.uk).
Statutory consultation requirements
Section IE of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 (as amended by section 66 of the Police Reform Act 2002) sets out the consultation requirements for agencies applying for orders. These are that:
- the police and local authorities must consult each other; and
- the British Transport Police (BTP), registered social landlords, housing action trusts and any other person or body designated by the Secretary of State as a relevant authority must consult both the local authority and the police force for the area.

Consultation takes place with the authority or force whose area includes the address where the subject of the order resides or appears to reside. Each district or borough council and police division/basic command unit should have a nominated contact. Care should be taken (where the local authority is the applicant) that if the subject is under local authority care there is no conflict of interest. They must ensure that the social worker involved in the ease is consulted. Where a young person is the alleged perpetrator, the YOT should be consulted.
Consultation is required to inform the appropriate agency or agencies of the intended application for the order and to check whether they have any relevant information. The agencies must take into consideration at the earliest possible opportunity the relevant information necessary to apply for an individual support order or a parenting order. Information on these is contained in a separate section on children and young people.
Where the partnership working arrangements recommended in earlier paragraphs are in force, they will normally satisfy (and exceed) the statutory requirement for consultation,
The statutory requirement for consultation does not mean that the agencies must agree 296

Simon Cordell Skeleton Argument (3).pdf
Managing the application process to an application being made but rather that they should be told of the intended application and given the opportunity to comment. This should ensure at the very minimum that actions taken by each agency regarding the same individual do not conflict.
While no agency has a veto over another agency's application for an order, the expectation is that any reservations or alternative proposals should be discussed carefully against the background of the overriding need to bring the anti-social behaviour to a speedy end. Again, the case conference procedure is designed to ensure that this happens.
A signed document of consultation is all that is required by the court. This should not indicate whether the party consulted was or was not in agreement. This is not required by the legislation. Supporting statements or reports from partner agencies should be provided separately.
The changes introduced by the Police Reform Act 2002 reduce bureaucracy by removing the need for applying agencies to consult with every local authority and police service whose areas are included in the order.
In addition to the consultation requirements set out above, it may be helpful for police forces to contact the BTP, which may hold information on the anti-social behaviour of the subject. The availability of this information may assist the evidence-gathering process for an order. The BTP holds a national database of offenders committing summary offences (these include railway-specific summary offences as well as those included in Home Office counting rules).
Police forces can request a search on a particular offender, in writing, from the Force Crime Registrar, British Transport Police, Force Headquarters, 15 Tavistock Place, London WC1H 9SJ.
Collection of evidence
When applying for an order, the lead agency will be required to gather evidence to prove its ease beyond reasonable doubt. This evidence can include hearsay evidence. Further advice on hearsay evidence is provided later in the guidance.
The evidence in support of an application for an order should prove:
- that the defendant acted in a specific way on specific dates and at specific places; and
- that these acts caused or were likely to cause harassment, alarm, or distress to one or more persons not in the same household as the defendant.

The court then needs to evaluate whether an order is necessary to protect persons from further anti-social acts by the defendant. This is not a test to which a standard of proof will be applied. Instead, it is an assessment of future risk. The applicant can present evidence or argument to assist the court in making this evaluation. Witness evidence need not prove that they were alarmed or distressed themselves, but only that the behaviour they witnessed was likely to produce such an effect on others. As hearsay evidence is allowed, it may be given by 'professional witnesses' - officers of public agencies whose job it is to prevent anti-social behaviour. Since civil rules apply to these orders, it is unnecessary to disclose the names of the witnesses, Experience has shown that elaborate court files are not normally required or advantageous. Where the anti-social behaviour has been persistent, agencies should for us on a few well-documented cases. A large volume of evidence and/or a large number of witnesses creates its own problems. There is more material for the defence to contest and timetabling issues may increase delays in the process.

Agencies applying for orders should strike a balance and focus on what is most relevant and necessary to provide sufficient evidence for the court to arrive at a clear understanding of the matter.

Evidence may include:

- breach of an A B C;
- witness statements of officers who attended incidents.
- witness statements of people affected by the behaviour.
- evidence of complaints recorded by the police, housing providers or other agencies.

- statements from professional witnesses, for example council officials, health visitors or truancy officers.
- video or CCTV evidence (effective where resolution is high and high-quality still images can be used);

- previous relevant convictions.

Southampton shopping area blighted by anti-social behaviour

Issue

Lordshill centre was suffering from a large amount of anti-social behaviour, especially around the local supermarket. There was a substantial amount of shoplifting, criminal damage and harassment of visitors and shoppers. At the other end of the centre was a large bingo hall frequented by older patrons who were becoming increasingly afraid to go after 6pm.The supermarket was also shutting earlier in response to these incidents.

Approach

The local anti-social behaviour team's senior investigator met with the manager of the supermarket, together with the local police, and discussed possible ways of working more closely to deal with the issues, They were provided with a log book to record all incidents and this was checked weekly by the anti-social behaviour investigator and the police. This information was then put into a schedule to identify times and dates of the issues and also the perpetrators. Logbooks were provided to the local library and the bingo hall, as well as the supermarket, in an attempt to collate a large amount of evidence. It's Your Call' posters were put up in all shops in the area and premises were visited regularly by a member of the multiagency team.

Outcome

Because of the joint working and shared support, the stores felt able to tackle those causing the problem. As a result of information provided by the shops, an ASBO was obtained against the main perpetrator, with an exclusion from the whole shopping area.

There was also a Crime Reduction and Environment Week in the area, and a youth project has been funded by the supermarket, which has also provided paint to repaint the subway. This has prevented graffiti reappearing. There is also a dispersal order in place now to complement the ASBO and the perpetrator has not returned to the area. Residents and visitors can now shop in peace and the supermarket is looking to invest more money in the area.

- Time limits

Magistrates' courts (acting in their civil capacity)

Under section 127 of the Magistrates Court Act 1980, a complaint must be made within six months of the time when the matter of the complaint (the behaviour) arose. One incidence of serious anti-social behaviour may be sufficient for an order to be made. Earlier incidents may be used as background information to support a case and show a pattern of behaviour. As long as the complaint is made within the six-month timeframe, a summons may be served outside this time period, although delay is not encouraged.

- Use of hearsay and professional witness evidence

Hearsay and professional witness evidence allow for the identities of those too fearful to give evidence to be protected. This is especially vita! as cases often involve anti-social behaviour in residential areas by local people and those targeted by the behaviour feel unable to come forward for fear of reprisals. Hearsay evidence cannot be excluded (at the request of defence lawyers) simply on the grounds that it is hearsay.

Hearsay evidence

Evidence of anti-social behaviour which occurs at any time after the commencement of section H may be considered when the court considers whether or not to grant an order on conviction under section 1C.

The House of Lords judgment in the McCann case confirmed that hearsay evidence is admissible. Lord Steyn stated that:'1 'Having concluded that the proceedings in question are civil under domestic law and article 6, it follows that the machinery of the Civil Evidence Act 1995 and the Magistrates' Courts (Hearsay Evidence in Cavil Proceedings) Rules 1999 allow the introduction of such evidence under the first part of section 1.

'... use of the Civil Evidence Act 1995 and the Rules in eases under the first part of section 1 are not in any way incompatible with the Human Rights Act 1998,

'... hearsay evidence will often be of crucial importance. For my part, hearsay evidence depending on its logical proactiveness is quite capable of satisfying the requirements of section 1(1).'

It is a matter for the judge or magistrate to decide what weight they attach to hearsay evidence. 5 6

Hearsay allows a police officer to provide a statement on behalf of a witness or witnesses who remain anonymous. Hearsay evidence must be relevant to the matters to be proved. It could include details such as dates, places, times, specific descriptions of actions, who was present and who said what.

Hearsay can include evidence from the person taking the statement. The person giving the hearsay evidence may attest to the observable conditions of the witness, for example that the witness appeared upset, and may give evidence based on their own judgement of the situation.

Where an applicant intends to rely on hearsay evidence in the county court, they must act in accordance with part 33 of the Civil Procedure Rules. Written notice must be given at least 21 days before the hearing to the other party and to the court.

Professional witnesses

Professional witnesses can be called to give their opinions as to matters within their expertise and can give evidence about their assessments of the respondent or his/her behaviour. Examples of witnesses who may be called as professional witnesses include council officials, health visitors, railway staff, teachers, doctors and police officers.

Care should be taken to ensure that a professional witness does not inadvertently enable vulnerable or intimidated witnesses to be identified, for example from their home address.

Vulnerable and intimidated witnesses

Witnesses who are willing to testify in court provide the best form of evidence and, where possible, should be encouraged to come forward. Use of hearsay and professional witness evidence the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 make it easier for victims of anti-social behaviour to attend court and give evidence in person. The Act permits the 'special measures' that were formerly reserved for criminal hearings to be used in anti-social behaviour cases. This will enable witnesses who wish to give direct evidence to do so in private, from behind a screen or by video link.

Vulnerable witnesses are all witnesses aged under 17 years or whose quality of evidence is likely to be diminished because they have a mental disorder or learning disability or have a physical disability or physical disorder.

Intimidated witnesses are witnessing whose quality of evidence is likely to be diminished because they are in fear or distress about testifying. It is for the court to decide whether the quality of a witness's evidence is likely to be diminished.

Witness development and support

The principal purpose of an order is to protect those who directly experience antisocial behaviour. The protection provided should include, where necessary, those who are personally targeted by perpetrators, other witnesses who see this happen and the wider local community. It follows that engaging, developing, and supporting these individuals and groups of people must be a primary concern for any agency managing a case and seeking to use these orders. Without the initial complaint of the witness, the agency will have no detailed knowledge of the problem. Without their continuing engagement, there will be no evidence on which to build a case.

Local strategies to promote the use of orders should have the interests of the witnesses and the community at their centre. The welfare and safety of residents whose complaints form the basis of any action must at every stage of the process be the first consideration. The use of hearsay evidence and professional witnesses is one way of achieving this (see section on hearsay evidence above).

While professional witnesses may have a duty to engage, lay witnesses can only be expected to do so if they can see a point in doing it; if the agency is credible and authoritative;

if the case work is visibly focused on the interests of the witnesses; if the order protects them and stops the anti-social behaviour quickly and effectively; and if the case manager offers them well-informed, practical personal support throughout the period of evidence collection, court proceedings and afterwards, as necessary.

The experience of witnesses must be given value and significance by case managers. The status and importance of witnesses in case development must be made clear. They should be provided, as appropriate, with:

- a simple method of capturing information - diaries, video/audio recording facilities and translation services.
- information on services and procedures - about the way witness support services work, service access points, telephone numbers and the name of the case manager working on the case.
- an active and respected role in developing the case - the case strategy should reflect their needs, particularly for reassurance about their safety, and they should have control over any information they provide, including agreeing the form in which it will be provided to the defence;
- protection for themselves and their family - security for door and window access, emergency contact equipment, panic alarms and mobile phones may all be appropriate in particularly serious cases.
- regular contact from the case manager, including telephone contact as agreed with the witness (daily, weekly, etc).
- support for any court appearance - a briefing on court procedures and what they should expect, the presence with them in court of the case manager, transport to and from court (if necessary) and a secure space separate from perpetrators in which they can wait to be called; and
- support after a court appearance - speedy delivery of information, copies of any orders which have been made and an explanation of the implications of the court decision.

Each key witness should also be engaged in a face-to-face meeting with the agencies, including those who do not wish to give a statement or attend court.

Use of hearsay anti professional v Unless evidence

Agencies should publicise positive results - one way this can be done is through leaflet drops (these can be cost effective when targeted appropriately).

Witness support is an area where the benefits of partnership working can be clearly seen local authorities and the police have different skills and resources and can combine them to give well-rounded support.

Methods of supporting witnesses currently being used by agencies also include:

- enclosing a letter with the summons advising the respondent to stay away from witnesses.
- a higher police presence in the vicinity.
- giving witnesses the personal mobile telephone number of a named police officer who can be called if they are threatened.
- visits from neighbourhood wardens at pre-arranged times (sometimes daily); and
- phone calls from the local authority at pre-arranged times.

The interim order enables witnesses to be protected from the outset of the court process. Sections 48 and 49 of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 make it an offence to intimidate witnesses in civil proceedings such as those for ASBOs.

Improving protection of witnesses in court

Manchester City Council protects witnesses

Issue

Witnesses felt anxious about giving evidence. Their concerns included the prospect of appearing in court, coming face to face with defendants and being threatened by defendants at the court building, as well as uncertainties about waiting room and refreshment facilities.

Approach

Manchester City Council negotiated the following arrangements with local courts for anti-social behaviour cases:

- access to a quiet room for witnesses.

- a video link for perpetrators in prison where it would be expensive to bring them back for an ASBO or injunction hearing (this also has the benefit of being less stressful for the witnesses).
- a video link for children and young people; and
- police presence, where appropriate.

In addition, the council provides practical information and support to witnesses.
They are made aware of what to expect, including the court layout, where they and the defendant(s) will be sitting and how people will be dressed. Practical support also includes transport to and from the court, being met by a council officer on arrival and information about refreshment and bathroom facilities.

Outcome

The result has been reassurance and physical security for witnesses. This has led to a reduction in the anxiety about the prospect of appearing in court or accidentally meeting a defendant. Witnesses are better able to focus on the ease. The ease manager is also able to keep witnesses informed of progress and to manage the case more effectively.

- Information sharing

Section 115 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 empowers any person to disclose information, where necessary or expedient for the purposes of the Act, to a 'relevant authority', namely a chief officer of police, police force, local authority, probation service or health authority, or to a person acting on their behalf. Where the agency requesting the information clearly needs it for the purposes of reducing anti-social behaviour, the presumption should normally be that it will be supplied.
As a result of the findings of the Crime and Disorder Act review, the Police and Justice Bill before Parliament seeks to strengthen section 115 of the Crime and Disorder Act further.
For example, the power to disclose personal information has not changed but it places a duty on relevant authorities to share depersonalised data which is relevant lor community safety purposes and already held in a depersonalised format.
Information sharing and registered social landlords
A 'relevant authority' (as defined by section 115 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998) may disclose information to a registered social landlord where the landlord is acting on behalf of the relevant authority for the purposes of the provisions of the Act.
In order to be 'acting on behalf of the relevant authority, the person or body so acting must have authority and must have consented to do so. Such authority may be given in writing or orally. Authority may also be implied from the conduct of the parties or from the nature of employment. Authority may be confined to a particular act or be general in its character. If authority is general, then it will that be confined to acts that the relevant authority itself has power to do.
Information sharing protocols
It may be useful for partners to negotiate information sharing protocols, examples of which can be obtained from the Home Office Information Sharing Team at informationsharing@homeoffice.gsi.gov.uk www.crimereduction.gov.uk/ information sharing
If possible, the protocol should be published, so that the public can see that information is being shared in an appropriate way.
The model protocol can be accessed at www.crimereduction.gov.uk/infosharing.htm
Information sharing issues can also be discussed with the Information Commissioner's Office, whose website (www.ico.gov.uk) gives further details.

- The terms of the order (the prohibitions)

The role of the agencies
Although it is for the court to decide what prohibitions are to be imposed by the order, the applicant agency should propose conditions (including duration) to the court.
A full order should be drawn up using the form in the court rules. The courts find it helpful if applicants can ensure that they are equipped to amend and print off the final version of the order at the end of the hearing. This improves efficiency and helps ensure that the defendant leaves the court with a clear understanding of the prohibitions.
In the county court, the proposed order should accompany the application. The process for the county court is set out in the Practice Direction at Appendix B.
Where the order is made on conviction in criminal proceedings, an agency concerned in the case, such as the police, may propose prohibitions or the court may draw them up of its own volition. It should be noted that the order may not impose positive requirements, only prohibitions.

Careful thought needs to be given to the formulation of the conditions so they cannot be easily circumvented and can be easily understood by the perpetrator.
The prohibitions
The prohibitions:
- should cover the range of anti-social acts committed by the defendant.
- should be necessary for protecting person(s) within a defined area from the anti-social acts of the defendant (but, as a result of the recent changes, that defined area may be as wide as necessary and could in appropriate cases include the whole of England and Wales);
- should be reasonable and proportionate.
- should be realistic and practical.
- should be clear, concise, and easy to understand.
- should be specific when referring to matters of time if, for example, prohibiting the offender from being outside or in particular areas at certain times.
- should be specific when referring to exclusion from an area, including street names and clear boundaries such as the side of the street included in the order (a map with identifiable street names should also be provided).
- should be in terms that make it easy to determine and prosecute a breach.
- should contain a prohibition against
- inciting/encouraging others to engage in anti-social behaviour.
- should protect all people who are in the area covered by the order from the behaviour (as well as protecting specific individuals).
- may cover acts that are anti-social in themselves and those that are precursors to a criminal act, for example a prohibition on entering a shopping centre rather than on shoplifting.
- may include a general condition prohibiting behaviour which is likely to cause harassment, alarm and distress, but where this is done there must be further clarification of what type of behaviour is prohibited; and
- may include a prohibition from approaching or harassing any witnesses named in the court proceedings.

Examples of AS BO prohibitions can be found on the Crime Reduction website at www.crimereduction.gov.uk
The courts
The absence of a precise definition of antisocial behaviour within the legislation means that orders can be used to tackle a wide range of behaviour. In recent years, courts have imposed orders to prevent behaviour such as joyriding, verbal abuse, vandalism, begging,

Simon Cordell Skeleton Argument (3).pdf
The terms of the order (the prohibitions)
drinking underage and assault. While the proceedings and the making of the order itself can curb behaviour, the extent to which the order succeeds also depends on the prohibitions imposed, which in turn require effective wording.
ft is good practice for the applicant to provide a draft of the prohibitions sought, but the final wording of the order will be a matter for the court. Problems have arisen when prohibitions have been drafted too widely or in such ways that enforcement is made difficult, if not impossible. Guidance and genera! principles on drafting prohibitions have come from legislation, case law and shared best practice. The following section draws together these principles and provides suggestions and comments for consideration.
There is now a requirement for the court to set out its findings of fact in relation to antisocial behaviour on the face of the order, following the cases of Wadmore and Foreman.
Effective prohibitions
If the conditions for making an order are met, the court may make an order which prohibits the defendant from doing anything described in the order (section 1(4) Crime and Disorder Act 1998 (CDA)).The facts leading to the order should be recorded and the court should provide its reasons for making the order (C v Sunderland Youth Court [2003 J EWHC 2385).
The effect of the order should be explained to the defendant and the exact terms pronounced in open court. Most courts now have a practice of serving the defendant with a copy of the court order before he or she leaves court and may also require his or her acknowledgement. The order should set out in full the anti-social behaviour in relation to which the order was made (7? v Shane Tony P
- EWCA Grim 287).

Once the court has decided that the order is necessary to protect persons from further anti-social acts by the defendant, the court must then consider what prohibitions arc appropriate to include. Each order and therefore prohibition will need to be targeted to the individual and the type of anti-social behaviour it is to prevent.
The prohibitions that may be imposed are those necessary to protect persons from further anti-social behaviour by the defendant (section 1 (6) CDA) and must not impose positive obligations. Therefore each prohibition must be:
- negative in nature.
- precise and target the specific behaviour that has been committed by the defendant.

- proportionate to the legitimate aim pursued and commensurate with the risk to be guarded against, which is particularly important where an order may interfere with an ECHR right (7? v lioness [2005] EWCA 2395); and expressed in simple terms and easily understood.
- Identification of some of the best practice used within the courts suggests that the following issues should be borne in mint! when formulating prohibitions:
- A court should ask itself before making an order are the terms of this order clear so that the offender will know precisely what it is, he or she is prohibited from doing?' (R v lioness |2005| EWCA 2395).
- Less common phrases such as 'curtilage', 'paraphernalia' or 'environs' should be avoided as they may cause confusion.
- Can it be enforced? Those who will enforce the order must be able to identify and prove a breach.
- Are any excluded areas clearly delineated? Most courts require a map to be included and it may be necessary to delineate which side of the road forms the boundary. If a line is drawn down the middle of a road, there may be arguments as to which side of the road the defendant was standing.
- Does the prohibition clearly identify those whom the defendant must not contact or associate with?
- Where the defendant is a foreign national, some courts consider it good practice for the order to be translated into the native tongue.
- testing the prohibition by considering ways in which it could be breached may highlight its limitations (7? v McGrath EWCA Crim 353).
- There is no requirement that the acts prohibited by an order should by themselves give rise to harassment, alarm, or distress (7? v McGrath [20051 EWCA Crim 353).

* Curfews are substantially prohibitive and, while also a sentence of the court, there is nothing legally objectionable to a curlew as a prohibition if the necessary protection of the public justifies its inclusion (7? (Lonergan) v Lewes Crown Court [2005] EWHC 457 (Admin)).

A prohibition can prohibit behaviour that is in any event unlawful, although previously the courts have encouraged inclusion of comparatively minor offences only (R v Shane Tony P [2004] EWCA Crim 287). However, recently the Court of Appeal has indicated that prohibiting behaviour that is in any event a crime does not necessarily address the aim of an order, which is to prevent anti-social behaviour. Prohibitions should enable agencies to act before the anti-social behaviour takes place rather than waiting for a crime to be committed (R v Bones [2005] EWCA 2395). Therefore, bail conditions provide a useful analogy when considering what prohibitions to impose.

The Court of Appeal provided some hypothetical examples by way of guidance.

If faced with a defendant who causes criminal damage by spraying graffiti, then the order should be aimed at facilitating action to be taken to prevent graffiti spraying by him before it takes place. For example, the prohibition could prevent the offender from being in possession of a can of spray paint in a public place, giving an opportunity to take action in advance of the actual spraying. This makes it clear to the defendant that he has lost the right to carry such a can for the duration of the order.

If a court wished to make an order prohibiting a group of youngsters from racing cars or motor bikes on an estate or driving at excessive speed (anti-social behaviour for those living on the estate), then the order should not (normally) prohibit driving while disqualified. It should prohibit, for example, the offender while on the estate from taking part in, or encouraging, racing, or driving at excessive speed. It might also prevent the group from congregating with named others in a particular area of the estate. Such an order gives those responsible for enforcing the order on the estate the opportunity to take action to prevent the anti-social conduct before it takes place. Neighbours can alert the police, who will not have to wait for the commission of a particular criminal offence.

The order will be breached not just by the offender driving but by his giving encouragement by being a passenger or a spectator.

The court also seemed to leave open the door for the continued use of a prohibition to prevent conduct that also amounts to an existing offence which carries only a monetary penalty, for example loitering for the purpose of prostitution. The court should not impose such a prohibition merely to increase the sentence for the offence but must go through all the steps to make sure that an order is necessary.

Further details can be found on the Together website at www.together.gov.uk

Length of prohibitions

In R (lonergan) v Lewes Crown Court [2005] EWHC 457 (Admin), Maurice Kay LJ referred to the duration of prohibitions, saying:

A curfew for two years in the life of a teenager is a very considerable restriction of freedom. It may be necessary, but in many cases I consider it likely that either the period of curfew could properly be set at less than the full life of the order or that, in the light of behavioural progress, an application to vary the curfew under section 1(8) might well succeed.'

Consequently, just because an order must run for a minimum of two years, it does not follow that each and every prohibition within the order must endure for the life of the order. This approach was endorsed by the Court of Appeal in R v Bones [2005] EWCA 2395 which considered that it might be necessary to amend or remove a prohibition after a period of time, for example if the defendant started work.

ASBOs on juveniles should be reviewed yearly, and further details are given on page 45.
Targeting specific behaviour
As noted above, prohibitions must target the defendant's specific anti-social behaviour.
But assuming the prohibitions are negative, specific and enforceable, the appropriateness of

The ter nix of the order (the prohibitions) the prohibitions imposed can be judged only on the facts of each case. Therefore, a number of common scenarios are included below for consideration, these are based on orders made by the courts, although facts and prohibitions have been altered to highlight specific issues. While these types of behaviour have been made the subject of orders, this should not imply that such behaviour will automatically be held to be subject to orders in the future.
Further examples of prohibitions can be found on the Crime Reduction website at www.crimereduction.gov.uk
The following are examples of prohibitions that were drawn up but were found to be too wide or poorly drafted:
- Not to be a passenger in or on any vehicle, while any other person is jsic] committing a criminal offence in England or Wales.

(A breach could be occasioned by travelling in a bus, the driver of which, unknown to the subject of the order, was driving without a licence (R (W) v Acton Magistrates' Court [2005] EWHC 954 (Admin)).
- Not to associate with any person or persons while such a person or persons is engaged in attempting or conspiring to commit any criminal offence in England or Wales. (A similar result to the above, in that he could be associating with someone who, unknown to him, was conspiring to commit an offence.)
- Entering any other car park, whether on payment or otherwise, within the counties of |...]. (This was considered to be too draconian as it would prevent the defendant from entering, even as a passenger, any car park in a supermarket (R v McGrath [2005] EWCA Crim 353).)
- Trespassing on any land belonging to any person, whether legal or natural, within those counties. (As above, in that any wrong turn onto someone else's property would risk custody.)
- Having in his possession in any public place any window hammer, screwdriver, torch or any tool or implement that could be used for the purpose of breaking into motor vehicles. (Unacceptably wide, as the meaning of any tool or implement' is impossible to ascertain.)

° Entering any land or building on the land that forms a part of educational premises, except as an enrolled pupil with the agreement of the head of the establishment or in the course of lawful employment.
(It was held that the term 'educational premises' lacked clarity, for example it could have included teaching hospitals or premises where night classes were held. Also, there was a danger that the defendant might unwittingly breach the order if he played on playing fields associated with educational premises (R v lioness [2005] EWCA 2395).)
- In any public place, wearing, or having with you, anything that covers, or could be used to cover, the face or part of the face this will include hooded clothing, balaclavas, masks or anything else that could be used to hide identity. (This was found to be too wide and a breach could occur by wearing a scarf or carrying a newspaper.)
- Doing anything that may cause damage.

(Far too wide, as it may include the defendant scuffing his shoes.)
- Committing any criminal offence. (Taken with other prohibitions, the divisional court commented that this was very plainly too wide (R (on application of W) v DPP [2005] EWHC 1333 (Admin).)

Further examples and consideration of prohibitions made for football-related violence may be found in the ease of (R v lioness [2005] EWCA 2395).
Duration of an order
The minimum duration of an order is two years, which was set in order to give respite to communities from anti-social behaviour. There is no maximum period and an order may be made for an indefinite period. It is for the court to decide the duration of an order, but the applicant agency should propose a time period as part of its application.
The duration applied for should take into account the age of the recipient, any special conditions that might affect their behaviour, the severity of his or her anti-social behaviour, the length of time it has gone on for and the recipient's response to any previous measures to deal with the behaviour. A longer order will generally be appropriate in the case of more serious or persistent anti-social behaviour. Orders issued to children and young people should be reviewed annually and careful consideration must be given to the case for applying for such orders to last beyond two years.

Summons procedure
Magistrates' court (acting in its civil capacity)

The lead individual in charge of the case should arrange for an application form and three copies of the summons form to be completed and served upon the court. Once these proceedings have been issued, the applicant should serve the defendant with the following:

1. the summons.
2. a copy of the completed application form.
3. documentary evidence of statutory consultation.
4. guidance on how the defendant can obtain legal advice and representation.
5. notice of any hearsay evidence.
6. details of evidence in support of the application as agreed with the applicant agency's solicitor; and
7. a warning to the defendant that it is an offence to pervert the course of justice, and that witness intimidation is liable to lead to prosecution.

Wherever possible, the lead officer in charge will ensure that service of the summons is made on the defendant in person. If personal service is not possible, the summons should be served by post as soon as possible to the last known address.
Where a child or a young person is concerned, a person with parental responsibility must also receive a copy of the summons. This could be a local authority social worker in the case of a looked-after child as well as, or instead of, the parent. ('Parent' has the same meaning as under section 1 of the Family Law Reform Act 1987, and 'guardian' is defined in section 107 of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933.)
The summons forms are set out within the Magistrates' Courts (Anti-Social Behaviour Orders) Rules 2002. See Appendix D.

County court

The process for the county court is set out in the Practice Direction of the updated Civil Procedure Rules at 65.21 -65.26.

Disclosure

Before evidence is disclosed, the applicant should consult the police and other agencies to ensure that all reasonable steps have been taken to support witnesses and minimise any potential for witness intimidation. Evidence should not be disclosed without the express permission of the witness. However, evidence that is not disclosed cannot be relied on.
The applicant should seek to maintain witness anonymity and ensure that it does not identify them by default (for example through details of location, race, personal characteristics or age).

Court procedures

It is important that those hearing the case are fully briefed on the purpose of an order. There should be no confusion as to the purpose of the order, which is to protect the community. Where the case concerns a child, the welfare of the child is, of course, to be considered, and indeed the making of the order should contribute to this by setting standards of expected behaviour. But the welfare of the child is not the principal purpose of the order hearing.
Whether or not the subject of the application is present, the court should be asked to make the order. Adjournments should be avoided unless absolutely necessary.

orders in magistrates' courts are set out in the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980.
The application, under section 1(3) of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998, should be made to the magistrates' court whose area includes the local government area or police area where people need to be protected from the anti-social behaviour.
The lead officer in charge of the case should ensure that all the evidence and witnesses are available at the hearing, including evidence in support of any need for the court to make an immediate order.
Under section 98 of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980, evidence will be given on oath. Any magistrate or judge may hear the case.
Where a defendant fails to attend a hearing, the applicant may, after substantiating the complaint on oath, apply to the court to issue a warrant for the defendant's arrest. Various provisions for adjournment, non-attendance at court and the issue of a warrant for arrest are contained in sections 54 to 57 of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980.
County court
An application for an order in the county court must be made in accordance with the procedure set out in the Practice Direction at Appendix B.
Where the applicant is the claimant in the principal proceedings, the application for the order should be included in the claim form. Where the applicant is the defendant in the principal proceedings, the application should be made by way of an application notice,
How to prepare a court tile for an application
A file to support the application for an order should be prepared by the lead agency or the solicitor acting on their behalf.
A minimum of eight identical court bundles will be required as follows.

- three for the magistrates.
- one for the legal adviser.
- one for the applicant's solicitor.
- one for the defence solicitor.
- one for the defendant; and
- one for the witness box.

The files are in loose-leaf format (in an A4 ring binder) and should be indexed and paginated.
The index and contents should include, as appropriate:

- the summons for the order, together with proof of service.
- the application for the order (in the format provided by the Magistrates' Court (Anti-Social Behaviour Orders) Rules 2002); which should accompany the defence. If the applicant is not a party to the principal proceedings, an application to be had a party and for the order must be made to the court in the same application notice.

Orders made on conviction in criminal proceedings
After a defendant has been convicted of an offence, the prosecutor may make an application for an order. Alternatively, the court may make an order of its own volition.
Orders on conviction can be made by the magistrates' court, the youth court or the Crown court. The form of these orders is set out in the Magistrates' Court Rules and the Crown Court Rules. An order may be made only if the court sentences or conditionally discharges the offender for a relevant offence.
The Crown Prosecution Service usually requests the court to make an order on conviction, as there is no formal application process for this order. The court has to consider that:
• the offender has acted in an anti-social manner, that is in a manner that caused or was likely to cause harassment, alarm, or distress to one or more persons not of the same household as the offender; and
• an order is necessary to protect any persons in any place in England and Wales from further anti-social acts by him.
• Evidence
• Evidence should explain to the court the context of the anti-social behaviour and its effect on other people. It can include:
• direct witness statements.
The head of a noisy household gets an ASBO for ignoring repeated official warnings and threatening complaining neighbours and council officers
Issue
In March 2004, neighbours of a house in Lowestoft were subjected to frequent and persistent loud music, resulting in 17 complaints over the course of a month. The perpetrator, who was a housing association tenant, had intimidated, threatened, and verbally abused her neighbours, council officers and visitors.
Approach

A noise abatement notice was served on the perpetrator by environmental health officers under section 80 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. Audio equipment was confiscated following breach of the noise abatement notice. During the confiscation, the perpetrator verbally abused the council officers.
After seven warning letters, two abatement notices and the confiscation of more than £1,000 of musical equipment, the council was still receiving complaints.
Failure to comply with an abatement notice without reasonable excuse is an offence, and the noisy neighbour was taken to court. The council consulted Suffolk Police and the housing association and proposed terms for an order on conviction that achieved much more than the original abatement notice was capable of.
The magistrates granted the council's application for an order on conviction with the following prohibitions:
• not to play loud music that could be heard outside her dwelling; and
• not to verbally (or otherwise) abuse: employees or agents of the council; neighbours; or visitors to the neighbourhood.
Outcome
The order on conviction had several advantages over the noise abatement notice as an enforcement tool. It was easier to enforce as the evidence of experts such as environmental health officers to prove statutory noise nuisance would not be required. The order on conviction reduced the test of compliance to a simple (nonexpert) factual observation of audibility' beyond the confines of the defendant's dwelling - a simple matter of observable fact that, say, a police officer could witness.

Applying to the courts
The second prohibition to deal with the tenant's threatening and abusive behaviour was beyond the scope of the original abatement notice. It was granted as the council was able to produce evidence of the tenant's behaviour to justify the restriction gained from early consultations with Suffolk Police and the housing association, which proved it was a reasonable restriction to impose on the defendant.
The resulting order on conviction did not cost any more than the noise prosecution would have cost on its own. Obtaining these restrictions in this way avoided the need for a stand-alone ASBO application in respect of the other aspects of the defendant's behaviour, saving money, avoiding several weeks' delay, and achieving faster and more readily enforceable relief for the wider community.
Valuable lessons were learnt by environmental health and other enforcement authorities in this action.
In particular, early consultation with relevant agencies in the process of investigation and enforcement are important to an ASBO's success. And if the applicant for an order offers the other relevant agencies the opportunity to assist in drafting appropriate prohibitions, a successful outcome, which offers relief for the community 'on all fronts', is more likely.

Section 1.0(3) of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 permits adjournments to be made after conviction and before sentence to enable enquiries to be made or, in this context, to determine the most suitable way of dealing with an application for an order under section 1C of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998.Where the court adjourns and delays sentencing to consider the order, it can impose bail conditions in the normal manner.

- Children and young people

The Home Office, Youth Justice Board and Association of Chief Police Officers have issued separate guidance on the role of the youth offending team (YOT) in dealing with anti-social behaviour.7 There is also separate guidance on the interventions available for children under 10 at Appendix B.
This section sets out the procedures for applying for ASBOs and similar orders in respect of children and young people, and the procedures for managing the case afterwards.
Who can apply for an order?
Agencies able to apply for orders are the same as those for adults, and the consultation requirements are the same.
The role of the YOT needs to be clearly set out in terms of what it can offer in the prevention of anti-social behaviour, and in the ASBO process. All other agencies should involve the YOT in any consideration of an order at an early stage as it is likely to have much information to share about that young person. The YOT has a responsibility to prevent crime and anti-social behaviour by young people, and should help partners to obtain an order to stop the behaviour continuing where it is deemed appropriate.
If there are any doubts about the option of obtaining an order, these should be explored at an early stage with the YOT and other partners, rather than in court. The YOT can also have a role in explaining the conditions of an order to the young person and their parents, explaining the impact of that person's behaviour on the community, and making it dear that the order is the consequence of that behaviour. In addition, the YOT and other partners should offer support in order to aid compliance.
In cases of a breach of an order, the pre-sentence report (PSR) provided to the court by the YOT should outline the impact title behaviour has had on the community.
The YOT can also use the PSR in criminal proceedings to recommend an order on conviction where that course of action has been agreed and deemed appropriate.
The PSR should also address the issue of parenting and further support to the young person. Courts can make a parenting order with an ASBO or similar order, if a voluntary approach has failed and it will help improve behaviour, together with an individual support order (ISO). The YOT has a key role in both of these interventions. Details on these are set out below,
Applications to the magistrates' court acting in its civil capacity
Since the youth court has no civil jurisdiction, applications for orders against under-18s will be heard by the magistrates' court (except where the youth court is asked to impose an order on conviction).A pilot to allow children and young people to be joined to proceedings in the county court, for the purpose of obtaining an ASBO where the anti-social behaviour is material to the principal proceedings, is currently under way in 11 county courts and is due to run until September 2006.
The officer in charge of the application should contact the justices' clerk in advance of the hearing to ensure that it will be conducted in a way that is suitable for the child or young person.
Where there is an application to a magistrates' court lor an ASBO under section 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998, or an application to a magistrates' court for an ASBO to be varied or discharged under section 1(8) of the Act, and the person against whom the order is sought is under 18, the justices constituting the court should normally be qualified to sit in the youth court.

Children and young people

Dealing effectively with persistent young perpetrators in Norfolk

Issue

Improved partnership working between the police and the YOT was key to effectively tackling anti-social behaviour by young people.

Approach

Regular liaison meetings of YOT and youth inclusion and support panel (YISP) staff were held at the Safer Communities Unit. Community reparation projects were planned which impacted on sensitive communities or resonated with vulnerable members of the community. Police officers forged contact with youth groups and educational centres. Part of the action plan required YISP workers to attend a police tasking and co-ordination meeting.

Outcomes

The YOT discussed, and was helpful to and supportive of, community reparation projects that added to increased public reassurance. Work commissioned included graffiti clearance in priority areas, and the cleaning of home Watch' street signs that were covered in algae, and where householders were elderly and not able to carry out that work. Two respected local officers maintained their links with a local community youth project through a weekly radio broadcast. On the Beat1, on the first community radio station in Norfolk. The Safer Communities inspector became a member of the steering group of that project. Community team officers enjoyed good relations with the Excellence Centre, a unit for excluded or disengaged children of school age, as evidenced by the support of the centre manager for the Constabulary's recent 'Chartermark' award.

open to the general public and has no automatic restrictions to prevent public and press access or to prevent reporting of the proceedings or to protect the identity of a child or young person (or adult) who is the subject of an application.

- The court should have a good reason, aside from age alone, to impose a discretionary order under section 39 of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 to prevent the identification of a child or young person concerned in the proceedings.
- The applicant may resist a call from the defendant's representatives for such restrictions if the effectiveness of the ASBO will largely depend on the wider community knowing the details.

The applicant should note the following.

- Under section 98 of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980, evidence will be given on oath, except the evidence of a child under 14 years of age, which is given unsworn.
- Section 34A of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 requires the attendance of a parent or legal guardian at court for any person under 16 years of age. Every effort should be made before a hearing to ensure that this takes place to avoid unnecessary adjournments.
- The court will require information about the child's or young person's background, home surroundings and family circumstances. Such information should be available to avoid the need for an adjournment.

Assessment of needs

When applying for an order against a young person aged between 10 and 17, the YOT should make an assessment of their circumstances and needs. This will enable the local authority to ensure that the appropriate services are provided for the young person concerned and for the court to have the necessary information about them.

It is vital that any assessment does not delay the application for an order. The lead agency should therefore liaise closely with the local social services department or YOT from the start of the process so that, where a new assessment is required, it can be begun quickly. In some cases an up-to-date assessment may already be available.

Councils with social services responsibilities have a duty, arising from section 17 of the Children Act 1989, to safeguard and promote the welfare of children within their areas who may be in need the assessment of the needs of such children is expected to be carried out in accordance with the Framework for the assessment of children in need and their families? The guidance sets out the content and timescales of the initial assessment (seven working days) and the core assessment (35 working days). A core assessment is required when an initial assessment has determined that the child is in need. The assessment will cover the child's needs, the capacities of their parents and wider family, and environmental factors. This enables councils to determine whether the child is a 'child in need' and what services may be necessary in order to address the assessed needs.

The assessment of the child's needs should run in parallel with evidence gathering and the application process. Statutory agencies, such as social services, the local education authority or the health authority, have a statutory obligation to provide services to under-18s.They should do so irrespective of whether an ASBO application is to be made and the timing of that application. The ASBO application does not prevent such support and can proceed in parallel, or indeed prior to, that support.

Parenting orders

This section should be read in conjunction with Government guidance on parenting contracts and parenting orders. 'There is also information on the Together website (www.together.gov.uk).The applicant for parenting orders is the YOT. (Provisions in the Police and Justice Bill currently before Parliament aim to extend to registered social landlords and local authorities the power to apply lor parenting orders.)

Parenting orders are available alongside other court action where:

- an ASBO or a sex offender order has been made in respect of a child or young person; or a child or young person has been convicted of a criminal offence.
- Parenting orders can be made for children aged between 10 and 17 provided that the conditions in section 8 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 are not. This section stipulates that a parenting order is desirable only if it is made 'in the interest of preventing repetition of the behaviour which led to the order being made.'
- The court can decide to make the order; it is not necessary to obtain the consent of the parent or guardian.

It is essential that parents and guardians take responsibility for the behaviour of their children. If an ASBO or an order on conviction is made against a child or young person, the court must also consider making a parenting order in respect of the parents or guardians of the child or young person. Where the parent or child has a disability, a practitioner with specialist knowledge should be involved in the assessment process to help establish whether the behaviour is a result of disability and whether it could or should be addressed.

Parenting orders are civil orders that help to engage parents8 9 10 11 to address their child's offending or anti-social behaviour, and to establish discipline and build a relationship with their child. This may help the conditions of the ASBO to be met and thereby reduce the chances of the young person breaching the order.

The parenting order requires the parent or guardian to comply, for a period of not more than 12 months, with such requirements as are specified in the order, being those which the court considers desirable in the interests of preventing any repetition of the anti-social behaviour (for example ensuring that the Department of Health (2000) Framework for the assessment of children in need end their families.

Home Office, Youth Justice Board, Department for Constitutional Affairs. Parenting Contracts and Orders Guidance, February 2004.

Provision for parenting orders is set out in sections 8, 9 and 10 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998.The orders can be made in proceedings where a child safety order, an ASBO or sex offender order has been made; a child or young person is convicted of an offence: or a person is convicted of an offence under sections 443 or 444 of the Education Act 1996.

1.l. For the purposes of the 1998 Act, the term 'parent' has the same meaning as that contained within section 1 of the Family Law Reform Act 1987, that is either of the child's or young person's natural parents whether or not married to each other at the time of their birth. 'Guardian' is defined in section 117 of the 1998 Act with reference to section 107 of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933, and includes any person who, in the opinion of the court, has for the time being the care of the child or young person. This may include people who may not have parental responsibility for the child or young person as defined in the Children Act 1989, such as stepparents.

child attends school regularly, avoids certain places, or is home by a certain time at night).

The parent or guardian is required to attend a counselling or guidance programme for up to three months. This element is compulsory and must be imposed in all cases when an order is made (except where the parent or guardian has previously received a parenting order - section 8(5)). Programmes can cover setting and enforcing consistent standards of behaviour and responding more effectively to unreasonable adolescent demands.

The court needs to consider an oral or written report before making a parenting order, unless the child or young person has reached the age of 16.T0 avoid unnecessary adjournments, such a report should be available early in the court process.

A 'responsible officer', who will generally be from the local YOT, social services, probation service or local education authority, supervises delivery of the parenting order.

The officer will have responsibility for, among other things, arranging the provision of counselling or guidance sessions and ensuring that the parent complies with any other requirements which the court may impose.

If the parent does not comply with the order, the responsible officer can refer the matter to the police for investigation. Such action is generally expected only where noncompliance is sufficiently serious to warrant possible prosecution - the responsible officer is expected to work with the parent to improve compliance. But if prosecuted and convicted for non-compliance, the parent can be fined up to Jo 1,000 (level 3 on the standard scale).

Individual support orders

Section 1AA of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998, which was inserted by section 322 of the Criminal Justice Act 2003, provides for the making of ISOs, which have been available since May 2004.They are civil orders and can be attached to ASBOs made against young people aged between 10 and 17 years old. They impose positive requirements on the young person and are designed to tackle the underlying causes of their anti-social behaviour.

ISOs are available for stand-alone ASBOs made in the magistrates' courts only. Where a magistrates' court makes an ASBO against a young person, it must also make an ISO if it considers that an ISO would help to prevent further anti-social behaviour. ISOs are not available for orders on conviction, where it is expected that sentencing will address the underlying causes of the offence.
ISOs can last up to six months and require a young person to comply with such requirements as may be specified in the order and any directions given by the responsible officer to that end. Such requirements must be those which the court considers desirable in the interests of preventing repetition of the anti-social behaviour and may include requirements to participate in certain activities, to report to a specified person at specified times or to comply with educational arrangements, but in no case should they require attendance on more than two days a week. An example would be support sessions tailored to the individual's needs and designed to address the causes of the behaviour that led to the ASBO being made, such as counselling for substance misuse or an anger management programme. The ISO may name specific activities the individual must participate in and can also specify dates and places where attendance is required.
ISO application process
There is no need for a specific application for an ISO, although it might be helpful to raise the issue with the court. Where a magistrates' court is making an ASBO (stand-alone only) against a person under 18 years old, it is obliged to make an ISO at the same time if the following conditions are met:
- the ISO would be desirable in the interests of preventing any repetition of the antisocial behaviour which led to the ASBO being made.
- the young person is not already subject to an ISO; and
- the Secretary of State has notified the court that arrangements for implementing the ISO are available (this was done in April 2004 in Home Office Circular 025/2004).

The court should ensure the requirements of the ISO and the consequences of breach are explained to the defendant. If an ISO is not made, then the court must state why it considers that the conditions for making the order arc not met. ISOs are not available for orders on conviction.

Role of the youth offending team
The YOT advises the magistrates' court on whether an ISO is necessary and the conditions an ISO should contain. This information is based on a need's assessment of the young person.
The YOT is responsible for co-ordinating delivery of the ISO and also has a role in ensuring that the terms and conditions of both the ASBO and ISO are understood by the defendant. The conditions within the ISO are overseen by a responsible officer who is usually a member of the YOT, social services or local education authority.
Variation and discharge
An application to vary or discharge the ISO may be made by either the young person subject to the ISO or the responsible officer. The need to very an ISO may arise where support proves to be inappropriate or the individual moves out of the area. Equally if the ASBO linked to the ISO is varied by a court, the court may also vary or discharge the ISO at the same time.
If the ASBO comes to an end or is discharged, the ISO also ceases to have effect.
Breach
Breach of an ISO is an offence and criminal penalties apply, for ISOs to be credible, breaches must be dealt with.
The responsible officer is responsible for ensuring compliance with an ISO. It will usually be appropriate for the responsible officer to encourage compliance using warning tetters before instigating proceedings for a criminal prosecution.
The breach is taken forward by the Crown Prosecution Service and breach proceedings are heard in the youth court. If a court finds that the subject of the order has failed to comply with any requirement of the order, they are guilty of an offence. Breach is a summary offence and the court can impose a fine of up to:
- £1,000, if defendant aged 14 or over; or
- A.250, if defendant aged under 14.

Where the defendant is under 16, the parent will usually be responsible for payment of the fine. The court also has the discretion to order the parent to pay if the defendant is aged between 16 and 18 (as set out in section 137 of the Powers of Criminal Court (Sentencing) Act 2000.
A referral order is not available for breach of an ISO.
Balcony games for the boys creates corridor of hell for neighbours: ASBOs, ISOs and a house move bring relief for all
Issue
Sons of two neighbouring families were responsible for persistent noise nuisance which caused neighbours great distress for over a year. The children of families X and Y, aged between 10 and 15, lived in first- floor council flats where they played rowdy games outside their flats. Family X had a secure tenancy while family Y had a short-term tenancy. Residents frequently complained to the housing office or to the local police community support officers (PCSOs).

Approach

Police and the housing office worked closely together on the case and discovered a pattern of nuisance. PCSOs and the estate manager mediated between families X and Y and their neighbours. When mediation failed, joint visits were made to warn the families of the consequences of their continued antisocial behaviour. Formal warnings followed, outlining the consequences of the boys' actions in terms of potential ASBOs and possible loss of their parents' tenancy. When all warnings had failed, a multi-agency team obtained an interim ASBO on the five boys to put an immediate stop to the nuisance.

Evidence provided by PCSOs and the estate manager was used at the hearing, and interim orders were granted.

Minor breaches over the Christmas period were reported to the police by witnesses between the interim and full hearing, and these strengthened the ease for the ASBOs at the full hearing.

Witnesses who were previously fearful of giving evidence were willing to do so at the full hearing where the ASBOs were granted, and an ISO was attached to each ASBO to tackle some of the underlying causes of the behaviour.

The conditions of the ASBOs on the five boys ordered them:

- not to cause nuisance within the vicinity of their dwellings.
- to stop knocking on doors and windows; and
- not to play games on the balcony. Outcome

The main benefit of the ASBOs was the relief that they brought to the neighbours, who felt they had been supported through the process by police and the housing office.

The ISO, devised and facilitated by Norfolk Youth Offending Team, consisted of four hour-long sessions aimed at helping the boys develop an understanding of how their anti-social behaviour, their constant shouting and banging, impacted on themselves as a group, on their immediate family, and on their neighbours.

The first session defined the ground rules for the group, including showing respect, listening with only one person talking at a time, no shouting, and with each member being allowed to voice an opinion. The second session got the boys listening to what people were saying around them. The third session introduced elements from a social skills game that focused on the boys' finding different ways of asking each other something without resorting to shouting. In the fourth session, a worker from Positive Futures helped the boys think about what leisure activities were available as alternatives to playing on the balcony. The youth worker kept the boys' parents up to date on what was happening in the sessions.

Family X, who were relocated away from family Y, kept their tenancy and no further problems were reported. Similarly, family Y succeeded in stopping their anti-social behaviour.

The ISO gave the boys an opportunity to understand the effect of their rowdy behaviour on themselves and others. As a result of the order and the interventions of the youth worker, the boys took up recreational activities and found constructive ways of spending their time.

Overall, the intervention package was a great success for the community, and for the families themselves.

- Immediate post-order procedure (adults and young people)

Where an ASBO or similar order is granted, it is preferable for a copy of the order to be served on the defendant in person prior to his or her departure from court. It is essential to ascertain that the defendant understands the nature of the prohibitions and the order.

Good practice - managing procedures and timescales

Practitioners handling such orders have taken a range of measures to minimise paperwork and delays, including:

- breaking down the process into clear, manageable stages that are easy to follow for those unfamiliar with the process.
- setting timeframes for each stage of the application to keep the process focused, including a commitment to arrange problem-solving meetings at short notice.
- releasing key staff so that they can concentrate on the application process - this should result in evidence gathering being conducted quickly and efficiently.
- using other agencies, such as neighbourhood wardens and station staff, to collect additional evidence where required (evidence gathering and attending incidents are tasks that local authorities, registered social landlords (R l. s) and the police are already involved in and therefore involve no additional cost);
- adopting strategies to overcome challenges to witness evidence such as ensuring that witness statements corroborate.
- minimising court delays by forewarning the courts of application and using pre-trial reviews.
- sharing costs between partner agencies and utilising the expertise from each agency; and
- not engaging in non-essential problem solving meetings in more serious cases in order to get to court more quickly.

Where an individual has not been personally served with the order at the court, the court should be asked to arrange for personal service as soon as possible thereafter.

In without notice proceedings, proof of service of an ASBO is important, since any criminal proceedings for breach may fail if service is challenged by the defence and cannot be proved by the prosecution. While all other orders do not need proof of service in order to prove breach of an order, lack of knowledge of existence of an order will contribute to a reasonable excuse for the defence. In the case of a child or young person, the order should also be served on the parent, guardian or an appropriate adult, and such service should be recorded.

An order comes into effect on the day it is made. But the two-year period during which no order shall be discharged except with the consent of both parties starts from the date of service.

The lead agency, if not the police, should ensure that a copy of the order is forwarded immediately to the police. The agency should also give copies of the order to the anti-social behaviour co-ordinator of the local crime and disorder reduction partnership, the other partner agencies and the main targets and witnesses of the anti-social behaviour, so that breaches can be reported and acted upon. The Justices' Clerks' Society guidance states that it is the responsibility of the court to inform the police of the making of an order."

The police should notify the appropriate- police area command on the same working day so that details of the defendant and the conditions of the order can be recorded.

A copy of the order should be provided to the lead agency's legal representative on the same day as the court hearing, and in the case of a child or young person, the court will provide a further copy for the youth offending team (YOT). The YOT should arrange for action to be taken by an appropriate agency (for example social services) to ensure that the young person understands the seriousness of the order.

Immediate post-order procedure (adults and your people)

It should also consider the provision of appropriate support programmes to help avoid a breach of the order by diverting the offender from the behaviour that led to it, although such programmes cannot, as the law currently stands, be a condition of the order.

Enforcing the order

The obtaining of the order is not the end of the process. The order must be monitored and enforced properly.

Partnership working after the order is made should include information exchange to ensure early warning of problems and clarification of who should do what to safeguard witnesses, as well as what other action should be taken to challenge the perpetrator in such cases.

Agencies need to be alert to the prospect that this should become a statutory requirement in the near future. Adopting this as best practice now will enable them to achieve compliance more readily.

Police National Computer (PNC)

Recording of orders on the PNC will enable police forces to enforce breaches effectively. Local arrangements should be made for orders to be placed on the PNC so that police officers are in a position to access usable data to identify those who are subject to an order. Conditions of the order should be appended clearly along with the identity of the case officer so that the necessary action can be taken in ease of a breach (which is an arrestable offence).

It is essential that breaches of an order, appeals against the sentence and any other actions relating to the management of the case are reported to the agency responsible for the management of the case.

One-year review of juveniles' ASBOs

Orders issued to young people should be reviewed each year, given young people's continually changing circumstances, to help ensure that they are receiving the support they need in order to prevent breach. The review should be administrative rather than judicial and should be undertaken by the team that decided upon the initial application. Where practicable, the YOT should provide the group with an assessment of the young person. Depending upon progress towards improved behaviour, possible outcomes will include an application to discharge the order or a strengthening of the prohibitions. Applications to vary or discharge the order will have to be made to the court in the usual way. The overriding considerations remain the safety and needs of the community, and the review would have to incorporate the community's views on the order's effectiveness.

- Appeals

Magistrates' court (acting in its civil capacity) and orders on conviction in criminal proceedings

Section 4 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 provides the offender with the right of appeal against the making of a stand-alone ASBO. Section 108 of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 provides a right of appeal against an on- conviction order. An appeal in both cases is to the Crown Court. Rules 74 and 75 of the Magistrates Courts Rules 1981 and 6 to 11 of the Crown Court Rules 1982 apply to appeals against orders. Both parties may provide additional evidence. By virtue of section 79(3) of the Supreme Court Act 1981, an appeal is by way of a re-hearing of the case. In determining an appeal, the Crown Court should have before it a copy of the original application lor an order (if applicable), the full order and the notice of appeal. The lead agency should ensure that copies are sent to the court.

Notice of appeal must be given in writing to the designated officer of the court and the applicant body within 21 days of the order (Crown Court Rules 1982, rule 7). But the Crown Court has the discretion to give leave to appeal out of time (rule 7(5)). The agency that brought the initial application should take charge of defending any appeal against the order. It should also lead in action to guard against witness intimidation.

The Crown Court may vary the order or make a new order. Any order made by the Crown Court on appeal shall be treated for the purpose of any later application for variation or discharge as if it were the original magistrates' court order, unless it is an order directing that the application be re-heard by the magistrates' court.

Although on hearing an appeal it is open to the Crown Court to make any incidental order, for example to suspend the operation of a prohibition pending the outcome of the appeal where this appears to the Crown Court to be just, there is no provision for automatic stay of an order pending appeal.

The order remains in force pending the outcome of the appeal, and breach is a criminal offence even if the appeal subsequently succeeds.

An appeal against the ruling of the Crown Court is to the High Court by way of case stated under section 28 of the Supreme Court Act 1981, or by application for judicial review by virtue of section 29(3) of that Act. It is also open to the applying authority to seek to challenge a magistrates' decision to refuse to grant an order by way of case stated (judicial review of the decision to the divisional court) by virtue of section 111 of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980.

County court

Any appeal against an order made in the county court must be made in accordance with part 52 of the Civil Procedure Rules. Appeals against orders made by district judges will be to a circuit judge and against orders made by circuit judges to the High Court.

Appeals to the High Court by case stated

Any person who was party to any proceedings or is aggrieved by the conviction, order, determination, or other proceedings of the court may question the proceedings on the grounds that it is wrong in law or in excess of jurisdiction.

The court can then be asked to state a case for the opinion of the High Court.

The case stated is heard by at least two High Court judges, and more often three judges sit, including the Lord Chief Justice. No evidence is considered, so the hearing consists entirely of legal argument by counsel.

Having heard and determined the question(s) of law, the High Court may reverse, affirm or amend the original determination in respect of which the case has been stated, or remit the matter to the justices with the opinion of the court, or make such an order in relation to the matter as the court may see fit.

Appeals before the Crown Court

The hearing at the Crown Court is an entirely fresh one and, by virtue of section 79(3) of the Supreme Court Act 1981, is a full re-hearing of the case. The judgment in the ease of R v Lamb [2005] EWCA Crim 2487 recommended that circuit judges and above should be dealing with these cases.

Rectification of mistakes

Section 142 of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 gives the court power to vary or rescind a sentence or other order imposed or made by it when dealing with an offender, if it appears to the court to be in the interests of justice to do so. However, this section is intended to rectify mistakes and applies only to orders made when dealing with an offender in criminal proceedings. Therefore, this power would only be applicable to orders made on conviction, rather than on a stand-alone application.

Application for judicial review judicial review looks at the lawfulness of actions and decisions. An application can be made for the High Court to consider whether the magistrates' court has failed to exercise its jurisdiction properly or whether it has made an error of law, which appears on the face of the record.

The High Court has the power to quash the order or make a mandatory prohibiting order.

An application must be made promptly, and in any event within three months of the date on which the grounds for the application arose.

- Breaches

Breaches by adults

Breach of an order is a criminal offence, which is arrestable and recordable. Prosecutions for breaches of orders can be brought by the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS), although a local authority may also do so by virtue of section 1(1 OA) of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 (as inserted by section 85(4) of the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003), which states that prosecutions can also be brought by:

1. a council which is a relevant authority.

2. the council for the local government area in which a person in respect of whom an order has been made resides or appears to reside.

The lead officer managing the case should keep the other partner agencies informed of the progress and outcome of any breach investigation. A particular consideration will be the need to protect witnesses. The standard of proof for prosecution of a breach of an order is the criminal standard - 'beyond reasonable doubt'. Provision is made in section 1(10) of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 for a defence of reasonable excuse.

The maximum penalty on conviction in the magistrates' court is six months in prison or a fine not exceeding £5,000 or both; at the Crown Court the maximum penalty is five years in prison or a fine or both. Community penalties are available, but a conditional discharge is not.

Agencies and courts should not treat the breach of an order as just another minor offence. (It should be remembered that the order itself would normally have been the culmination of a course of persistent antisocial behaviour.) An order will only be seen to be effective if breaches are taken seriously.

Information on breaches can be received from any source, including the local authority housing department and other local authority officers, neighbours and other members of the public. Any information received by a partner agency should be passed immediately to the police and lead officer, who should inform the other agencies involved. Breach penalties are the same for all orders, including the interim order. Court proceedings should be swift and not fractured by unnecessary adjournments either during the proceedings or before sentencing.

Where the offender is found guilty of the breach, the court may take reports from the local authority or police and any applicant agency before sentencing. The court should also consider the original reasons for making the order. A copy of the original order as granted (including any maps and details of any prohibitions) can be put before the court as evidence that an order has been made without the need for a statement formally proving that an order was made (section 139 of the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005).

The sentence given should be proportionate and reflect the impact of the behaviour complained of.

Breaches by children and young people

Breach proceedings for children and young people will be dealt with in the youth court. Breach proceedings in the youth court are not subject to automatic reporting restrictions. The Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 removed automatic reporting restrictions for children and young people convicted of a breach of an ASBO (section 341), and thus details about the perpetrator can be made public. The court may still impose reporting restrictions, particularly if they were put in place when the order was initially imposed in a civil court.

Hreacbes

Under section 98 of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980, evidence will be given on oath, except the evidence of a child under 14, which is given unsworn. Section 34 of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 requires the attendance of a parent or legal guardian at court for any person under 16 years of age. The court will require information about the young person's background, home surroundings and family circumstances prior to sentence. This should be provided by the youth offending team or social services.

As with adults, community penalties are available, but a conditional discharge is not. In addition, the youth court should consider whether to make a parenting order, or whether the individual support order should be amended.

- Variation and discharge of an order

Variation or discharge of an order, including an interim order, may be made on application to the court that originally made it. An application to vary or discharge an order made on conviction in criminal proceedings may be made to any magistrates' court within the same petty sessions areas as the court that made the order. The application can be made either by the original applicant in the case or the defendant. An order cannot be discharged within two years of its service without the consent of both parties. An order made on conviction cannot be discharged before the end of two years. Prohibitions, however, can be varied, removed or added within that initial two-year period.

The procedure for variation or discharge is set out in the Magistrates' Courts (Anti-Social behaviour Orders) Rules 2002, the Crown Court (Amendment) Rules 2002 and the Civil Procedure Rules. These are published separately from this guidance and are available on the crime reduction website at www.crimereduetion.gov.uk

If the individual who is subject to the order asks for its variation or discharge, the agency that obtained the order needs to ensure that a considered response is given to the court. If it is decided that the lead agency should contest the application for variation or discharge, it should give the court its reasons, supported as appropriate by evidence gathered in the course of monitoring the effectiveness of the order. The magistrates' legal adviser will send details of the variation or discharge of any order to the local police force and local authority. The police should record any discharge or variation of the order on their computer system and arrange for any changes to be reflected in the Police National Computer record.

- Monitoring and recording

Local agencies should agree common procedures for recording and monitoring both their successful and unsuccessful applications. Details of orders granted should be sent to the local crime and disorder reduction partnership (CDRP) anti-social behaviour co-ordinator and the local authority or police as appropriate, as well as to other agencies involved with the offender (including the local youth offending team if the offender is under 3 8 years old).

As a minimum there should be a record of:

- the original application (or details of the prosecution and hearing of any request for the order in the case of an order on conviction), including the name, address, date of birth, gender and ethnicity of the defendant.
- the order itself, including, where applicable, the map showing any exclusion area.
- the date and details of any variation or discharge of the order; and
- the action taken for any breach.
- The following information could also be recorded:
- name, address, age, gender and ethnicity of any victim - or a statement that the case involved no identified victim.
- details of any person or persons who complained of the behaviour.
- details of any contributory issues, for example drugs, alcohol and substance misuse and/or mental health problems.
- details of any aggravating factors, for example racial motivation; and
- assessment of outcome in terms of whether or not the anti-social behaviour ceased, satisfy themselves and the public that their anti-social behaviour policies do not discriminate. The Act also imposes a duty to promote race equality. As part of this duty, local authorities and the police should therefore ensure that they monitor the impact of their anti-social behaviour policy on the promotion of race equality. Systems to monitor the ethnicity of both defendants and victims will therefore need to be in place.

This information should, where possible, be collected on the basis of self-definition by the defendant.

From December 2006, the new general duty under the Disability Discrimination Act requires a public authority to pay due regard when carrying out its functions to: the need to eliminate unlawful discrimination against disabled people; the need to eliminate disability-related harassment of disabled people; the need to promote equality of opportunity for disabled people; anti the need to take account of disabled persons' disabilities even where that involves more favourable treatment. Advice on the general duty can also be obtained from the leaflet issued by the Office for Disability Issues (ODI) entitled Disability equality: a priority for all. The Disability Rights Commission website at www.dre.org.uk contains information under the section on publications entitled. Do the Duty'.

Consistency of information will help to assess the effectiveness of orders and inform future local audits and crime reduction strategies.

Local authorities and other agencies, including the police, have a duty under the Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000 to

- Promoting awareness of orders

The purpose of the orders is to protect local communities from the harassment, alarm or distress that can be caused by anti-social behaviour. An effective media strategy by the CDRP is therefore essential if local residents and businesses are to be aware of orders and their implications. Using the local press to ensure the community knows the subject and conditions of the order is often a cost-effective strategy. At the same time, the staff of the partner agencies need to understand how and when orders can be used, and how they relate to the other tools to combat anti-social behaviour available to the partnership. Local agencies and CDRPs should, within the context of their overall strategies for combating anti-social behaviour, devise a strategy for promoting awareness of orders. A designated officer should have responsibility for its delivery. This might most naturally be the CDRP anti-social behaviour co-ordinator. Disclosure of information should be necessary and proportionate to the objective it seeks to achieve.

Suggested aims of the strategy

The aims of an effective local publicity strategy are to:

- increase community confidence in reporting anti-social behaviour and expectations that it can be reduced.
- deter potential offenders from anti-social behaviour.
- ensure that the local population is aware of orders; the powers of the local authority, registered social landlords, Housing Action Trusts, the Environment Agency and the police (including the British Transport Police) to apply for them; and whom to approach if they believe that an order may be appropriate;
- ensure that agency staff have confidence in using orders where they are deemed appropriate; and
- ensure that potential witnesses are aware of the support available to them.
- Publicity
- Phis part of the guidance reflects the judgment of Lord justice Kennedy, presiding judge in the case of R (on application of Stanley, Marshall and Kelly) v Commissioner of Police for the Metropolis and Chief Executive of London Borough of Brent 12004] EWHC 2229 (Admin), commonly referred to as Stanley v Brent.

Principles

1. There is no 'naming and shaming1 - ASBOs are not intended to punish or embarrass individuals but to protect communities.

2. Publicity is essential if local communities are to support agencies in tackling antisocial behaviour. There is an implied power in the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 and tire Local Government Act 2000 to publicise an order so that it can be effectively enforced.

3. Orders protect local communities.

4. Obtaining the order is only part of the process; its effectiveness will normally depend on people knowing about the order.

5. Information about orders obtained should be publicised to let the community know that action has been taken in their area.

6. A case-by-case approach should be adopted, and each individual case should be judged on its merits as to whether or not to publicise the details of an individual who is subject to an order. Publicity should be expected in most cases.

7. It is necessary to balance the human rights of individuals who are subject to orders against those of the community as a whole when considering publicising orders.

8. Publicity should be the norm, not the exception. An individual who is subject to an order should understand that the community is likely to learn about it.

Promoting contourites of orders

Benefits of publicity

The benefits of publicity include the following:

- Enforcement - Local people have the information they need to identify and report breaches.
- Public reassurance about safety - Victims and witnesses know that action has been taken to protect them and their human rights in relation to safety and/or quiet enjoyment of their property. Making local people aware of an order that is made for their own protection can make a real difference to the way in which they live their lives, especially when they have suffered from anti-social behaviour themselves or lived in fear of it.
- Public confidence in local services - Local people are reassured that if they report anti-social behaviour, action will be taken by local authorities, the police or other agencies.
- Deterrent to the subject of the order - The perpetrator is aware that breaches are more likely to be reported because details of the order are in the public domain.
- Deterrent to other perpetrators - Publicity spreads the message that orders are being used and is a warning to others who are causing a nuisance in the community.

The decision to publish

Each individual case should be judged on its merits as to whether or not to publicise the details of an individual who is subject to an order. There should be a correlation between the purpose of publicity and the necessity test: that is, what is the least possible interference with privacy in order to promote the purpose identified.

Decision-makers should ensure that the decisions to publicise orders are recorded. However, this should not be seen as an onerous, lengthy task, but merely a way of recording the process they go through to arrive at publication. To ensure it is achieved, it is good practice to identify an individual, such as the anti-social behaviour co-ordinator, to be in charge of the process.

The decision-making process should aim to consider and record several key factors:

- the need for publicity.
- a consideration of the human rights of the public.
- a consideration of the human rights of those against whom orders are made; and
- what the publicity should look like and whether it is proportionate to the aims of the publicity.

The decision-making process should be carried out early on so as to avoid any delay in publicity following the granting of the order.

The decision-making process

Publicity must be necessary to achieve an identified aim - this will involve a necessity test. The identified aim for publicising could be (1) to notify the public that an order has been obtained, to reassure the public that action has been taken; (2) to notify the public of a specific order so that they can help in its enforcement; or (3) to act as a deterrent to others involved in anti-social behaviour, hi some cases two or even all three aims will be relevant.

Disclosure of information should always be necessary and proportionate to achieving the desired aim(s). When identifying the aim(s), decision-makers should acknowledge, in those cases where it is relevant, the 'social pressing need' for effective enforcement of an order that prohibits anti-social behaviour to protect the community. In effect, this is a consideration of the human rights of the wider community, including past and potential victims. The decision-maker should recognise and acknowledge that for publicity to achieve its aim, it might engage the human rights of the individual who is subject to the order and potentially those of his or her family. Publicity should be proportionate to ensure that any interference is kept to a minimum. For example, if the legitimate aim is enforcement of the order then personal information, such as the terms of the order, the identity of the individual (including a photograph) and how to report any breach of the terms should normally be included. Usually the consideration of the effect of publicity on family members should not deter decision-makers from the stated aim of publicising the order. However, consideration of the impact of publicity on vulnerable family members should be made and recorded. The defendant and his or her family should be warned of the intention to publish details.

What publicity should look like; are the contents proportionate?

The contents of the publicity should also be considered and decisions about them recorded. Disclosure of information should always be proportionate to achieving the desired aim. The contents of publicity should include factual and accurate material.

The content and tone of the publicity should be considered carefully. Information must be based on facts, and appropriate language used: for example, the order itself does not mean that an individual has been found guilty of a criminal offence, Words such as 'criminal' and 'crime' to describe the individual and their behaviour must be used with care and only when appropriate. If the anti-social behaviour was, as a matter of fact, also criminal, then it is permissible to describe it as criminal. Breach of an order is an offence and should be described as such. Publicity should be consistent with the character of the order itself: that is, a civil prohibition (rather than a criminal order) restricting anti-social behaviour (which may be criminal but need not be).

It would be prudent to rehearse the facts of the case and agree on appropriate language to use. Some consideration should be given to the personal circumstances of individuals named on the order when deciding whether to include them in any publicity leaflet, particularly if they are under 18. However, any arguments for not including their names must be balanced with the need to enable those who receive the leaflet to be able to identify a breach.

Details of conditions of non-association named on the order, particularly where those named are also subject to orders or have a recent history of anti-social behaviour, can be included in publicity. Even in cases where the named individuals with whom association is prohibited are not subject to an ASBO it will usually be appropriate to name them once some consideration has been given to their personal circumstances.

Type of information to include in publicity

The type of personal information that might be included in any publicity would be:

- the name of the individual; and/or
- a description; and/or
- the age; and/or
- a photograph; and/or
- his/her address.
- a summary of the individual's anti-social behaviour; and/or
- a summary of, or extracts from, the findings of the judge when making the ASBO; and/or
- a summary of, or extracts from, the terms of the ASBO.
- the identification of any relevant exclusion zone (as illustrated on a map).

- details of conditions of non-associations named on the order, particularly where those named are also subject to ASBOs or have a recent history of anti-social behaviour.
- the expiry date of the order.
- the manner in which the public can report breaches (for example names, telephone numbers, addresses, possibility of anonymous reporting, etc); and/or
- the names of local agencies responsible for obtaining the ASBO.
- local contact numbers, such as those for Victim Support, local police and housing services, with reassurance that reports will be treated in confidence.
- date of publication.
- the identity of the group to be targeted by the publicity (for example businesses or residents in the vicinity); and/or
- those who are suspected to have been subject to anti-social behaviour by the individual; and/or
- those individuals or businesses within and immediately adjacent to an area identified in the ASBO; and
- details of the publication area, for example within the area of any exclusion zone and the area immediately adjacent to the exclusion zone, within the borough.

Age consideration

The age of the person against whom the order was obtained should be a consideration when deciding whether or how to inform people about the order. Factual information should be obtained about whether an individual is particularly vulnerable. 'Phis should be done as early as possible, to avoid delays in informing the public once an order has been obtained. The fact that someone is under the age of 18 does not mean that their anti-social behaviour is any less distressing or frightening than that of an adult.

181,

Simon Cordell's Skeleton Argument (2) Pdf

Promoting awareness of orders

An order made against a child or young person under 18 is usually made in open court and is not usually subject to reporting restrictions. The information is in the public domain and newspapers are entitled to publish details. But if reporting restrictions have been imposed, they must be scrupulously adhered to. In applications involving children and young people where evidence has consisted of details of their past convictions, and reporting restrictions were not lifted for the proceedings leading to those convictions, the publicity should not refer to those convictions. Similarly, where an order on conviction has been imposed on a child or young person in the youth court, unless reporting restrictions are lifted, details of the offences or behaviour alluded to in that hearing cannot be reported. However, details of the behaviour outlined in the order on conviction hearing can be used, unless the court orders otherwise. Where the court making the order does impose reporting restrictions under section 39 of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933, the press must scrupulously observe these.

A court must have a good reason to make a section 39 order. Age alone is insufficient to justify reporting restrictions being imposed. Section 141 of the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 reverses the presumption in relation to reporting restrictions in the youth court in cases for breach of ASBOs. Automatic reporting restrictions will not apply but the court retains the discretion to impose them. The prosecutor can make an application to the court for this. While it is the case that from 1 July 2005 no automatic reporting restrictions have applied in cases for breach of ASBOs relating to children and young people, when dealing with the case the court will consider whether reporting restrictions were imposed when the original order was granted. As ASBOs are civil orders, reporting restrictions will not have applied (unless imposed by the court).

If reporting restrictions were imposed at the original ASBO hearing, then unless there has been a significant change in the intervening period, it is likely that the court will impose reporting restrictions at the hearing for the breach. If no reporting restrictions were imposed at the original ASBO hearing, it is still open to the court to impose reporting restrictions at the hearing of the breach case. If reporting restrictions are not imposed, publicity can be considered, considering all the matters that are relevant when considering publicising the ASBO itself.

Photographs

A photograph of the subject of the ASBO will usually be required so that they can be identified. This is particularly necessary for older people or housebound witnesses who may not know the names of those causing a nuisance in the area. The photograph should be as recent as possible.

Distribution of publicity

This should be primarily within the area(s) that suffered from the anti-social behaviour and that are covered by the terms of the order, including exclusion zones. People who have suffered from anti-social behaviour, for example residents, local businesses, shop staff, staff of local public services, particular groups or households should be the intended audience.

All orders should be recorded on the Police National Computer to assist enforcement.

This is particularly relevant where the order extends across England and Wales. It may be appropriate to extend publicity beyond the area where the anti-social behaviour was focused if there is a general term prohibiting harassment, alarm or distress in a wider area.

It may also be appropriate if there is a danger of displacement of the anti-social behaviour to distribute it just beyond the area covered by the order.
The timescale over which publicity is anticipated to occur should also be given due consideration and decisions recorded. It is important that publicity does not become out of date or irrelevant. Special attention needs to be paid to posters that are distributed to other organisations, as posters should not be left up when the need for them has expired.
It will usually be appropriate to issue publicity when a full order is made, rather than an interim order. However, exceptions can be made, for example where the antisocial behaviour is severe, where there has been extreme intimidation or where there is a delay between the making of the interim order and the outcome of the final hearing.

In the case of Keating v Knowsley Metropolitan Borough Council [2004] EWHC 1933 (Admin), the judge held that publicity could be used for interim orders. In these circumstances it should be stated in the publicity that the order is temporary and that a hearing for a 'full' order will follow, and distribution should be extremely localised.
Consideration of human rights
Consideration of the human rights of the individual who is subject to the order and of the human rights of the public, including the victim(s) and potential victims, should be carried out. Appropriate and proportionate publicity is compliant with the human rights of the individual who is subject to the order. The Stanley v Brent case accepted that publicity was needed for effective enforcement of the order. Individuals do not welcome publicity and may view the effect of publicity as a punishment. However, a subjective assessment by the individual of the effect of publicity is irrelevant in determining the purpose of the publicity. Consideration of the human rights implications of publicity should be recorded.
Consideration of data protection
Publicity is not contrary to the Data Protection Act 1998 as long as authorities are operating in accordance with the Act. There is an exemption in section 29 of the Act let the processing of personal data for the purposes of prevention or detection of crime. This means that personal data can be processed with a view to compliance with a statutory function, where the data has been obtained from a person who possessed it for the purposes of the prevention or detection of crime. This will be the case when considering publicising an ASBO.
Type of publicity
No one directly involved in the case (witnesses and victims) should wait unnecessarily for information about an order. They should be informed immediately when an order is made. This is in addition to keeping them informed of progress throughout the court process and can be done by visits, letters and community meetings or by phone. Victims and witnesses may also be given a copy of the order. It is recommended that publicity be distributed to targeted households immediately after the order has been granted and by at least a week after the court date. Local people should be informed when variation or discharge of an order relevant to them is made.
The method of publicity can include the following:
- local print and television media.
- local leaflet drop; and
- local newsletter.

Practitioners need to apply the proportionality test when deciding which method is appropriate.
Leaflets and other printed materials, such as posters or residents' newsletters, allow local agencies to target particular neighbourhoods, streets or households with information.
The public can be informed about an ASBO at any time - publicity can be issued and re-issued according to the circumstances. However, publicity needs to be timely to ensure that people are able to enforce the order as soon as it has been granted and to reassure the public that something is being done.
Working with the media
It is usual for local statutory agencies to have working relationships with local and regional media, including press, television and radio. This is particularly relevant to issues such as anti-social behaviour and where the media are keen to report how local agencies are tackling these issues through the deployment of dispersal orders, ASBOs crack house' closures, etc.
It is important to work with local media and to make them understand that it is not the purpose of any publicity to punish the individual. Media coverage has the potential to go to a wider audience than leaflets or posters. It is good practice to identify newspapers that report on city, borough and neighbourhood issues, free local press and local radio and television and to develop working relationships with them. This could include being aware of their publication deadlines, giving them exclusives and making sure that the complainant's (victim's) point of view is put across. However, it is important to keep close control of the material. Witnesses should not be put at risk by disclosing dates of hearings, and your relationships with the courts should not be jeopardised. Those subject to an ASBO who are considered vulnerable should also not be put at risk.

Issuing a press release is a way of retaining control of the material. There should be an agreed process for authorisation of the press releases. The press release should contain information that meets the identified aim of the publicity. For example, if the aim is to help enforce the order, the information in the press release will be more detailed than the information needed for publicity whose aim is to reassure the community that something is being done. It is good practice to identify a spokesperson to liaise with the press.

Early intervention and tackling offending behaviour by under-10s
Interventions available
Acceptable behaviour contract (ABC)
An ABC (also known as an acceptable behaviour agreement) is an intervention designed to engage an individual in acknowledging his or her anti-social behaviour and its effect on others, with the aim of stopping that behaviour. An ABC is a written agreement made between a person who has been involved in anti-social behaviour and their local authority, youth inclusion support panel (YISP), landlord or the police. ABCs are not set out in law, which is why they are sometimes called agreements. Any agency is able to use and adapt the model. An ABC or acceptable behaviour agreement is completely flexible and can be adapted for the particular local need. It can include conditions that the parties agree to keep. It may also contain the agreed consequences of a breach of the agreement.
Parenting contracts (section 25 of the Anti-Social Behaviour Act 2003)
Parenting contracts are voluntary written agreements between youth offending teams (YOF's) and the parent/guardian of a child/young person involved, or likely to be involved, in anti-social behaviour or criminal conduct. They are a two-sided arrangement where both the parents and the agency will play a part in improving the young person's behaviour. The contract contains a statement by the parent(s) agreeing to comply with the requirements for the period specified and a statement by the YOT agreeing to provide support to the parent(s) for the purpose of complying with those requirements. It is important that there is a clear agreement about the consequences if the terms of the parenting contract are not adhered to. If the contract is broken, the YOT may apply to the court for a parenting order (see below), which would include compulsory requirements.
Child safety order (sections 11-13 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 as amended by section 60 of the Children Act 2004)
A child safety order (CSO) allows compulsory intervention with a child under 10 years of age who has committed an act which, had they been aged 10 or over, would have constituted an offence. It is designed to prevent anti-social behaviour when it is not possible to engage on a voluntary basis with a child under 10. A CSO is made in family proceedings in the magistrates' court on application by a local authority. The order places the child under the supervision of a responsible officer, who may be a local authority social worker or a member of a youth offending team and can include requirements designed to improve the child's behaviour and address underlying problems.
If the order is not complied with, the parent can be made the subject of a parenting order if that would be in the interests of preventing repetition of the behaviour that led to the CSO being made.
Parenting order
A parenting order can be made in respect of a parent of a child under 10 years of age. It can require parents to attend a parenting programme (lasting up to three months) and specify requirements for the parent regarding supervision of the child (lasting up to 12 months). Failure to comply with a parenting order is a criminal offence punishable by a fine of up to £1,000 and/or a community sentence.
Under section 8 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 as amended by the Children Act 2004, a parenting order can be imposed on a parent of a child who is subject to a CSO or when a CSO has been breached.
Section 26 of the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003 enables YOTs to apply to the magistrates' court for a 'free-standing' parenting order. The court must be satisfied that the child or young person has engaged in anti-social behaviour or criminal conduct and that the order would be desirable in preventing further occurrences of such behaviour.

There is provision in the current Police and Justice Bill to extend the power to apply for parenting orders to local authorities and registered social landlords.

Local child curfew schemes (section 14 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 as amended by Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001)

These are designed for children and young people 15 years old and below, to help local authorities to deal with the problem of unsupervised children or young people involved in late-night, anti-social behaviour on the streets. Under a local child curlew scheme, a local authority or local police force can ban children under 16 from being in a public place during specified hours (between 9pm and 6am), unless they are under the control of a responsible adult. With children under 10, contravening a ban imposed by a curfew notice (for instance being found outside their homes after the curfew) is one of the conditions under which a family court could make the child subject to a CSO. A local child curfew can last for up to 90 days.

Junior youth inclusion projects

Junior youth inclusion projects are based on high-crime, high-deprivation neighbourhoods across England and Wales and work with the 8-13 age range. Projects aim to prevent youth crime in those neighbourhoods by targeting the 50 most at-risk children and young people in the area, assessing their needs and providing meaningful interventions aimed at addressing those risk factors. Young people typically are either on the cusp of offending or are already involved in low-level offending. Ill order to engage with the 50 most at-risk young people, projects work with around another 100 peers and siblings of core group members.

Youth inclusion support panels

Youth inclusion support panels (YISPs) are multi-agency planning groups that serve to identify those young people in the 8-13 age range who are most at risk of offending and engaging in anti-social behaviour. They offer an early intervention based on assessed risk and need. Parenting support in the form of contracts and programmes is offered as part of a range of tailored interventions.

The suggested criteria for a young person referred to the YISP is as follows:

- The child is aged between 8 and 13 years inclusive (up to 17 in some areas).
- The behaviour of the child is of concern to two or more of the partner agencies and/or their parents/carers, and they consider that it requires a multi-agency response.
- The parent/carer and child are willing to take part, give consent to the referral and the child is willing to co-operate with an integrated support plan.
- The child is exposed to four or more risk factors.
- There is known offending behaviour up to and including a police reprimand or ASBO, or there is concern over potential involvement in criminal or anti-social behaviour.

The panel is made up of representatives from a variety of agencies which can include YOTs; police; social services; housing, probation, and education services; Connexions; voluntary sector organisations; anti-social behaviour units; and the fire service. (This list is not exhaustive and can be tailored to local circumstances.) The panel will meet on a regular basis and consider referrals made to it in order to devise an integrated support plan. The YISP must ensure that a mechanism is in place for the sharing of information. The method, criteria and considerations for this can be found by referring to the Association of Chief Police Officers/Youth Justice Board guidance.

Public funding for defendants

Criminal public funding is available for any proceedings under sections 1 and 4 of the Crime and Disorder Act (CDA) 1998 relating to ASBOs, including interim orders, where they are made in the magistrates' court or where an appeal is made in the Crown Court, Advocacy assistance is available for an ASBO, an interim order under section ID of the CDA, variation or discharge of an ASBO, or an appeal against the making of an ASBO under section 4 of the CDA, in accordance with the Criminal Defence Service General Criminal Contract, Solicitors can self-grant advocacy assistance for these matters, There are no financial criteria for the grant of advocacy assistance. Advocacy assistance may not be provided where it appears unreasonable that approval should be granted in the particular circumstances of the case, or where the interests of justice test, set out in Schedule 3 of the Access to Justice Act 1999, is not met.
In applying this test, there is an additional factor of whether there is a real risk of imprisonment if an ASBO is made and subsequently breached.
A representation order may be sought on application to the Legal Services Commission in respect of these proceedings. Provision for representation is made under Regulation 3(2) (criminal proceedings for the purposes of section 12(2)(g) of the Access to Justice Act 1999) of the Criminal Defence Service (General)(No.2) Regulations 2001, and Regulation 6(3) of the same regulations.
An application to the Commission must be made on form CDS3.An application will be determined in accordance with the interests of justice criteria. The availability of advocacy assistance will be a relevant factor which the Legal Services Commission will take into account when considering the grant of rep rese n ration.
Where an application for a representation order is refused, the Legal Services Commission shall provide written reasons for the refusal and details of the appeal process. The applicant may make a renewed application in writing to the Funding Review Committee, which may grant or refuse the application.
Advocacy assistance is available for proceedings in the Crown Court, where an appeal is made under section 4 of the CDA. The merits test is slightly different from that on application for an interim or a full ASBO.
It is based only on the general reasonableness test. Advocacy assistance may not be granted if it appears unreasonable that approval should be granted in the particular circumstances of the case. The prospects and merits of an appeal should be taken into account as well as whether the individual has reasonable grounds for taking the proceedings. Representation is also available for an appeal against an order under section 4 of the CDA. An application should be made to the Legal Services Commission which will consider grant against the availability of advocacy assistance.
Any challenge against the ruling of the Crown Court to the High Court by way of case stated or by application for judicial review falls outside the scope of criminal funding. Legal representation would have to be applied for in accordance with the Funding Code procedures to the Legal Services Commission. This work is funded through the Community Legal Service although it falls within the scope of the General Criminal Contract.
Advocacy assistance is available for a breach of an interim order or full ASBO. Representation is also available for breach proceedings on application to the Commission as above.

Part of my submissions had been that the allegations were that D was involved in organising illegal raves, but the applicant hadn't adduced evidence of trespass which is a requirement for proving that an indoor rave (which all but one was) was illegal. The DJ ruled that the applicant did not need to prove illegality - all the needed to prove was D had acted in an anti-social manner. In my view this is a very questionable decision: firstly, the applicant based their case on the illegality of the raves rather than the fact of the raves themselves and secondly, without proof of illegality the presumption of innocence leads to the conclusion that the raves were legal, and thus D being prohibited from engaging in an ostensibly lawful activity requires more careful consideration on issues of proportionality. D could JR/case state this decision but I think there is little merit in doing so because he would then lose his right to appeal to the Crown Court and even if he succeeded in the High/Division Court, they would merely remit it back to the lower court who would then probably go through the motions of considering proportionality before coming to the same conclusion.

Dear Amal / Goodie
I am writing in respect of your above patient who has been causing a lot of distress for my patient a€“ D. A a€“ 1009639, who lives on top of his flat.
S.Ca€™s behaviour and concerns about his mental state triggered the referral to your service.
There is on-going SOVA in respect of S.Ca€™s threatening and aggressive behaviour towards D.A and her Support workers, this is in addition to constant barking by his dog which has made it difficult for D.A to live in peace at the accommodation.
S.C has expressed paranoid thoughts that he was being stalked by D.A each time she moves around in her flat.
D.A stated she has become a prisoner in her home due to the fear of being attacked by S.C who was alleged in the past to have waited for her under the communal landing while she was leaving her flat, fortunately her Support worker heard her scream and rushed in following which S.C went back to his flat.
S.C was reported recently to have been verbally aggressive and threatening towards D.Aa€™s Support worker from Hospitalier with his dog in which they now feel unsafe to visit D.A at home
Enfield homes Anti-social behaviour Officer is currently involved with the case and during D.A a€~s last SOVA meeting, there was a plan for a Management transfer, but l understand that this will take a long time to happen.
D.A is living in constant fear of S.C due to his aggressive and threatening behaviour towards her and she will not go out alone or attend clinic appointments unless accompanied by her Support worker from Hospitalier.
Ia€™m wondering whether there is a treatment plan put in place for S.C in managing the risks he poses as l understand he can mask his presentation when meeting with professionals and he was deemed not detainable under the MHAA yesterday.
Is it possible for either you or representative to attend the SOVA Case Conference meeting next week a€“ 11th February 2016 @ 13.00hrs a€“ Silver Street, the Anti-social Behaviour Officer for the area will also be present, we need to discuss and formulate a plan regarding the risks S.C poses to D.A as there are concerns that he may cause actual physical harm to D.A if his behaviour continues unchecked.

Dear Simon
I refer to tomorrow's meeting at which I will be dealing specifically with your amended and updated statement.
Can you please ensure that you have with you all items that you intend to exhibit to your updated statement so that these can be exhibited, copied and sent to the Police and properly indexed to the bundle. Please email across what you have in your witness statement so far as your text indicated that You will also have to consider alternative witnesses who can confirm that you attended Dwayne's leaving event as the police are requiring Dwayne to attend to give live evidence. I will require statements / contact details from these potential witnesses by tomorrow evening.
Please ensure that you attend promptly by 4.30pm with just your witness statement and any supporting documentation that you wish to be exhibited.
Your mother was provided with a copy of the bundle that was forwarded to the CPS and the Court on your behalf. There were omissions to this bundle that I was waiting to be provided with. These will also now be forwarded.
Yours sincerely

Dear Matthew Mcgrath
I was passed your email today by Lewisham Council due to a call I made to ask for some advice. I was told by the person in Lewisham Council this ASBO and the conditions would have a huge effect on obtaining any Alcohol and entertainment licence. But they told me to contact you who may be able to give me some more advice.
The advice I need is in the event someone wanted to apply for an event Alcohol and entertainment licences one of any of the below:

- Personal license.
- Premises license.
- Club premises certificate.
- Temporary event notice.
- Minor variations

The advice I wanted to find out if the person had an ASBO with the below conditions
The person is prohibited from:
A. Attending a rave as defined by s.63 of the criminal Justice and Public order Act 1994.
B. Being concerned in the organization of a rave as defined by s.63 of the criminal Justice and Public order Act 1994.
C. Knowingly using or supplying property, personal or otherwise, for use in a rave as defined by s.63 of the criminal Justice and public orders Act 1994.
D. Entering or remaining in any disused or abandoned building.
E. Entering or remaining on non-residential private property on an industrial estate between the hours of 10pm and 7am without written permission from the owner and / or leaseholder of the property; and

F. Engaging in any licensable activity in unlicensed premises.
Would there be an issue with obtaining an Alcohol and entertainment licence, and what would be the chance it would be granted to do a legal event within legitimate business activities.

I have been told that this would not have any effect of any legitimate business activities that any person wished to undertake and that in no way would any person be inhibited by this ASBO order. That any person could apply for a Alcohol and entertainment licence if needed, and have these ASBO conditions and this order would have no effect on any person obtaining Alcohol and entertainment licence within these ASBO conditions to run a legitimate business activities a person wished to undertake.
Regards
Rachael

Hi
Any application would be looked at on its own merits. The test for the application would ultimately be 1 Is that person responsible to ensure the promotion of the licensing objectives?'.
If the ASBO relates to unlicensed events i.e. raves, then this clearly demonstrates a risk to the prevention of crime and disorder licensing objective.
The MPS would make representations to the Licensing Authority due to the risk posed.
This does not mean a licence would not be granted, you would have to satisfy any Licensing Authority that you pose no risk to the licensing objectives.

on 09.02.16 and she advised that in her view use of a warrant and the Mental Health Act assessment were unnecessary as he would give professionals access if he had received an appointment letter. She said that he had a court case in February but would not elaborate on this. Lorraine said that she thought that the involvement of mental health services was unnecessary as Mr Cordell was not in her view experiencing any mental health difficulties and had not experienced any mental health difficulties for a number of months.
I was surprised that Lorraine stated that she did not think that Mr Cordell as the recent referral to mental health services had been triggered by a referral that she had made.

Dear Josey
due to not getting replies to my emails since the new year asking if anything else was needed to be done by as and getting no reply I have not had time since yesterday to deal with getting a statement re Dwayne, but I think that is covered already as Jamie Duffy was there and he has already wrote a statement.
I told you before Christmas Dwayne was due to go away to complete his trip that he has to cut short due to my mum's death. I told you he is back packing so would be very hard to get hold of once he left which was a few days after you asked me to get the tickets to show when he was leaving and the hall details. and when you told me about Dwayne would need to attend, I told you that would be imposable as he was due to leave a few days after you asked me. I even called him in your office Josey so you cannot say you did not know this.
Yes, I should be able to get statement of other people and in your last email you did not say you needed these statements today in the daytime you said by tomorrow evening. Which is tonight.
I am sorry you now feel you have to rush things as they have not been done but that is not my fault or Simon's
Josey you know I have many health problems and I have only just had a huge amount of injections into my spine on the 17/01/2016 and I am not allowed to run around and do things for 6 to 8 weeks after having these done. I also got the flu really badly and have not been well for the last 2 weeks. but have still tried to get things due that was needed but getting no replies to my emails did not help.
Josey you have had Simon 65-page statement for months I think since Oct 2015 at the last meeting you allowed him to attend it was given to you. It is this statement he is updating again since we got the information from the cps in an email on the 04/02/2016.
Simon is trying to get things done so you do not have so much to do. I have done the same thing. Me and Simon from the start of this case have done all that was asked of us and much more,
We were asking for things to be done since this case started which was not and only started to be done when the appeal was put in.
If you feel the need to re-schedule the meeting which has happened many times before then please update us, but this meeting is to deal with Simon updated statement Josey which he has never had a chance to do.

199,
I note that I have not received the updated statement from Simon, nor any additional statements from any witnesses re Dwayne's leaving party. I advised you previously that Dwayne was required to attend court, clearly, he cannot as he is travelling, hence the request for alternative witnesses to back up Simon's alibi.
If the updated statement is not received by 3.30pm then I will have to re-schedule the meeting for until such time as the updated statement is received.

This is a draft copy of what can be included to make a new updated statement and notes which the barrister will need to see.

The Defendant is prohibited from:
- Attending a rave as defined by s.63 of the criminal Justice and Public order Act 1994.
- Being concerned in the organization of a rave as defined by s.63 of the criminal Justice and Public order Act 1994.
- Knowingly using or supplying property, personal or otherwise, for use in a rave as defined by s.63 of the criminal Justice and public orders Act 1994.
- Entering or remaining in any disused or abandoned building.
- Entering or remaining on non-residential private property on an industrial estate between the hours of 10pm and 7am without written permission from the owner and / or leaseholder of the property; and

- Engaging in any licensable activity in unlicensed premises.

Definition of Industrial buildings:

Industrial - This category ranges from smaller properties, often called "Flex" or "R&D" properties, to larger office service or office warehouse properties to the very large "big box" industrial properties. An important, defining characteristic of industrial space is Clear Height. Clear height is the actual height, to the bottom of the steel girders in the interior of the building. This might be 14 - 16 feet for smaller properties, and 40+ feet for larger properties. We also consider the type and number of docks that the property has. These can be Grade Level, where the parking lot and the warehouse floor are on the same level, to semi - dock height at 24 inches, which is the height of a pickup truck or delivery truck, or a full - dock at 48 inches which is semi - truck height. Some buildings may even have a Rail Spur for train cars to load and unload.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Commercial property

Definition of Commercial buildings:

A commercial building is a building that is used for commercial use. Types can include office buildings, warehouses, or retail (i.e. convenience stores, 'big box' stores, shopping malls, etc.). In urban locations, a commercial building often combines functions, such as an office on levels 2-10, with retail on floor 1. Local authorities commonly maintain strict regulations on commercial zoning and have the authority to designate any zoned area as such. A business must be located in a commercial area or area zoned at least partially for commerce.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Commercial building

Under the above definitions of Industrial buildings and the Definition of Commercial buildings it is very clear Mr Simon Cordell has been limited with the conditions that have been imposed by the court and do not account for any person living a normal life or being able to live a normal life, with the conditions that have been set out in this ASBO order and without the conditions being defined clearly Mr Simon cannot do many things within the whole of the UK,

Due to the definition, anything that has a warehouse to store goods would be classed as an Industrial this would include all large shopping stores as they have a warehouse attached to the back of them where they sore goods for sale, also this would include hospitals, along with many other buildings.

So since 05/11/2014 Mr Cordell has stayed in his home and does not go out as he does not want to be in beach of this ASBO, His family are left to deal with making sure he has shopping and the things he needs because the way the conditions have not been defined he does not know what he can do and what he cannot do as this was never defined.

These conditions relating to the ASBO application that have been bound upon Mr S Cordell are for the whole of the UK for 5 years.

Edited part 5.pdf

When the skeleton bundle was updated most recently on 05/02/2016 the applicant supplied a book, this book is created by members of the Home Office, based within the United Kingdom and this books nature is of such a guide to Anti - Social Behaviour Orders.

Please take note to page number (taking a strategic approach page 15) which clearly states:

“The more serious the behaviour, the greater the likelihood that the court will grant a geographically wide order. Orders that seek to operate in the whole of England and Wales will not be granted without evidence that that is the actual or potential geographical extent of the problem. Further detail about effective prohibitions is given in Chapter 7.”

To have that condition imposed of such a wide scale of areas, would be a breach of Mr Simon Cordell’s human rights, this is inclusive for any other person who might also be banned from the whole of the UK.

Mr Cordell has always lived in the London Borough of Enfield since his birth, his family also have lived in the same area all their life’s and so did Simon Nan and Granddad, Mr Cordell has never shown any intension of moving to a new area within the UK.

And it is the Application case Mr Simon Cordell has been accused of is contained within the Borough of North London Enfield namely but one accused incident.

The Judge when granting the conditions of the ASBO on Mr Simon Cordell did not address this in court and made the order for the whole of the UK for 5 years.

It was said in court by my Barrister, that if Mr Cordell ever does need to go to a petrol station along a motor way or on a named industrial estate as many petrol station in fact are and he was to do so between the hours of 22:00 hours and 07:00 hours he would in fact be in breach of this ASBO, the judge replied and said well in that circumstance of an incident, he will be arrested and have to prove in the court that he was going to get petrol.

Also, if he made a wrong turn when driving and turned into a non-residential private property or into a industrial estate, that he would be in breach of this ASBO. Together Simon Barrister and Simon Including his mother, tried to ask questions about the conditions that have been imposed upon himself, Simple everyday life moderately such as what if he needed to go and get milk from Tesco's or a shop and the judge said well he will be arrested, Simon can’t even go to a large moderately of shop such as Tesco and many more similar new establishments between the hours of 22:00 hours and 07:00 hours, without being in breach of this ASBO. This is also shown in the above in the definition of Industrial buildings, and also the definition of Commercial buildings.

If Mr Simon Cordell was to go out for a night, were music would be played as stated in the skeleton argument, that has been provided by the applicant on page number (5 module 20), Many young people do go out to listen to music when in private air and do not need Local Authority permission as stated by the applicant, in today's modern society, as it is stated he would have to ask any owner to see there licensed to make sure when listen to music with less than 500 people, this should only be defined under section 63 of the crime and disorder Act, as in open Air or when Trespass has taken place.
Skeleton argument, that has been provided by the applicant on page number (5 module 18),
I have never been spoken to by the police or anyone else about my behaviour, before this ASBO was served on me. I feel very upset by the words in this section as I feel that the police are trying to say they have spoken to me about problems they have included in this ASBO which is not the case.
Skeleton argument, that has been provided by the applicant on page number (5 module 19),
I did not do the acts that the police have set out in this ASBO and I believe the police are well aware off this. We have said over and over in this case that the public order unit holds information to the real people who did what the police are saying I have done in this ASBO application.
No one wanted to define the conditions the applicant wanted to make this a life time ASBO and applied for the conditions on the day of trial but was denied by the Judge it was also said that after the 5 years, the applicant can apply to put a next 5 years in place because the judge would only allow the 5 years imposed and not the life time ASBO which covers the whole UK..
An Anti-Social Behaviour Order should be given as the final resort, before an ASBO is considered to be put in placed on any person. Other methods should have been tried to as before the court proceedings in any ASBO application to aid in bringing about a solution depending on the offence that has been committed; this is especially in cases of unlicensed activities. These solutions should have included the possibility of mediation, warning letters and Acceptable Behaviour Contracts (ABC). An ABC is classed as a written agreement between any Known persistent offenders, to which Simon Cordell has never been arrested to any think of similar nature in fact the last time Mr Cordell was arrested, was in 2009. He has also never been spoken to by anyone about any concerns they had.

If illegal raves have not been proven which it was not the Judge said no illegality needed to be proven, then why do my conditions for the ASBO still define illegal raves?
Please see article from The World Wide Web at:
http://researchbriefings.files.parliament.uk/documents/SN01889/SN01889.pdf
What is stated in the PDF web linked above is typed below:
Under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994, the police have the power to stop raves. Until January 2004, these were defined as unlicensed open-air gatherings of 100 or more people at which loud music is played during the night. New provisions introduced into the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003, which came into effect in January 2004, reduced the number of people who constitute a rave from 100 to 20, and removed the requirement for the gathering to be in the open air. It also introduced an offence of attending another trespassory rave within 24 hours of a police direction, to stop people simply moving the rave to another place. There have been press reports of police in some areas holding back from using their powers for health and safety reasons, either because of the dangers of dispersing large crowds in the dark or because of other dangerous local conditions. However, there have also been reports of successful police action to control raves in particular areas. Gatherings for which an entertainment licence has been obtained are not counted as raves within the meaning of the legislation. However, there was some controversy about so-called licensed "raves" under provisions in the Licensing Act 2003 which came into force in November 2005. These allow people to get temporary event notices for gatherings of up to 499 people for events lasting up to four days. The licensed events could involve the sale of alcohol, and while the police have to review the application and object if they consider that crime and disorder would result, there is no mechanism for the general public to object. The Government is keeping this area of law under review. These provisions would not apply to the kind of illegal raves covered by the 1994 Act, which by definition are unlicensed."
As far as I know all locations contained within this ASBO application were in a place of fixed residence and all occupiers / residents were living under section 144 Lasbo as stated governed under United Kingdom Law here:
LEGAL WARNING TAKE NOTICE
THAT we live in this property, it is our home and we intend to stay here.
THAT at all times there is at least one person in this property.
THAT any entry or attempt to enter into these premises without our permission is therefore a criminal offence as any one of us who is in physical possession is opposed to such entry without our permission.
THAT if you attempt to enter by violence or by threatening violence, we will prosecute you. You may receive a sentence of up to six months' imprisonment and/or a fine of up to £5,000.
THAT if you want to get us out you will have to issue a claim for possession in the County Court or in the High Court.
The Occupiers
N.B. Signing this Legal Warning is optional. It is equally valid whether or not it is signed.

Part of the Barrister submissions that represented Simon Cordell, had been that the allegations were that he was involved in the organizing of illegal raves, but the applicant hadn't adduced evidence, of trespass which is a requirement for proving, that an indoor rave was illegal. The Deputy District Judge ruled that the applicant did not need to prove illegality, - all the needed to prove was he had acted in an anti-social manner. In the view of the barrister this was a very questionable decision: firstly, the applicant based their case on the illegality of the raves rather than the fact of the raves themselves and secondly, without proof of illegality the presumption of innocence leads to the conclusion that the raves were legal, and thus, Simon being prohibited from engaging in an ostensibly lawful activity requires more careful consideration on issues of proportionality.
Edited part 5.pdf
It should be agreed with my barrister statement as when dealing with this case I was addressing the applicant case to prove that I had not been involved in organizing illegal raves, as this is what the application against him was.
The case was proven that Simon had acted in an in an anti-social manner, yet not one police officer who stood up to give evidence said Simon was rude to them or acted in an anti-social manner to them, also all witness statements have not given an ID of any person on the dates that are within the ASBO application. but if law states such facts how this can be correct.
The case against Simon was that he had organized illegal raves, and this should have not been proven as trespass is present and all location refer to in private air.
The word rave cannot be used, unless tress pass or money laundering is present when on private land, governed within the constraints of the United Kingdom Laws.
An abatement Notice should have been severed as all dates contained within the ASBO application, are of a fixed private air of residence.
Under Section 80 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 The Local authority Council are able to serve an Abatement Notice. A noise abatement notice requires that the noise reduces or stops by prohibiting its occurrence or recurrence. It can also require a person to carry out works and/or take other steps to stop the noise nuisance, such as seizing the noise-making equipment. Breaches of the notice can incur a fine of up to £5,000. An abatement notice cannot always be served following an initial visit by an officer. Depending on the type of noise nuisance it may take several weeks; any occupiers will be advised by the officer dealing with their case of expected timeframes to resolve the problem. Below is a copy of the form that should have been served on any premises.
Statements made by police officers are allegation made by police of criminal activities such as section 5, 4, 4a, drugs, robbery, to which Mr Cordell was never arrested on the date's within the ASBO application, nor has he been charged, neither has any member of the public put him or given an ID of Mr Cordell in a police witness statement or has any civil matters been brought before the courts, in regards to himself causing anti-social behaviour,
Convection at trial in a court room that is citing in its civil manner, should not be able to deal with a case as if it were a criminal case such as reference to criminal proceedings, this is un-justified in 2016,
MR Simon Cordell feels as if he is now left with not understanding, with what has been proven against him and what he needs to prove for his appeal. As the conditions he is prohibited from doing is all for illegal raves and illegal raves were not proven.
It is unjustified also that MR Simon Cordell's name has been slandered in the metropolitan police website, stating that he was given an ASBO for organizing illegal raves, when the case for the ASBO was not proven for organizing illegal raves.
Mr Simon Cordell understands that it was proven, that he had acted in an Anti-social manner, to which if justice profiles, he intends to prove his innocence at his appeal on the 22nd February 2016.
Mr Simon Cordell's address was put into the metropolitan police website stating that illegality had been proven in the case of illegal raves, which the prosecution rests their case upon. It has also been stated that Mr Cordell is well known for organizing illegal raves in Enfield and across London, to which he has never been arrested for any think of that nature or been found guilty off.
http:/Axmtentmstpohce.uk/News/Man-given-a-five-yearASBO/1400033211719/1257246745756
This has led him to having his life turned upside down. He has had his name put into all the local newspapers, stating that he has been found guilty for illegal raves when the judge clearly stated that no illegality had been proved.

This has led Mr Simon Cordell health, to being affected in a negative manner. He was already ill before this case started due to other allegations made by members of the police, and what the police have done over many years, not only to Mr Simon Cordell but his whole family, there has been many complaints put into the police, due to the wav they treated and intimidate him and his family over many years, there is only so much a person can take and MR Simon Cordell has taken so much over the past 20 years from the police. He is not coping any longer and he thinks the police wanted this, they knew he had hopes with what he wanted to do with his life and the wav the police could hurt him was by taking his dreams away, of ever doing anything that I had dreamed of doing.
The police have known for years Mr Simon Cordell wanted to do work within his local community within the entertainment field and he started this some years back, He will state that he wanted to better himself and had spoken to the police many times about this as he is stopped by wav of being pulled over by the police, so much and when they ask what he is doing which they always do, I tell them what I want to do and mv plans for mv company, but now I have no chance of getting work within mv local community or making mv company work due to what the police have done as mv company is based on the entertainment business, and this ASBQ is the only wav the police knew they could stop me.
The respondent states they took significant effort that the conditions set out in this ASBQ would not have an effect of any legitimate business activities that I wished to undertake and would in no way would be inhibited by this order. That I could apply for a licence if needed and this order would have no effect on any legitimate business activities I wished to undertake.
Mv mother has tested this by way of making calls to local authorities within the UK to ask if an ASBQ under the conditions I am bound to would have an effect of a person applying to local authorities within the UK for a Alcohol and entertainment licences for an event and there reply to this was yes it would have effect on you obtaining any Alcohol and entertainment licences for any event due to the process that is taken when someone applies for any Alcohol and entertainment licences this would include applying for

- Personal licence.
- Premises licence.
- Club premises certificate.
- Temporary event notice.
- Minor variations.

So, this order will have a large effect on the business I have been setting up for years which the police are fully aware off. Also, there was not any impact assessment done to how this would affect mv normal everyday life.
Simon will state that he was not in attendance to any organised illegal rave, on any of the said dates in question, that is of any incidents that are contained within the applicants Bundle, nor was he an organiser to any event on such dates; He will also induce his statement of facts, contained within this document that is in regards to the skeleton Argument for the respondent.

Mr Simon Cordell will state.
From since Simon Cordell was young, he has worked hard to achieve in becoming an entrepreneur, who just wanted to better himself. He states it has taken him many years to save and buy what was needed so that he could start his company. He had to start with the help of his family and help of many others to.
By 2010 he had started to put things in place to achieve his goals he felt that he needed to start the next steps to precede forward and started plans to build a website.
He ordered his domain name http://toosmooth.co.uk on the 22/07/2010. Him and his mother was going to try and build the website, but money was an issue, in building the type of website that was needed and wanted, as this would have cost around £40,000 and funds were low, the website took much longer than anticipated when planning to build, part of the reasons was due to Mr Simon Cordell's mothers health and also partly because of the coding behind the website, as it was inclusive of 4 databases that was needed for the operations of the companies objectives. By 2012 the website was coming along and two other domains was purchased; http://toosmoothentertainment.co.uk and http://toosmoothentertainment.com 22/05/2012, Too Smooth had started looking ahead to the summer of 2013 to start bridging out with contacts and doing some unpaid work for the local community, to get the company name known as a company to be trusted in the working publics domain, in turn help my local community and achieving some of the goals set. It was planned to order the company name just before the work started in 2013.

But this could not happen as the police arrested me on another accusation I was charge and this case lasted over a year, before Mr Simon Cordell was found not guilty by a judge, this was before the trial representing the ASBO application had started. One of the main problems was and still is, that had to be addressed was due to errors on Simon's PNC record. He was remanded to prison for 2 days, until an application was put in for bail. His bail conditions for this case were.
The prosecution's reason for opposing bail was:
Was the possibility of Commit further offences whilst on bail conditions, due to Failure to surrender being present on Simon Cordell's criminal recorded and, on the police, national computer (PNC)
Judge's decision

Due to the accused charge errors were noticed, the errors noticed are contained within Simon Cordell's Criminal recorded, this information is held on the police national computer, such as the case of Failure to surrender, which was held at City and London Court on the 03/03/2008, this was also meant to have been taken off all records, inclusive of the PNC, many years before this case in question had started, as it was noted to be in error in 2009, requests with proof that this needed to be removed was handed to the relevant departments and it was agreed that it would be removed as it was there in error. Mr Simon Cordell has never failed to surrender, so himself and his mother, contacted the court and asked for them to send the memorandum of conviction from the court, which Miss Cordell Simon's Mother paid the fee of £5.00 to the court and they sent her it via email. Please see memorandum of conviction, as this was dismissed by the court. Yet on his PNC record, it has been marked that Simon Cordell has put a plea of guilty in on the 25/01/2008, this is in error and is not true as this case was dismissed by the court, "how can mistakes, be made like this and then not corrected when attention is made to it."

Edited part 5.pdf
Simon Cordell and his mother also noticed other errors that did not seem to be right with Enfield Magistrate's Court Cases, so again they contacted the court via email; they had to contact Highbury Corner Magistrate's Court, as now this is the main court within the area that they live in and asked for the records to be checked.
Included were all of the Enfield Magistrate's Court cases contained within the PNC to be checked, which did take some time for the people at the court to overview the records. The records at this time was still held at Enfield Magistrate's Court but have since been moved now to Highbury Corner Magistrate's Court, once they were ready the court was going to send them by method of post but my Simon Cordell and his mother asked if they could go and pick them up which they was told yes that it would be fine to do so.
Mr Simon Cordell's mother attended alone to Enfield Magistrate's Court she spoke to a lady and the lady was very confused as there were a list of records that were not in the registry, The lady even showed Simon's Mother miss Cordell one of the books that records are kept in. Miss Cordell asked could they have been lost by the court or removed in such terms audited, the lady was sure they could not have been lost or removed or audited, as the books are bound and you would see if pages had been taken out or edited.
The lady gave Mr Simon Cordell's mother a copy of the records which had been checked, which 5 had a star before them, list here is the ones that were not in the court's registry and the words not in registry.
Simon and his mother have tried to get these corrected and removed from his PNC record but is still having a great deal of trouble in doing so.
Miss Cordell asked for a printed headed letter from Magistrate's Court, by way of asking my acting solicitors to write the correspondence, showing that they had checked Simon's records in turn showing evidence that there was some that was on the PNC in error that was not listed in the registry. This was asked because the printout provided by the courts was not accepted by the DJ to be good enough to prove validation of the article of facts to be a true statement, but the printout clearly shows it comes from a court email address. Mr Simon Cordell and his mother has sent many emails, made many phone calls and also had been down to Highbury Corner Magistrate's Court, trying to get a headed letter to confirm that his records were checked and proven to be incorrect, as within the ASBO application they are using his PNC record.
Miss Cordell has been dealing with a lady called Flo, who said she will contact Enfield Magistrate's Court, to see about getting the letter written, as they were the ones that checked the records. This has gone on for some time now, without any letter being written, in the end Miss Cordell Simon's mother went back down to Enfield Magistrate's Court and spoke to Benedicta Objidja, who dealt with the records being checked, she could not understand why Miss Cordell was being told that the letter had to be done by Enfield Magistrate's Court. as they no longer do this sort of work, it is all done at Highbury Corner Magistrate's Court, so after leaving she went back down to Highbury Corner Magistrate's Court, where she spoke to John Forster, she explained what was going on and this now has been going on for way over a year, she was trying to get the records her sons PNC corrected, with a great deal of issues. What was needed and said after she just come from Enfield Magistrate's Court from speaking to Benedicta Objidja inclusive of what she had just been explained, was that any letter would need to be done by this court, which he agreed, he took some details and checked there emails and said they had Mr Simon Cordell's & miss Cordell's Simon's mother emails on their system. He then took a copy of the paper work she had and said he would talk to Benedicta Objidja, but was also confused at how many records was in error, he said to her that if they are not in the court records then the cases was never in court and asked who she had spoken to, who was working in the police station. He could not understand why this had not been corrected; Errors like this should never happen on my sons PNC record. He also stated he would put his notes into a legal advisor to get a letter written.

12/01/2013 = this case was only added as a reference as to the limitation Act 1980. Which states a case must be applied 6 months prior from the date of the incident in question, to which it was not. Please read Mr Simon Cordell's last statement dated the 24/02.2015. He was in fact taken to The Royal London Hospital, after being attacked on this day. (EXHIBIT)

No members of the public mention Mr Simon Cordell as a person acting in an anti-social manner on this date, as well as police officer statement's inclusive within the Applicants bundle.

Due to Mr Simon Cordell establishing his company he states he was meeting a lot of people in times of need, a lot of the people he was meeting are and was homeless, as he was looking at avenues to be able to help people.

There are no CAD's otherwise known as incident numbers in regard to this date contained within the applicants ASBO application.

07/04/2013 = In Steve Elsmore Statement dated 11/08/2014

07/04/2013 = Please read Mr Simon Cordell's last statement dated the 24/02.2015. He States He did not attended any premises on this date to rave, neither was he involved in the organization of any illegal rave, nor did he supplied equipment on said date.

Mr Simon Cordell will State that he was not rude to police, but he did feel like he could not even go out for the day with some of his friends, without getting stopped and searched by members of the police.

It is also noted that the caller was very clear that they saw a flat screen TV being put into Mr Cordell's van, which is confusing to why when the police searched the van they found no TV, but did in fact find two of his off road motor bikes, which is not included in Steve Elsmore statement. The police did checks on Mr Simon Cordell's Off Road Motor Bikes but this is also not stated, but should show up on the seizer notice, as Mr Simon Cordell did asked the police office to take careful note of the two of road motor bikes, as due to the high value of them.

Mr Cordell Will state that he did get a bit upset when the police said they were going to seize his van, as he did have insurance in place to be able to drive the van in question, but there was an error on the MID database. Miss Cordell had been trying to help her son resolve the issue concerning his insurance policy not showing on the mid data base alongside with members of their local police force and his insurance company KGM too, together they had tried to work out why Mr Simon Cordell was showing as uninsured. There was information noted as intelligence on the police National Computer stating this I had asked the police to check on their systems due to this, but they would not they just wanted to seize Mr Simon Cordell's van without checking, so he knew he was being wrongfully accused at this point, as he had done nothing wrong and he did have insurance to be driving and had paid a lot of money for his insurance. He states he did not get upset in the manner that the police have said he did and that he does not mean to come across as rude to police. In this case he was just trying to explain the error on the system.

In addition, the prosecution offered no evidence in respect of the charges that were brought even though they were reliant on police witnesses. Mr Simon Cordell had been wrongfully arrested for not having insurance when he was insured to drive. He also did not cause any Anti-Social Behaviour on this date in question.

There are no CAD's for this date, but yet they was meant to be, a CAD referring to the pacific details that should be relating to a person stating, that they believed a burglary was in progress and of the 999 caller stating that they had seen a person who was putting a flat screen TV into Mr Simon Cordell's van.

Edited part 5.pdf

The error on the MID database would also cause Mr Simon Cordell a great deal of problems over the years to come. Within 11 months he had his vehicles seized 9 times, this was always when his insurance company was closed, that being on a day such as Sunday when the insurance companies are closed, he would also be pulled over when it was opened, in one case a police officer lied to his insurance company causing much problems, this has known been proven to be true that a police officer did in fact lie under oath to a Jude at the magistrates court.

Mr Simon Cordell will state he has always been pulled over by police while driving any vehicle and will (supply exhibit from 2004 of letter to the police) of him stating that he is in fear of the police, for continues police harassment, especially a great deal within the past few years, He will also state that sometimes the police would check his insurance documents, as he always carried them with him due to the errors, so that he could explain to the police the error on the MID and asked them to look at the police system to help aid in times when he was being pulled over by members of the police, So that he would always have information available for police about this issue, A far percentage of the police that did in fact pull Mr Simon Cordell over at road side, did check this information and let him go without a problem. But some police just did not care and seized his vehicles, which I then had to pay the costs to get them out of the police compound each time. Chariton and Perivale know of Mr Simon Cordell by the end of that year and each time he states that they would say not again. He states that he had tried everything to get this error corrected and had called everyone about this issue and the insurance company, he had tried to work out what was wrong, no one seemed to be able to work it out, including the police. Mr Simon Cordell states in Nov 2013. He was once again paying to take his vehicle out of the vehicle compound when one of the compound staff said this is just not correct, that you have to keep paying to take your vehicles out of the compound and that this was not right, when a person has that of a valid insurance policy in place, The gentleman working for the compound started to look at Mr Simon Cordell's documents and the database printout Mr Simon Cordell had from his insurance company, all of a sudden the gentlemen noticed something strange, he asked Mr Simon Cordell to take a look at this, he pointed at the paperwork in front of them both and said I wonder if this is what is causing the problem, there was a space within Mr Simon Cordell's vehicle registry number, so it was printed as CX52 JRZ and not CX52JRZ as soon as Mr Simon Cordell got back home from the compound, he called his insurance broker and explained to them what had just happened at the car compound and asked them to check the point of issue, to see if this is what was causing the error. It took them some time, but it seems it was due to my insurance being trade and the MID allowing the space to be put in and it showed a correct upload to the MID database that caused this problem.

But Mr Simon Cordell's problems just did not stop there. He did not get summons from the court in respect of the ongoing court proceedings and was found guilty, in his absinth, for no insurance. This was due to not knowing he had a court date, this became another problem and he got a ban due to points this was inclusive a fine, email upon email was being sent to the courts but case Simon and his mother was have problems getting the issues of cause rectified and felt that as if of they were not getting dealt with correctly, nearly all of Mr Simon Cordell's insurance that was paid for during the period of 2014 to 2015, he could not drive due to the errors.

In reference to the case were the police office had lied to Mr Simon Cordell's insurance company, he had been trying to get a copy of the tape(s), of when the police office had been speaking to KGM my insurance company at the time of Mr Simon Cordell, being pulled over at road side, from the police officer(s) in charge of the case, themselves with subject access requests, to which they were not dealing with, so the case was called to court for trial and the police officer had lied to the judge, Mr Simon Cordell was again found guilty, and banned from driving and fined, he submitted an appeal and the judge accepted it so now the ban was not in force until the appeal date. The judge also helped by explaining that if Mr Simon Cordell's insurance company did not hand over the data that he had been seeking to trying to get hold of by the date and time of the appeal, that he could apply to the crown court to summons the insurance company KGM to court. Mr Simon Cordell and his mother in fact did get the information before the appeal date and the recording of what the police officer said to my insurance at roadside. Mr Simon Cordell also had to get a barrister for the appeal date. Again, the police officer lied in court, my barrister let him, then my barrister played a little from the recording and stopped it and asked the police officer is that you. Which he replied yes, the recording was restarted which showed the police officer had lied, I won my appeal, there is a complaint that has been put in which is still being dealt with about that case. But it took Mr Simon Cordell and his mother until 2015 to clear his name for the reasons of no insurance, so to be able to clear all the bans and points of his driving license, after himself and his mother sending hundreds of emails,

Edited part 5.pdf

- = Mr Simon Cordell was looking for venues to set up an illegal rave

21. = Mr Simon Cordell will state that he did not attended any premises on this date to rave neither was he involved in the organization of any illegal raves, nor did he supply equipment. This case was only added as a reference as the limitation Act 1980 which states that a case must be applied 6 months from the date of the incident, to which it was not. Please read my last statement dated the 24/02.2015.

It is alleged that Mr Simon Cordell was looking for venues in which illegal raves could be held, on 24th May 2013. Mr Simon Cordell will dispute this. He will state that he had been contacted by a friend called Joshua, who was living at 204 High Street Ponders End EN3 4EZ, also known as the Old Police Station at Ponders End, as he and some others were homeless, unless this was possible.

As Mr Simon Cordell was driving towards 204 High Street, he drove his car down the alleyway so that he could park the vehicle he was in, He parked between two well-known land marks, Which is where many people who do live in an around the surrounding areas, would be able to remember as the old ponders End police station and Kinder Garden Centre. He states he knows the area very well as this is where he has lived all of his life, so he knew about the car park at the back of the two well-known landmarks, as he states you cannot park on the highroad, because of the double yellow lines or other restrictions. He had parked there before; He states he believes and knows that the police saw his car as he began to take a right turn to be able to drive down to where he intended to stop. He knew the police had followed him, as he had seen them pay attention to himself as he had driven past. He does clearly remember that of himself lock his vehicle as the police approached him and now was standing by his side. He states that this is normal for him and over the years of his life he has become use to the police approaching him for numerous accusations, so that has also made him used to their presents, Mr Simon Cordell states that that this is so normal for him, so he got ready for the police procedures, as they said they wanted to search him and his car because the police believed that the car he was driving smelt strongly of cannabis, Mr Simon Cordell sates that he would always consented to this. He is sure of his statements of facts and that the police cannot dispute this, that of the police officers that had approached him and who had stopped him as he had just got out of my car, or how would they have said his car smelt strongly of cannabis, which is the reason that the police officers gave him the conditions of search and their consent form due to a search of himself and that of his vehicle that he was driving.

Mr Simon Cordell will state that he had not done anything wrong and nothing was found on his person or in his car.
Mr Simon Cordell will dispute making any comments about being able to attract people to illegal raves and illegal 3-day events, what reason would he have had to say this.
Mr Simon Cordell will state to the applicant that he was a visitor to the location of interest, due to a call from a friend who asked if Mr Simon Cordell could loan him some money for food. He will also include that he did not cause any Anti-Social Behaviour on the 24th May 2013.
Mr Simon Cordell does not know what Joshua said to the police, as he was never with Joshua. Mr Simon Cordell does not know why Joshua would have said to the police that he was his lawyer, or if Joshua said this at all to police. Mr Simon Cordell has tried to get hold of Joshua to make a statement for this case, but due to him being homeless, it has been very hard. As far as he is aware the building was being occupied by people to live in, he states he does not know anything Joshua said to police about know any think about a rave. Mr Simon Cordell did not manage to visit him on this day.

There are no cads for this date.

- = was involved in the organization of and / or supplied equipment for and / or attended an illegal rave at unit 5, St George's Industrial Estate, Whit Heart Lane, N17.

25/05/2014 = Mr Simon Cordell will state that he did not attended any premises on this date to rave neither was I involved in the organization of any raves, nor did he supply equipment for an illegal rave at unit 5, St George's Industrial Estate, Whit Heart Lane, N17.
In respect of Mr Simon Cordell presence at Unit 5 St George's Industrial Estate, White Hart Lane on 25th May 2014. He attended a commercial building that the occupiers were residing in, having displayed s144 LASPO notices and in turn treating the premises as their home. Nothing was said to Mr Simon Cordell about a rave by the occupiers. He will state that he was visiting friends and they were just sitting and chatting while having a laugh. He remembers taking about ways to better life for him and his friends as well as others.
There was no music being played or about to be set up. He was not involved in the organization of an illegal rave of any sort. That he did drive there in his van VRM CX52JRZ, and he does accept that he had 2 speaker boxes in the van; however, he did not have a full sound system and the speakers did not have any drivers in them. So he and others could not have used the speaker box's to play sound, he did ask the police to note this down, and that he was only using the van as storage, this is why the police who were in attendance allowed him to leave, while talking to the current occupiers of the premises.
I did not on the date in question have what would constitute as a full sound system like what is now being pursued by the applicant as I know that it would have been seized by the police, I was not rude to the police, I allowed my van to be searched by members of the police and nothing was seized, and I went home I did not cause any anti-social behaviour on the 25th May 2014.
Since this ASBO application was served on Mr Simon Cordell, he has moved the speakers out of his van and they are still in the (open air), at his mother's address and are in the back garden still to date, as if in the first day that of when he had taken them out of his van, with no drivers in them. Mr Simon Cordell states yes at the time it would have been better to keep them in his van due to the weather, but when he does intend to go for a drive that he does not feel safe any longer travelling with any sound equipment due to the ongoing ASBO application.
It is also noted that on page (98 of the main applicants bundle) that the report was created on the 26/05/2014 for criminal damage, the event date, is noted at: 25/05/2014, but was last updated on the 19/06/2014 why would there be a need to update this report, it was proven I did nothing on the CCTV.
Since this ASBO was served a lot of research has been done in regard to the allegations contained within the applicant's case and it seems it is a well-known fact by police that the accused illegal raves in question are known to be setup on social media. And when doing a simple search at company house a director's name other than the name Simon Cordell is present for the company name in question and no contact seems to have been made by police or local authority in regards to this issue even low a letter has been provided to the applicant by the true director of Every Decibel Matters, this letter is contained within the applicants bundle. Also, the fact that no noise abrasion order severed by any local governing authority has been shown as well as proof of trespass to be able to class the dates contained within the ASBO application as such of a name as an illegal rave. Also, it seems there was an event called

Mr Simon Cordell will state that he has no affiliation to illegal raves on the dates in question or otherwise.

This is not right because ATT Location and INC Location as well as caller location are blocked out on most cads making it impossible to see what other errors or incorrect truths are being made.

CAD 7th June 1012 at 01:53 on 7th June 14,
ESSO STN pages 143 to 146.
FIRST PART ABOVE

Around 2:00am on the 8th Mr Simon Cordell states he was just arriving at progress way and was said to have been seen by police
On page 32 A/Insp Hamill 01566 states at 0200hrs on Sunday 8th June that he did in fact see Mr Simon Cordell for the first time, on the 3rd line from the last sentence.
CAD 1047 Name PC239YE Shinnick (pages 174 to 178) at 1;59 on 7th June 14, was a 999-call location, which was a police officer calling the Enfield Patrol Site, Call name is PC Shinnick, please allow a officer to call on duty.
Also A/ PS Charles Miles 724ye (page 31) explains that this date was the 7thth June 2014, Any person can tell by the cad 1047, to which A/Inspector Hamill 201566 states he had created, at the first point of contact, as he dispatched officers to the location of the incident, from this information provided we can tell that this was in fact the 8th June 2014 at 1:59, A/Insp Hamill then states, that the officers that he had sent, had reported back that Mr Simon Cordell and Tyrone Benjamin were present, and goes on to state that officers were not allowed access into the occupied building, due to the demand during the shift and low policing numbers, but the cad incident number 1047 07th June 14 pages 174 to 184, states them officers in attendance who could not gain entry, somehow managed to see Mr Simon Cordell and his brother Tyrone Benjamin earlier in the day, to which would be impossible as only Mr Simon Cordell had arrived to visit a friend for the first time at the location and the matter of fact of Tyron Benjamin being in hospital.

POINTS PROVED

- A/Insp Hamill 01566 states at 0200hrs on Sunday the 8th June 2014 and Mr Simon Cordell did in fact arrive at this time.
- A/Insp Hamill 01566 Could not be sure of the fact of the person that he is stating was at the gate did in fact bring Mr Simon Cordell back to the gate, he does not state that she or he came back with Mr Cordell, who would have told A/ Insp Hamill that Mr Simon Cordell was in fact the person she had gone to collect and asked to assist in speaking to police as the event organiser, neither did he take any name(s) or personal details of the gate assistances. He also states that Mr Simon Cordell would not in fact speak to him, so if this was true then why would Mr Simon Cordell have approached him to speak to him as the event organiser and not speak, as for fact he was just arriving.
- No police officers did in fact see Mr Simon Cordell, on the 6th 7th Jun 14
- as the first time Mr Cordell see the police was around 2:00am Sunday the 8th Jun 2014.
- Police would have added cad files already by date that was miss any Intel relating to Mr Simon Cordell's were about on the 8th Jun 14 or first point of contact, in relation to progress way this is also inclusive of witness statements of any intelligence relating to Progress Way Cad 1012 7th June at 01:53 on 7th June 14. Pages 143 to 146.

- Mr Simon Cordell's Brother could not have been present as for he was in hospital.
- Mr Simon Cordell did not talk to any police or council as he felt intimidated.
- Mr Cordell was not given any noise abating order from the local council as stated on page 34 by A/Insp Hamill 01566.

(On page 33) A Insp Hamill 201566 states that he see Mr Simon Cordell, at the gates but believed that Mr Simon Cordell was coming from inside the premises, due to the large number of people at the location and due to other reasons and believes of the inspectors own, Mr Simon Cordell states that he remembers clearly, that of the police approaching him, as he was walking towards the gates, when he was arriving from the Great Cambridge road, and that of the police asking him questions in regards to illegal raves. A Inspector Hamill states that he ask Mr Simon Cordell his name and that he gave him a reply, such as to the answer of "yes" verbally and then (A) Inspector Hamill states that he asked Mr Cordell the same question again but Mr Cordell would not reply, (chapter one of A Inspector Hamill statement page 33 5th line down;) he then states the 3rd time when Mr Simon Cordell was asked again, but this time by the council officers with inspector Hamill present his name, that he would not reply again, Mr Simon Cordell will state that he did not speak to anybody, he just listened to what was being said to him and complied when he was asked to walk back to where he had just parked his vehicle. The police officer is incorrect in saying that MR Cordell was the person that the gate assistant went and collected, as the event organiser, as Mr Simon Cordell was in fact approaching the occupied building and was visiting his friend. He did state this in his first statement dated (00/00/2015.) Mr Simon Cordell will State that, as he was approaching the ally way were tops tiles is before the entrance gate for progress way as stated by A/Insp Hamill 201566 on (page 33 2nd lines up from the last sentence.) Simon remembers it being dark and a lot of people being present in the ally way. Mr Simon Cordell will state that he saw, who he now knows to be A/ Insp Hamill for the first time, at around 2:00 am on the 8th June 2014 as he was arriving and had not seen a police officer on the date in question, till that point of time, when he had seen A Inspector Hamill talking too other people at the gate than himself as he was approaching, he does remember the police trying to speak to him and that he felt that the police was accusing him of being an organiser, to which he was not, so he choose not to say any think, without a solicitor being present. The Police and council let Mr Cordell go and he walked across the road to the petrol station, while waiting for his friend to turn up, which he had to give a set of keys back too.

- Police Officer Caller states:

Rave at location organizers Tyrone Benjamin and Simon Cordell have attended earlier there are about 200 people at the location all well natured and there is sufficient fire and safety equipment. Inspector Hamill made aware. Inspector Hamill states that he sees me coming out of the gates page 33, to which he Is mistaken as I was just arriving.

- Point 1:

Tyrone could not have been present due to his injures; he was involved in an ATR on his moped dated the 10th April 2014. He was air lifted to hospital. He had life changing injuries due to the accident.

- Point 2:

On the date of the 7th Mr Simon Cordell did not attended the premises of Progress Way and did do so on the 8th June 2014 but never went in, due to meeting police officers and people in attendance with the police, who Mr Simon Cordell now knows to be council officers, who he had meet as the police were talking to the occupiers of the premises at the front gates, as Mr Simon Cordell approached the occupied building as stated in witness statements.

- Point 3:

Edited part 5.pdf

The police believed that Mr Simon Cordell came from inside the land, CAD 1047 page 174 to 179 notes a call made by a police officer about Mr Simon Cordell and Tyrone being in attendance and seen earlier when cad 1047 clearly states that this the police first point of contact and intelligence about the situation, so how can this be possible as for fact Mr Simon Cordell was first seen when he was arriving to meet a friend.

- Point 4

CAD 1047 states 01:59 07th June 2014 page 174 to 179 clearly states that police were not given entry to the premises also noted on (page 33) in police statements.

- Point 5

CAD 1047 state at 01:59 a call was made and states Police attended on the 7th so this would have been before Mr Cordell attended too progress way to give his friend his keys as he left them at Mr Cordell's flat beforehand and needed them back, this is why Mr Simon Cordell's friend had called him.

- Point 6

Police statements state (page 32) A / Inspector Hamill 201566 dated 06/08/2014 leading on to the 7th and the 8th of June 2014 was on duty early hours of the 6th going on to the 7th June 2014 and attended progress way. He was back on duty the 7th June 2014 and again attended at around 200 hours with two environment officers he believes he spoke to some body and asked them for an organizer then he Mr Simon Cordell and accused him of being an organiser to which A Insp Hamill admits that Mr Simon Cordell would not speak to any officers, so if Mr Cordell had come to speak to him because somebody had informed him that a police officer wanted to speak to him as in pretence as if he was the organizer then Mr Simon Cordell would have been sure to have spoken to him or it would be logical that he would have never approached him in the beginning, Mr Simon Cordell will explain that police are mistaken to take Mr Cordell as to of being the person to which someone had gone to get or he would have come back with that person.

In all the statements it seems the police have their days mixed up they say they me and Tyrone was seen by officers but have never given a name of an officer who was meant to have seen us. But the fact is they could not have seen Mr Cordell and Tyrone walking into the building as they were not there, and neither was Tyrone. It was even said at the trial by the applicant that it was not the 7th but early hours of the 8th which was the case I went on the 08th to give my friend his keys as he called me.)

Point 7

The party was advertised on face book, (Evidence) provided that the party started on the 6th June 2014 and this is also proved in (CAD 10967 at 23:35 on 07th June 2014. p250 to 254 on page 252 (Caller states that this happened last night)

Edited part 5.pdf

- At no point have I committed or been rightfully arrested and charged for an offence to one of a similar nature presented within this ASBO application.

The PNC holds information in regard to:

Arrests:

Point 1 about Arrests:

Mr Simon Cordell will state that he does not hold or organize illegal raves and did not on the dates in question. There is no reason; he will also state that he should not be accused of doing so on dates in question in this ASBO application.

Mr Simon Cordell will state that he has been wrongfully arrested at (CARPET RIGHT) Great Cambridge Road dated 19th Jul 2014 and detained for a possible breach of the peace, that Police have stated ('believed might happen') which at no point was Mr Simon Cordell involved in and that he did not commit any form of Anti-Social Behaviour, on the 19 July 2014. He has never been charged and that he was just detained and released with no option of an interview.

A police office Inspector Hill Moore states ("he believed, that by arresting me that no further raves would happen.)

Mr Simon Cordell Will State that he was not involved in the hiring of equipment or organization of any said rave, neither was he on the freehold of the land nor did he attending a rave as he is being accused of.

CAD Incident number 10635 19th Jul 14 pages 291 to 301 on page 294 clearly states that 20 white males and females attended the occupied premises, it also states all the address of the people police officers spoke to on the land contained by police within the building and outer surrounding gates of carpet right.

- Case Progression Point 1 about case progression:

M Simon Cordell will also state that he did not hold or organize illegal raves and that he is of Mix Race British Nationality, so there would be no truth in information leading to case progression held on the police national computer re Mr Simon Cordell on the dates in question.

- Previous convictions

Point 1 about previous convections:

Mr Simon Cordell also reverses his rights of the rehabilitation Act and state time spent is of all convictions on his criminal recorded. And that he is sure of the fact that of being that he does not have any previous conventions, nor has he been charged with any similar natured offences with relevance to an ASBO application.

There are errors on his PNC record which he has been trying to rectify and there for does not agree with any records of his criminal record

- Vehicle ownership

Point 1 about Vehicle ownership:
Mr Simon Cordell inserts and instates his Rights of the Freedom of Movement. As expressed in article 13 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, it asserts that:
A citizen of a state in which that Citizen is present has the liberty to travel, reside in, and/or work in any part of the state where one pleases within the limits of respect for the liberty and rights of others. At no point has Mr Simon Cordell used his vehicles to organize a rave or attended an illegal rave knowingly. (Mr Simon Cordell challenges the hearsay statements compiled by Steve Elesmore)
"His statement aims to show supporting evidence of the course of behaviour of Mr Simon Cordell acting in an Anti-Social Manner).
Steve Elesmore: Provides statements of hearsay obtained by police and witness, been witnessed first-hand by officers, been witness by independent witness. Please see a copy of the court transcripts as listed below.

Counsel argues that officer's statement is designed to cause on evidence reaction of this of no value and speculatory in nature.
DJ
How many calls from public did police receive?
Witness
In excess of 15 calls - how many to the same venue and not other address.
Doe's does not know the number of callers that are in relation to each of these occasions.
On page 15 - Allegations re: Millmarsh Lane, evidence from officer not first-hand - relied on cads and another Intel.

DJ
Were did you get such info officer.
Witness

Counsel
Why did officer no and rely on Pc Kings Statements later than on the Crimit's reported.

Officer no and involved in taking info from Pc King.
(Confesses he did it.)
He did not notice the discrepancy regarding official statements.
Have heard of Every Decibel Matters - They were advertising and I believe the D knows a member of the above company.
No evidence D is involved in running there operations.
No attempt has been made to speak to directors of company.
No reason to why you didn't /contact the company.
I think from memory have met D once @ Edmonton police station.
(At Page 16 1st paragraph - not consistent to fact that he met him on the 7/6/2014)
All notes with cad number were listed from reports not officers' own words - same applies from Cads that had no input.
Has not made attempts to contact owners of premises.
Officers unable to assist courts in relation to why statements were not signed on notebooks profiles.
Another example of doings put in statements to blacken Mr Cordell's evidence in statement @ point 12, No convictions that of class A drugs unlike what's written in Statements - another example of untrue cut and past.
DJ
Ill ignore because no convections of class A drugs or supplying is present on the criminal record.
Counsel
You cannot assist with witness reliability of info contained, can you?
Can Intel be wrongfully inaccurate? No Officer
On that particular re post, it appears to be right.
I did not speak to Parcell he is force @ seven boroughs.
I believe he was not included in the email, because Intel (unreadable text) Email sent to LDE only.
Searched (unreadable text) for info on Cordell's convections.
Moving on to statement on Page 30
Does PO investigating unit have more info than it is letting on?
Officer
No
Are you aware that Miss Cordell has spoken to other officers Re: Rave?
This suggests that you do not want DS Tanner to be examined on these proceedings because she has information Re knowledge of raves and them not being connected to W/D.
Spoke to Pc Tanner but not written what - spoke to (unreadable text) this year You have no recorded that you emailed her but then spoken to her.
Emails have been deleted and no copies keep on record.
Mr Simon Cordell challenges all the witness statements by all officers.
Mr Simon Cordell challenges all the witness statements by all independent witness.

Edited part 5.pdf
At no point Cad relating to the independent witness statements provide any information relating to offences or civil matters that should lead to an ASBO application that, Mr Simon Cordell should be convicted off as he is innocent in regards to organizing Illegal Raves or acting in a Manner likely to Cause Alarm Harm or Distress."
Mr Simon Cordell requires each witness to be called individually to give evidence at court.
Mr Simon Cordell will challenge the statements made by Steve Elesmore "Simon Cordell Is known to the police to have 28 convections a copy is available of his criminal record"
Mr Cordell feels that this is misleading due to the errors in his criminal record as police are aware. Evidence will be provided as proof of my statement.
Mr Simon Cordell feels that the data from the PNC representing his Criminal Recorded is information not true to its facts and is misleading. Mr Simon Cordell has been checking with the courts and challenged the validity of the PNC record and has been going throw the process of have 5 cases rectified due to critical errors that have been added in error that have had a major effect on my life even in the ASBO application being put against him self.
BOOK 6
ILLEGAL RAVES:
"Deaths at raves: the most resent was young 15-year-old male who died at a rave at Croydon"
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he is deeply concerned as well as upset for any life lost and he is heartfelt for all effected by this tragedy of a young life lost.
Mr Cordell would like it noted that he was on curfew and had been since June 2013 for a case he has already proved his innocents in.

In regard to the statement below Mr Simon Cordell feel that this is Slander of character and the two statements below should not be justified as (1) he is not a drug pusher or user. (2) he was on curfew and had been since June 2013 and have not done any think wrong to be punished so.
Mr Simon Cordell feels that the statement, (Simon Cordell is free to continue to organize such events, is un-justified.)
"Raves are known for drugs."
"Please take note Mr Simon Cordell states he has nothing to do with drugs, but he has used cannabis for personal use." (It was also said in the court transcripts that this was in error.)
"This type of illegal event cannot be tolerated, and action must be taken to disrupt these events, and if a court order is not made then Simon Cordell is free to continue to organize such events."
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he feels that this is also Slander of his name and darkens his character and is not true as he was on curfew when Andrew Rio sadly passed away and had been since June 2013. Mr Simon Cordell did not put on events on the days in question and does not see how this has any reference towards an Anti-Social order being put towards himself self as he did not act in an Anti-Social Manner.
Mr Simon Cordell was wrongly put on curfew for an offence and was found not guilty, at the same time of all the ASBO application and does not have internet at his house address this can be checked with any internet provider and the IP attached to any profiles, his mental health has suffered due to this, as he spent nearly a year on curfew for something he had not done, and just before his curfew was lifted by the court, my Nan became very unwell this had a big effect on him mentality, and he needed some time out, to then be accused of the offence within the application being brought against himself.
In the early June 2014 the family found out that Mr Cordell Nan was terminal ill with cancer, of the liver, spine and ribs. Mr Cordell was spending a great deal of time with his Nan and family, but mentality his health was suffering. So when he was invited out by friends, he took their offers.
Mr Simon Cordell's Nan passed away on the 30/08/2014.
It was just after this The police came to his address, he states at that point of time he felt a bit unstable, at this time due to what was going on with his life and that of his families and the loss of his Nan.

Edited part 5.pdf
Mr Cordell will state that he had put everything that he had gained out of life into the development of his company to take his mind of what was going on around him and because of contentious police harassment that he had locked himself away in his flat. Mr Simon Cordell will state that he had friends around his flat on this day of the 12/09/2014, who were trying to help him, the police knocked on his front door. Mr Simon Cordell will state that he saw the police as he looked into the keyhole of his front door without opening the front door, as he was not expecting any others that day to his home.
I called out to ask them what they wanted as due to the problems he has had with the police over many years.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was worried at why the police had come to his flat. The police stated on that day that they wanted to talk to him, Mr Simon Cordell took caution as to opening the front door, he opened it a little to see what the police wanted to say to him, knowing his friends was watching for his safety, they then forcefully tried to put some think in to his flat without showing any ID, to which Mr Cordell closed the door before the police could do so and then told them that he would not accept anything from them.
The police then spoke to each other as to what to do, then Mr Simon Cordell will then state that he heard, one of the officers say just leave it outside by his door, which they did and then left.
Mr Simon Cordell would not allow anyone to get what had been left out side of the front of his flat front door and called his mother and told her what had happened, he was very unstable at this time due to what happened and his friends were trying to claim him down.
Mr Simon Cordell mother picked up what is now understood to be the ASBO application bundle documents. When she picked them up and read what was inside, she was shocked to see the data that was in the file and took it to the police station and collected a lost and found receipt for it (Exhibit 0000). Till date 08/02/2016 that folder is still in the police property room. Mr Simon Cordell does believe that this is a beach of the data protection act, as what was within the files held people(s) personal data. The files before being taken to the police station were in fact copied by way of being scanned of all files that was in the bundle. A letter of complaint (Exhibit 0000) was handed to the police.
Mr Simon Cordell states he could not be 100% sure of knowing if any documents were missing by the time his mother had picked the documents up. And that he has never been re-served them to date 08/0/2016.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he did not openly admitted to officers that he runs raves and has even bragged about it to the police.
Mr Simon Cordell will challenge this statement not to be true to its article, What Mr Cordell will state is as for a matter of fact, all that he ever talks about when talking to any person, it is of a good natured law obeying positive and productive future, of his life and business.

"Police statement claims that Mr Simon Cordell's car contained three massive nitrous oxide tanks." "The vehicle index MA57 LDY Mr Simon Cordell States; he was driving and was in fact carrying empty CO2 cylinders and did have safety stickers for the carriage of gas cylinders, placed on the boot in clear view for all pubic to see, as this is the regulations when carrying cylinders. Mr Simon Cordell does do so in accordance of the law, known as The International Carnage of Dangerous Goods by road (ADR), implemented by the Carriage Regulations and had broken no laws nor had he cause any Anti-Social Behaviour.
"When queried by police it is said that Mr Simon Cordell had admitted that he had seen the news article about the dangerous effects nitrous oxide has and how the government would probably regulate it."
"Mr Simon Cordell does agree to the statement made about talking about Nitrous oxide and the confiscation being partly about a news article and the government actions toward regulating it, at no time. He will also state that he was not asked if the cylinder's he was carry was in fact nitrous oxide, nor was he asked if they were full, because the answer would have been that he was getting them refilled with co2 for welding."

Mr Simon Cordell will state that he did not pack any sound equipment away, as he did not have any to pack away, as for fact he was driving his car, a car Ford Focus which cannot carry a large Amplified Sound System, plus as stated by witness statement PS King "3 massive nitrous oxide tanks," This would not fit into his car Index MA57 LDY a Ford Sliver Focus"

Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was not involved in the organization of said party and did not have any equipment to pack away"
"Simons Cordell's attitude is that he is a modern-day businessman and the actions of the group had nothing to do with him."
"Mr Simon Cordell does agree that he is and still up and coming am to be a modern-day businessman.

Mr Simon Cordell was in the process of setting up his business. He will state that he had not taken any part in the organizing or the hire of any equipment on Date 10th August 2014."

Mr Simon Cordell will state that this said rave was not set up him. Mr Simon Cordell will state that he has never been charged for the organization of this said rave and believes that if this had been a correct statement that he would have been arrested.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that if this was not his birthday or party, that he was just merely invited due to knowing someone who was living at the premises. Mr Simon Cordell will state that he is not homeless and that he does in fact live in his own council flat. Mr Simon Cordell will state that this at no point did he in fact cause any actions that was likely to cause Alarm Harm or Distress.
"Police officers state that this was connected to another rave on Alma Road."
"Alma Road is a road just of Green Street, to which Mr Simon Cordell will state that he lives, with mostly private housing developed on it, there is a few long-term companies. And a few businesses and that he does not know of any rave or location along alma road that a Rave has ever taken place, or of any place people have lived as he keeps his private life to himself and only in exceptional circumstances over official governing body(s) of relevance towards them issues, that may be of concern contained within their departments. Mr Simon Cordell will state that he has checked face book and applied to Enfield local council to be told no rave has happened on Alma Rd as well, asks please can you supply evidence supporting your claims '' Connected to another rave on Alma RD ''.

Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was not involved in any said rave and has never been to a party on Alma Road.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he does in fact drive down Alma Road a fair amount due to his Nan Once living just off there and living two roads away.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that that he does also travel down Alma Road to get from his flat and his mother's address.
The only event on Alma Road involving the metropolitan police, that Mr Simon Cordell remembers was when he was pulled over on a Thursday, in his car index MA57 LDY which the case has been added to this ASBO application. Mr Simon Cordell will state that at no point was he Anti-Social towards the police that pulled him, or he would have been arrested for a section 5 or of a similar offence and he surely would not have walked away, without even a ticket. He will state that he did in fact shake the police officers' hands as he left.
Thursday 24th July 2014, At around 16.25 hours: Alma Road:
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was driving index MA57LDY as he stated down Alma Road, and this is a road that he travels down regally.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he uses this road to travel between his mother's house and his own flat, as it is one of the only routes of access between both flat and house, and it is also the fastest route to take. Mr Simon Cordell will state that this Nan also lived just off Alma Road before her resent death.
On travelling from his mother's house on Thursday 24th July 2014 from seeing his Nan and mother due to his Nan's illness he was going home to his flat and used Alma Road as a route to travel as he always does do so.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he noticed an unmarked police car, as it was indicating to take a right turn the opposite way from which he was travelling.
The reason he knew this to be an unmarked police car was because he knew the police officer who was driving from seeing him on active duty within the local area.
As he drove past it changed its indication to the way he had been heading, which was a left direction.
The unmarked police car continued to follow him in turn putting on the blue lights in their vehicle. he pulled over to the left had side of the road opposite the BMW repair centre along Alma Road, on the left-hand side of the pavement leading to the back entrance of Durant's park.
A male office got out of the passenger side and approached Mr Simon Cordell driver's door, he un done his car window to a jar asking why he had been pulled over to which the police office replied he was not sure and said his college had instructed him to do so. He then went back to his police car and then reproached his car window with his college the driver of the undercover police car.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was asked again why he had been pulled over to the reply of the driver of the police car pulling out his police truncheon forcing me to get out my car or if he declined his window will be smashed.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he got out of his car as he did not have any think to hide, neither had he committed any traffic or criminal offence, nor was he wanted. The reason given to Mr Simon Cordell was for being stopped, then being accused of driving to close to the car in front of him. This car did not stop nor was it pulled over by police. Mr Simon Cordell will then state that he was then accused of having drugs; He was searched and so was his vehicle and nothing was found.

Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was asked by police what he had been up to and that he told them that he was setting up his catalogue that he and his friend had been building. That is why Mr Simon Cordell's website was well underway to being completed, and he was trying to establish positive effects within his business in today's society, within the business industry. This was a Thursday at 16:25.
Then once the police had checked every think that they had needed to, everybody parted and shock each other's hands and went then, Mr Simon Cordell will state that he made his way home.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he cannot understand why the police officers have said that he was driving in this manner as this would have been classed as dangers driving, and he would have been punished accordingly. Mr Simon Cordell will state that there is no way that someone can drive 1'' from the car in front of each other's car's bumpers; this would have been clearly in possible. If the males car in front had been stopped or went to the police stating that, Mr Simon Cordell had being do this action, would have be taken against Mr Simon Cordell for YR then surely the police would have taken the persons details in there 101 Book of reports PC EDGOOSE.

'With sound equipment which they was about to set up."
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he did not hire any sound equipment to this event nor did he organize it, police intelligence will show this, Val Tanner attached to public order unit Scotland yard.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was has since sourced information THAT SHE contacted and accused another person other than himself, of being the organizer and attended addresses leading to this date, Prior. Mr Simon Cordell will state that he would like to call her to court under oath to prove his innocents in this case.
At no point did he go on the open-air land or the premises attached to that land and that the police had said occupiers /potential organizer in the said land including the sound system contained within.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that it has also come to his attention from sourced information, that the public order unit Scotland Yard has information to other dates that are included in within this ASBO application, which will prove further to the facts that he did in fact not commit the offences that he is being accused of within this ASBO application.

- Ref: yert00376024 Inspector skinner

Mr Simon Cordell will state that he is not the main organizer on the 19th July 2014 as-Val-Tanner- attached to the public Order Unit Scotland Yard understands. Because this so-called event and the unit she works for holds information to the date of the 19th and other dates in this ASBO application, as this was explained by her to my mother on the telephone.

Mr Simon Cordell will state that he remember that morning very well to be a Sunday as it was pre-arranged to meet a few friends at their house' Ellesere street E14, because he had planned to go out with friends on their off road scramblers for the day, Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was looking forward to this day very much.
There were two other vans ready to go with bikes in them and the van he was driving index CX52 JRZ, which had two off Road scrambles in the back.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was approached by police and asked to prove insurance which he did by way of insurance certificate.
he was challenged at to the status of my insurance policy being real or up to date and that he had paid for it to be a valid insurance certificate. The reason the police officers were showing issues of concern was because Mr Cordell Insurance policy was not showing on the mid databases, to what he explained was no fault of his own, he explained that he had made many complaints trying to rectify the problem by way of email to his insurance company as well as the police and the MID database, he had done this by making many phone calls and sending many emails while asked the police to check there own system to verify this.
Having his vehicles seized had become a regular event since 2013 Proof attached on weekends he is mostly pulled over by police.
The reason being as the police MID Databases did not show his vehicles as being insured as well as it being a Sunday leading to all insurance companies being closed.
This has left Mr Simon Cordell have to pay the recovery cost as well as other expenses including the loss of day as well as the embarrassment that comes with being punished for some think that he knows he is paying a services for and knows that is not right in the begin.
His van was search for a TV before it was seized and was proved to be false allegations.
Informant had seen a group of male's loads a flat screen TV into rear of white ford index CX52 JRZ.
"Mr Simon Cordell will state that at no point did a TV get put into his van."

Statement of Simon Cordell Further to my statement Dated 00/00/00
In regard to Steve Elsmore Statement further to his statement Dated 11th August 2014 Amended on the 14/01/2015
In relation to wards an application for an Anti-Social Behaviour Order regarding the defendant Simon Cordell.
Point 1
PC Steve Elsmore States.
On the 5th November 2014 at Highbury Corner Magistrates, that I Simon Cordell made certain representations in regard to my company Too Smooth.
I Simon Cordell State;
I did explain that I was establishing my company and had become a valid member at Kemp Hall Community Centre there for committing myself to working for my local community centre, I did also say that I had been establishing my company brand and reputation, by way of provision of hire under a pro bono agreement with companies working on behalf of them self's, in connection with Enfield Council as they were all licensed outdoor events within the borough of Enfield contained within the local parks and such land marks.
Point 2
Pc Steve Elsmore States.
That he has searched the police systems in reference to my statement made in court, "that I was in fact on curfew and had not been leaving my place of residence.
I Simon Cordell State.
I do agree that I did state that I had been of police curfew during dates 28/06/2013 to 21/05/2014 during court proceedings which I was found not guilty for on the 02/07/2014.
Throughout the Interim stage of the ASBO order held at the Magistrates Court, I do not understand how PC Steve Elsmore when checking the Metropolitan police databases could not find my statement to be true,
As on the date of 03/08/2015 at my trial the clerk of the court checked her computer system in front of the DJ and all else present in the trial proceedings and found my statements to be true. I had been on curfew from the 28/06/2013 until the 21/05/2014 along with other bail conditions.
Point 3
PC Steve Elsmore States.
That he had discussed entertainment licences with the police and Council Licensing Officers and they had informed PC Steve Elsmore, I would not need to apply for licensing if premises was already in place of licensing or that I can apply for A Ten Note if on outdoor land.
I Simon Cordell State.
I had been in negotiations with Lee Valley in regard to Premises and Licensing to hold an outdoor community event within my local borough which was going well until the court proceeding became too much inclusive of the conditions imposed upon myself.

With regard to Barley Land Farm, due to everything that was going on in 2013, 2014, I had to take a step back from the event I wanted to host at Barley Land Farm, this was going to be picked up after I proved I had not done anything wrong which was the case. Barley Land Farm I did want to host this in 2014 but knew this could not happen as the case I was on lasted over a year, before I was found not guilty. I was due to pick up contract with regard to hosting this for 2015. This was stopped due to this ASBO order and the ongoing court proceedings becoming the priority over all in my life.
I was made manager of club Juice Brimsdown Enfield and trusted with the keys and all operations of the company till the police made this impossible to manage due to being continuously being pulled over outside.
It was agreed for me to be the manager of the lunch of White Sands night club once known as the Beach club Brixton Hill, till the police publicly embarrassed me and shamed my name by arresting me out side at an arranged meeting with the owner, to which I proved my case at court, I had committed a lot of time towards the launch of this venue prior.
Point 3
PC Steve Elsmore States.
The Licensing officer had checked in Steve Elsmore presence that I Mr Cordell has never applied for licensing regarding entertainment.
I Simon Cordell State.

I had no reason at this time of my life to apply to the council as pickets Lock, Barlylands and all festivals, inclusive of Night clubs and community halls I was committing my personal time to while establishing my company and representing my brand, have or had licensing already in place, I have also listed a few more companies names I was working with and for below with correspondents.
Lock to Lock
Muswell Hill Festival is a fundraising community event for children with cerebral palsy and their families from across London.
Enfield Town Fire Works
Ponders End Festival
Durant's Park Festival
HD Festival
At the same time I was constructing and in development of my website with help from my mother and friends, hosted at www.TooSmooth.co.uk
Point 4
PC Steve Elsmore States.
That he has spoken to Enfield Council with regards to myself Simon Cordell hiring Generators to them for events also that I had only hired out a human gyroscope to Enfield Scout for the local town fireworks display dated 2013.
I Simon Cordell State.
As listed above is the names of some events I was working within and for at the dates in question mainly before the interim stage and while other ongoing court proceeding progressed to which I was being accused of, to which I rightfully was found not guilty in my plea of innocence.

I had a curfew so could not stay with the equipment over night and as a company getting ready to start to trade I could not afford the higher of an experienced employee, so in turn I lost the contracts and faith in the justice system that was the main contribution towards the key elements need to cause myself to lose the contracts I and others had worked so hard to gain, due to the value of the products it was impossible to comet myself to a contract of hire any longer, at the same time the probationary conditions thought the interim stage imposed that represented the ASBO order made it once again even harder to continue forward than it already was.
Point 5
PC Steve Elsmore States.
A company House Check has been conducted under the name Too Smooth and Mr Cordell's post code and there is nothing registered. I am also asked by Steve Elsmore to provide my company number.
I Simon Cordell State.
My company name was registered on the 10/03/2015 and this was shown to the court at trial.
I think there was a mistake in how I explained myself and due to this think you believe my company had been registered before this date.
However what I was trying to explain was my domains had been registered since 2010, and 2013.
The reason my company was not registered in 2013, which it was meant to be was due to the court case and the conditions of bail I was on.
I could not do the contracts I had in 2013 so my company was put on hold until after I was found not guilty at court on the 02/07/2014.
But then as soon as I had been found not guilty for that case, I then had to deal with this ASBO order. Point 6
PC Steve Elsmore States;
On Wednesday 10th 2014, in regard to obtaining Mr Simon Cordell's role also inclusive of any more information that could be obtained relating to him at Kemp Hall Community Hall.
Diana Johnson hall manager was unavailable due to being sick, PC Elsmore spoke to assistant Hailey "Football Team Manager" who stated she was not sure of Mr Cordell role and had not seen him for about Two months in advance to the last meeting to which he had attended due to being ill.
I Simon Cordell State.
Regards Kemp hall, I Simon Cordell was given a Business card by a friend of a woman name as Luvinia De-Terville.
Her business card represented a company known as Dems event management who provides licensed outdoor and indoor events, so I called the number in hope of making good relations relating to professional business possibilities, a meeting was agreed and went well.
I was later contacted by Dems Management to help with the on goings of a charity event in aid of a charity called Bliss that helps premature babies, this event had been cancelled and was supposed to have taken place at another community hall other than Kemp Hall to which she had lost her deposit.
I arranged another meeting with her and asked her to bring all documents for the event so I could see if there was a way to rectify the problems, I took on the project to re-launch the event at a new location and Kemp Hall was chosen, a meeting was arranged at Kemp hall for 19th September 2014 with Diana hall manager and Dem, at the meeting I noticed the community halls absinth of articles of association and the down full in the maintenance of the hall, it was explained by Diana that she was having issues with managing the hall due to a lack of communication with committee members and local Authority and that the hall was absent of licensing and no constitution was in place neither funding, on taking a tour of the hall I took a list of problems I could fore see for holding an event for Dem's and that could be rectified for Diana. I prioritised the list as I was going around here is some of the problems I listed.

No lights in girls/ woman's toilets / this was winter, so it was dark early.
No Baby changing mat Girl's toilet door no hinges.
Boys / Mans toilets no lights

The list went on, I agreed to come back and help out where I could, and did do so at my own expense, I fixed most of the listed above over time and a lot more to which I still have all the notes of and information relating to the contract work. I have and provide evidence of Diana hall manager thanking me for my help and that she had not meet any one in 15 years that she could trust with the keys and management of the hall and because of this she had neglected time with her own family in the aid of keeping the hall running for the local children and community. This was because she trusted me with full management of the hall under her supervision. I can provide the information.
I also do not understand why PC Steven Elsmore would want to obtain more information as to my role at Kempe Hall and why he would speak to someone he does not know about me and any role I have at Kempe Hall. If the person who currently run Kempe hall was not there, he should have asked for a number to contract her on, not gone about speaking about me to someone else he did not know what role they had in Kempe hall.
Point 7
PC Steve Elsmore States.
On Sunday 23/11/2014 police stopped the following two males who were seen walking around an industrial estate Stockings Water Lane Enfield at 01:10 hours.
Both males seem to be under the influence of drugs.
On page 28 the CRIMINT reference states the other male, this has been blacked out, it also states that this person was living with myself Simon Cordell.
I Simon Cordell State.
On the 22/11/2014 I had been at my home address with a friend named Josh who was homeless when my mobile phone rang a person claiming to be a police officer spoke to myself he called me unexpectedly it was around 23:45 hours to 00:20 hours I got the call.
This person said they had been at my flat earlier but could not get the entrance code to my front door, they had returned to the police station to call me and get the door code, to which I thought and knew to be out of place I asked for the police officers badge number to which the person speaking would not give it to me, making me not believe this was a police officer I was in fact speaking to I would not give the door code out, on putting the phone down I called the police and asked if it was them asking me for my entrance code to which the reply was no.
This worried me even more because I live in a communal building that does not have an intercom system or CCTV. You must know the door entry code to the main entrance, and you can get to my front door.

Edited part 5.pdf
This made me and my friend scared and could not understand how someone had got my number and called and wanted the main door code.
I called my mother who told me and Josh to come to her house, my mother had been cooking something to eat so I turned everything off and left my flat with Josh.
We walked along Green Street, towards Brimsdown train station going towards the river lee.

I had called my sister and she agreed to pick us up in a cab at Ponders End train station as it was raining very badly.
As we was walking the police pulled us over they said they were the police care team and asked us what we were doing, I told the police what had happened about the call and was told it was them that had called me for the door code.
They said that they had been at my flat early and could not get in, so had gone back to the police station to get my number to call me to get my door code.
I asked why they wanted my door code and why they wanted to see me, they would not tell me.
We both got searched by the police and then let go, me and my friend Josh was not under the influence of drugs, and the police never found anything on us when they searched us both. They asked Josh why a boy from East London was in North London and he told them to see his friend.
I called my mother again and was really upset as the police was not leaving me alone, I had done nothing wrong and never went out of my flat anymore, but the police kept coming to my flat when they wanted.
When we got to Ponders End my sister was waiting in a cab, which we got into and went to my mother's home, my sister then left in the cab to go home.
My mother was really upset and made a call to the police at 02:04 to find out what was going on and why the police kept turning up at my flat CAD 1129:23/11/2014.
She was told that I called the police, she asked me and Josh if we had called the police which me and Josh replied no to, I told her I had only called the police after the police had called me. She carried on talking to the police on the phone.
Calls that were made on the 23/11/2014 by my mother to police due to what happened on the 23/11/2014.

Pc Steve Elsmore States.
On Friday 19th September 2014 at approximately 14:15 AT Kemp Hall I Simon Cordell State;
This date Friday 19th September 2014, I was at Kemp Hall with Luvinia De-Terville we were due to have a meeting with Diana hall manager in regard to the higher of the hall for the charity Bliss.
Yes, I agree the police did come to Kemp Hall while I and Luvinia De-Terville were there in the meeting with Diana hall manager about hiring the hall for the bliss charity.
I did speak to them as they spoke to me; I told them why we were there about hiring the hall for the bliss charity the police could also see we were in a meeting. They seemed interested about the charity, and I went on to say about my goals for my company and showed the police a project I was working on, on my laptop, the police did ask some things which I told them.
I do not see how the police was utterly bemused I was not the only person who was talking and mostly it was the manageress talking to the police, as the police was there to speak to her and our meeting had run over and we were waiting for the police to leave to carry on talking to the hall manageress.
261,
Edited part 5.pdf
I did not tell the police I had 3 lockups, the police know where I keep my equipment and that is not in lockups.
I do not understand why PC Steve Elsmore has gone on in his statement to say about GMG members nor do I understand why gang members have been included in his statement. Nor do I understand why he has included in his statement about issues with Kempe Hall.
I had done nothing wrong and had nothing at this time to do with Kempe Hall I was there about hiring the hall for a charity event run by Dems.
I also do not understand why the police when got the opportunity did they start to ask the manageress tactfully how long she had known me, they knew already the reason I was at the hall and that was for a meeting about hiring the hall for a charity event.
Shortly after this date the police started to publicly make a bad example of me and started to harass me by pulling me over as I was attending the hall one method was to strip searching me in there van in the front car park in front of all the children and other community members that I was there trying to help which is not mentioned and there are no Cad's relating to within the ASBO application, the police also attended the hall more than the twice mentioned by Steve Elsmore and the once I mention when I was publicly embraced by the police in relation to questions regarding myself, I gave up and walked away as I did with the night clubs, as the police were set out to destroy all myself and every one had worked so hard to gain.
PC Steven Elsmore Updated statement dated the 26/06/2015
PC Steven Elsmore again says about Kempe hall page 30B as said above I stopped going to Kempe Hall around Dec 2014 due to what the police was doing, but was still getting emails from them I believe they did not take my email out of the email list. The police are aware of this as I have had more calls that the police have been there asking about me. PC Steven Elsmore states that Kempe Hall was taken back into possession of the council due to the way in which it was being run.

This is not correct it was taken back due to accounting not being completed on time that Enfield council was asking for. Please see email dated 21/01/2015 from Monica.Kaur@enfieldhomes.org Also please see email dated 17/02/2015 from Monica.Kaur@enfieldhomes.org and Simon.James@enfieldhomes.org
Also please see Letter dated 25th February 2015 From Simon James.
So by 18th March 2015 Kempe Hall was already back in Enfield Councils possession when the police did a search of the grounds and found a firearm. And I had not been at Kempe Hall since Dec 2014.

"Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was attending an occupied building that was being lived in under section 144 LASPO around the time of the 8th June 2014 as a visitor. And not on the 7th June 2014.
His intentions were to drop keys to a friend which had been left at his flat.
When he approached progress way a man, he now no to be a police officer from the statements provided, approached him while he was walking down a public foot path leading to the occupied building. Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was accused of being an organizer to which he gave no replay and decided at this point to cross the road and call his friend to come out side to give him his keys back, to which he had, came to visit.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he then left and headed home and at no point did he except any paper work of any person(s) nor did he give his name or personal details to anybody for his personal details to be on any official headed piece of paper, to which in the statement he is being accused of being presented to him.
It is also noted that in A/Insp Hamill 201566 statement that he did not note that a copy of the paperwork had not been handed to anyone. Which Mr Simon Cordell will state that he is sure he would have noted in his statement. As from his statement he was the main person dealing with this matter.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he would like to ask for any noise abatement order made on the 6th 7th 8th June 2014"
It is also noted that police statement was written on the 02/08/2014, 26 days after therefore Mr Simon Cordell is asking for a copy of the 101 book.
A/PS Charles Miles 724YE " states that he returned to the venue approximately two hours later, he again asked to speak with the organiser however none came forward, he asked the two men on the door, who appeared to be party goers to let him in to have a look around. He walked around and there was extremely loud drum and bass music playing, with approximately 100 people dancing. Party goers observed him in Police uniform and ran away into the large open area, presumably because of drug misuse matters - there was significant evidence to suggest illegal drugs were being used such as discarded self-seal bags, and empty canisters consistent with 'laughing gas' use."
A/Insp Hamill 201566 "As officers where not permitted access into the venue it is unknown to the extent of drug and alcohol abuse which may or may not have taken place within."
A/PS CHARLES MILES 724YE "At approximately 06:30Hrs we received a call to nearby Woodgrange Gardens, to reports of a male assaulted. Following an initial investigation this individual matched the description of a male earlier observed on the warehouse roof. It appeared that he had fallen off of the roof and into some bushes and his injuries were consistent with a fall from height. He was heavily under the influence of alcohol and quite probably illegal drugs. He went to North Middlesex Hospital with the London Ambulance Service."
A/Insp Hamill 201566 "At 05:04hrs CAD 2290 8th June police were called to a male assaulted in the street. Officers and LAS have attended the location of WoodGrange Avenue, where the male had injuries of suspected broken wrists and a bloody mouth, he initially stated that he had been attacked from behind but on investigation it transpired that this male had been one of the people seen on the roof earlier and had fallen whilst getting down."

"Mr Simon Cordell will state that it was only ever noted by PS 92YE that 1 male was seen on the roof, but if the call came 05:04hrs CAD 2290 how is it his statement it says a call came in at 06:30Hrs this is 1 hour and 26 mins after the first call was made and A/Insp Hamill 201566 had sent officers to the location.

Witness statement

Mr Simon Cordell will state that he did notice when approaching the building a Section 144 Laspo notice was in place, in turn meaning occupiers were occupying the free hold of the land sleeping in the commercial building and treating it as their home." Himself,

Mr Simon Cordell will state; Please take note "Nobody could have spoken to him or his brother Tyrone Benjamin, or see Tyrone as his brother Tyrone Benjamin was involved in an ATR involving, a vehicle LRO9BMV he was knocked of his moped on the 10th April 2014 the injuries his brother occurred has changed his life for ever. On the 07/06/2014 Mr Simon Cordell's brother Tyrone Benjamin could not walk; he was Air lifted to The Royal London Hospital. Mr Simon Cordell will disagree strongly that his brother was at this event dated 06th 07th 08th June 2014 or any case in question presented within this ASBO application, nor did he attend. Mr Simon Cordell will state that he arrived at progress way about 01:45am on the 8th but on his own and on arrival police spoke to him outside the front gates and he then left and went home.

Mr Simon Cordell will state that allegations of misleading information is being held under his and his brothers name on the police national Computer, and he has been trying to get this rectified, He has provided his brothers medical notes as proof of this as well as stated many other facts and provided a copy of the Police National Computer and the errors that have tarnished his life agreed by the courts.

He would also like to make it noted that the police already have on their system the people they were prettying while he was on curfew for some of the cases within this ASBO application and that the police had contacted other people leading up to dates of the incident numbers but not Mr Simon Cordell in relation to illegal raves. The public order team has confirmed on the phone to his mother and Essex police have too.

It has taken months to gather this information relating to the dates within this ASBO application so that Mr Simon Cordell can clear his name.

Witness Statement A/Inspector Hamill 201566 Friday 6th June 2014

It is noted that your statement was written on the 06/08/2014 this is 62 days after the fact, Mr Simon Cordell will state that he is therefore asking for a copy of your 101 books."

At no point did Mr Simon Cordell take part in any form of Anti-Social behaviour, causing or likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress.

Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was did not organize any events within this ASBO application.

And at no point in time did he encourage any other people to commit any offence causing or likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress.

Mr Simon Cordell will state that he at no point has he committed or been rightfully arrested and charged for an offence to one of a similar nature presented within this ASBO application.

A/Insp Hamill 201566 On Friday 6th June 2014 when on duty in full uniform working as the Duty Officer for the Borough of Enfield. Was working between the hours of 2200hrs to 0700hrs.

A/Insp Hamill 201566 "During the early hours of the 7th June I was made aware of a potential Rave that was in progress in a discussed Industrial Building on Progress Way."

A/Insp Hamill 201566 "I have had a CAD created reference 1047I 7June dispatched officers to the location to access numbers, crowd dynamics and gather information around times the event is likely to run until and also to make contact or identify the potential organiser. Officers have reported back that Tyrone Benjamin and Simon Cordell where at location and to be the believed the event organisers, there were approximately 200 people in attendance, the event was covered by security officers who had stated that they were volunteers and not licensed through SIA. Officers have spoken with staff to confirm that all fire escapes where clear, that there were sufficient fire extinguishers in place and that there were first aid kits available."

" Mr Simon Cordell will state that this incorrect and not to be true as his brother had medical injuries stopping him from being mobile or transported. Evidence will be supplied.

Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was not in attendance to attained any rave in fact he was dropping keys to a friend as they had been left at his address when he was there last."

A/Insp Hamill 201566 "Police Officers have reported back: The police sent by inspector Hamill reported back to him and said they had spoken to Security officers at the gate of progress way, who stated that they were volunteers not security as believed by police offices. "Who made this statement?"

If they were believed by police officers to be security, but had said they were volunteers, what makes the police sure beyond reasonable doubt that the people in question presented to be security acting as volunteers could have in fact off been the organisers. As Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was not the organiser neither did he hire any sound equipment, nor did he take part in any form of organization on the 6th 7th 8th June 2014 or act in an Anti-Social Manner. In the new skeleton argument the inspector

264,
Edited part 5.pdf
clearly states that he now trusts the security guards when officers state that they believed they were security but said they were volunteers and looked like party goers.
A/Insp Hamill 201566 "Police Officers have reported back: Staff was forthcoming with information but refused to allow offices inside the venue."
"As stated they never believed the information provide by said staff at the gates of progress way to be true, as it was believed the security was to be presenting them self's as volunteers, so why would any information provided to officers can be classed and stated as forthcoming be classed as to be true, if not believed to be true by the person writing the statement in the beginning, as said by police officers, the people at the gate also refused to allow police officers inside the venue."
A/Insp Hamill 201566 "Due to call demand during the shift and low policing numbers it was inappropriate to enter the premises to seize the equipment and close the event, but he deployed officers to conduct regular visits to the venue, where number at their peak where 500 but reported to be quiet and peaceful."
" Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was not involved in any event or Anti-Social Behaviour on the 6th 7th 8th June2014, he only went to drop some keys off to a friend that he had a call from due to him leaving his keys at his address the last time he was there and his friend needed them back."
A/Insp Hamill 201566 "Local authority noise team were contacted reference T548832. The event was expected to run until 0700hrs on Saturday 7th June, with plans for the event to continue again later in the evening on the 7th June. During the course of the shift we received a total of calls from local residence complaining about the noise of the rave."
A/Insp Hamill 201566 "On Saturday 7th June 2014 I was again on duty in full uniform working as the Borough's Duty Officer for the hours of 2200hrs to 0700hrs, as with the previous evening I was made aware again of a Rave at an empty Warehouse of Progress Way. As with the previous evening, I have posted officers to make regular visits to the venue to access numbers, crowd dynamics and general intelligence around the event.
During the course of the number numbers at the event were around 300.
At 02:00hrs I have attended the venue with A/PS Miles and two environmental officers.
The entrance to the venue was located off progress way, down the side off "Tops Tiles". The warehouse was at the bottom of this side road behind a metal gate, the gate padlock had been removed and security officers were opening the gate to allow access. As Insp Hamill and A/PS Miles and the EO have approached the gate they have closed the gate preventing us access."
Mr Simon Cordell will state that for Inspector Hamill: To be able to state the gate padlock had been removed." By this statement made Inspector Hamill was this close to pay this much attention to such an object as a pad lock on the gate, he then states a security officer was opening the gate to allow access. Followed by them have closed the gate, with so many people walking in and out of such numbers of 300 people in attendance Mr Simon Cordell will state that he believes the inspector see Mr Simon Cordell and took his own believes.
A/Ins p Hamill 201566 "I have introduced myself and asked to speak with the event organisers, to which a member of staff has disappeared into the venue and returned with a male who I would describe as light skinned black male, Approximate age of 35, wearing a white long sleeved t-shirt, grey bottoms. I recognized this male as Simon Cordell.
Inspector Hamill introduced himself and asked if we could speak at the bottom of the' road where the noise levels would allow us to talk. We have all moved to the bottom of Progress Way where I have introduced myself and explained the purpose of the visit and asked "It's Simon isn't it?" to which he has replied "Yes" I have then further asked "Simon Cordell" to which he has indicted that it was but not verbally confirmed the answer. I have introduced the two EO's the Simon who have explained the purpose of their visit and the fact that they were going to severe a noise abatement order, they have produced the paperwork and asked the male for his name to which he has refused to provide his details,
It was explained that without the name of a person from the venue the EO's are unable to serve the paperwork. As we have been unable to progress this line of action, I have made the request to Simon Cordell to turn the music down."

Mr Simon Cordell will state that Inspector Hamill: States he approached the gate and spoke to security, but the police are not sure if they are security, the day before the people called themselves as volunteers. The case is the police did not know who they were they could have been security/volunteers or organisers. The police only believed Tyrone Benjamin and Simon Cordell could have been the organisers, which is not the case.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that Inspector Hamill: Asked to speak to an organiser and has said that a member of said staff disappeared into the occupied building. For a male Inspector Hamill recognised to be Simon Cordell to approach him. This could not have been the case as; Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was not in the building and that he was walking up to the building when he was approach by Inspector Hamill and others.

" Mr Simon Cordell will state that he does remember this day 08th June 2014 a friend who had stayed at his who had forgotten to take his set of keys with him, when he left his flat prior to the 06th and 07th 8th June 2014.
He will state that his friend had contacted him and told him that he needs his keys back and wanted him to meet him at progress way where he had been residing and asked Mr Simon Cordell to drop the keys to him.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was given a post code and had never been to this location before. That he travelled by car and parked outside a company that he remembers to be tops tiles, as he approached he could hear music, after finding the address given to him he had to walk down a side ally leading to the front gates to be seen by a man he now know to be Inspector Hamill from the statement provided he asked him his name to which mr Simon Cordell will state that he gave no reply to his question.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that as he see the police leave the people on the gate he was already chatting to him and asked Mr Simon Cordell to follow him to the road side which he did, at no time did Mr Simon Cordell talk to any police officers or any other person(s) as he felt he had not done any think wrong and new how the police was with him and he just did not want any problems.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was the police officer was with other people, who Mr Simon Cordell now know to be environmental officers due to the statements. he remembers feeling like he was being accused of being an organiser by the way in which the police officer was talking to him.
This is the reason he did not want to talk to the police as he knew how they was with him from over many years of being harassed by the police.
UP TO HERE SO FAR 03:58 09/02/2016
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he just wanted to leave so he decided at this point to cross the road to the local petrol station and call his friend to come outside to give him his keys back.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that at no time did he speak to police and give any details and did not take any paper work from anyone, the police did not follow him across the road to the petrol station where he called his friend to come and get his keys.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he did notice sound coming from said occupied building and at this point in time he would like everyone to make a note that he did not hire any sound equipment or any other form of equipment or neither was he involved in the organisation of any events on dates of the 6th 7th or the 8th June 2014.
He then gave his friend their keys and headed home, at no point did Mr Simon Cordell except any paper work of any person nor did he give his name or personal details to any other body, for his personal details to be on any official piece of paper.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he would like to ask for said paperwork Noise abatement order"
A/Insp Hamill 201566 "Inspector Hamill: Asked "It's Simon isn't it?" to which he replied, "yes he then further asked "Simon Cordell" to which he has indicated that it was but not verbally confirmed the answer."

"As stated above at no point did Mr Cordell speak to any police office to give his name and does not understand how he could have done so in a none verbally manner as he did not shake his head or shake the police offices hand to indicate this to be true. Police states that MR Simon Cordell replied yes than states but would not verbally confirm the answer"
A/Insp Hamill 201566 "Inspector Hamill: To which Mr Simon Cordell refused to provide his details." "He further verifies I did not in fact speak to him"
A/Insp Hamill 201566 "Inspector Hamill: It was explained that without the name of a person from the venue the EO's are unable to serve the paperwork. As we have been unable to progress this line of action."
The police see me walking up to the front gates from pc Shinick statements time stamped 01:59 7th June 14 but this was on the 8th June 2014 and knows that Mr Simon Cordell was in attendance with Inspector Hamill at 02:00 hours on the 8Th June 2014 and that Mr Simon Cordell walked back to where his car was parked on the Great Cambridge Road Enfield, if Mr Simon Cordell had walked into the building it would have been in there notes. The police also understand that this party had been going on since the 6th June 2014.
And know that Mr Simon Cordell did not speak to any one as said in police witness statement, so how could he have accepted any form of paperwork as no one knew his details.
A/Insp Hamill 201566 "Inspector Hamill states: I have made the request to Simon Cordell to turn the music down."
"I had left the grounds and waited in the petrol station for my friend to come out of progress way to me next to the petrol station and get his keys, then left and went home."
A/Insp Hamill 201566 "Inspector Hamill states: During the course of the 8th of June 2014 we had approximately 40 calls complaining about the noise."
"I would like to make note that I only attended on the 08th for about 30 mins max and left to go home. The Cads that have been provided are contaminated with cads such as 1046 progress way and 32 crown Rd, the same as CAD 2456 both the 6th 7th 8th June 2014, and are the main two cads representing the opening to all the CAD numbers Linked.

A/Insp Hamill 201566 "Inspector Hamill states: During the course of the shift police had contact with several groups that had been attending at the Rave all of which were extremely intoxicated and their behaviour had clearly been using drugs which they all confirm they had used but on police contact did not have any drugs on them."
"Mr Simon Cordell will state that at no point of time did he travel with any of the said people, nor did he invite them to any place or attended to supply any equipment or source of entertainment for them or any drinks or drugs."
A/Insp Hamill 201566 "Inspector Hamill states: as officers were not permitted access into the venue it is unknown the extent of drugs and alcohol abuse which may or may not have taken place within."
"Mr Simon Cordell will state that police say that no officers were allowed in the building yet police officer A/PS Charles Miles 724YE says people allowed him to enter but you have not been told nothing about this, in your reports from the police officers."
A/Insp Hamill 201566 "Inspector Hamill states: A call from CAD 2410 of the 8th June received at 05:35hrs stated that drugs were openly being sold."
"Mr Simon Cordell will state that he did not go into the occupied building neither does he sell drugs or advise or in courage any other person to do so"
A/Insp Hamill 201566 "At 03:10hrs on the 8th June PS 92YE noticed a male from the roof of the adjourning building to the venue. The venue backs onto that of the police parade site which did mean as officers entre and left the premises they had a full and unobstructed view of the rear of the rave premises, officers have attended the venue, however the male had already come down of the roof. Staff where given advice as to ensuring that people do not get onto the roof again."
" Mr Simon Cordell will state that he had no involvement in this said event on the 6th 7th 8th June 2014 and does not feel that he should be held responsible."
A/Insp Hamill 201566 "As noted the police arrived at 03:10hrs to deal with the matter of a person on a nearby roof of the occupied building located in progress way, however the male had already come down from the roof.
"Staff occupying another building was notified.
"Mr Simon Cordell will state that at no point of time, would he have been notified as he was not in attendance on the 6th 7th June 2014."

Edited part 5.pdf
A/Insp Hamill 201566 states" at 05:04hrs CAD 2290 8th June 2014 police were called to a male assaulted in the street. Officers and LAS have attended the location of wood Grange Avenue, were the male had injuries of suspected broken wrist and a bloody mouth, he initially stated that he had been attacked from behind but on investigation it transpired that this male had been one of the people seen on the roof earlier and had fallen whilst getting down."
" Mr Simon Cordell will state that he finds a time laps in the statements made by police PS 92YE attended at 03:10hrs and noted the boy had come down from a roof in Wood Grange Avenue the rear of Progress Way and then Police spoke to staff at progress way.
But CAD number 2290 8th June at 05:04 states the same boy is in wood Grange Avenue again and made a 999 call making a claim of assault 01:54 mins after and is believed to be the man fallen of the roof at 03:10 who was seen getting down safely and police state that they can see the roof top clearly from there police service centre.
It is also noted A/PS CHARLES MILES 724YE "statement at approximately 06:30Hrs we received a call to nearby Woodgrange Gardens, to reports of a male assaulted. Following an initial investigation this individual matched the description of a male earlier observed on the warehouse roof. It appeared that he had fallen off of the roof and into some bushes and his injuries were consistent with a fall from height. He was heavily under the influence of alcohol and quite probably illegal drugs. He went to North Middlesex Hospital with the London Ambulance Service."
Mr Simon Cordell will state that these times do not match up as in A/Insp Hamill 201566 statement he says he sent someone to the attack at 05:04 CAD 2290 and in A/PS CHARLES MILES 724YE statement he said the call did not happen until 06:30Hrs.
Was it 5 or 6 hundred hours or at 1 hundred hours and if it was at 100 hours why did police leave him to go and speak to people at the gate of progress way, if his injuries were so server he had to go to the hospital at 5 0r 6 hundred hours?
Mr Simon Cordell will state that the police already have on their systems, the person's name they were in contact with leading up to this. The public Order Unit at Scotland Yard would hold the information. And also the police in Essex would have information.
It has taken Mr Cordell and his mother months to gather information in regard to the dates in this ASBO application, and he feels that the police already hold the information that he is being accused off. This has come at a time when he was very unstable in his health due to the police actions toward himself over many years, and also the loss of his Nan's life which no one should have had to deal with in the manner she passed away, when Mr Simon Cordell should have been taking time with his family and trying to deal with his own health, while dealing with his brothers health, and personal family problems.

''Mr Simon Cordell will state that at no point did he cause Anti-Social Behaviour on this date''

The occupiers who was living on the land were treating the premises as their home and was in private Air. The occupiers were living in accordance to the law, living in tents and the occupied attached building on the land.
The term open air rave was used by Jason aims, on stead of on land in open air while attached to (Private Air) as defined by section 63 CDA, to which is a mistake as it was in private air on land.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was not arrested for any criminal offence or neither did any person take civil action against himself as he did not cause any Anti-Social Behaviour.

The closest/house to the occupied site is 1 mile/away.

Officer Jason Ames States: He attended Millmarsh Lane at 2232 hours.
Officer Jason Ames States: He could see small pockets of young people walking east along Millmarsh lane. " Mr Simon Cordell will state that at no point of time was he one of the people in question or did he organize the accused rave of being. He was invited to a birthday party as noted in the statement within this application made by Aaron King Dated 15/08/2014 Of the officer stating it was a birthday party, which as stated by Mr Simon Cordell "He was invited to" made by Aaron King dated 15/08/2014 referring to the 9th August 2014 " I explained to Mr Cordell that he needed to come on the site to see what was going on for all he knew he could be damaging it or steeling from it. Mr Simon Cordell state at this time the occupiers of the land was present and had been from the start of police arrival and he was a guest as explained on the 9th August 2014. Aaron King states: Eventually after promising he would not remove anyone squatting/ occupying the land that were treating it as their home under a section 144 Laspo. Aaron King and PC Ames could come in if they also treated it as the occupiers of the land do, as their private home of residence, as noted in statements provided there was no power or generator present to the self-contained private Land and premises. Mr Simon Cordell will state that as stated he had been invited to attend a friend’s birthday party not a illegal rave by a man who lived at Millmarsh Lane.

Officer Jason Ames States: I was aware of a lot of intelligence on our indices that suggests Cordell is known to be the organizer of most of the raves that have been happening in the Enfield area.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he has never been arrested and charged and feels that this is slander of definition of character, and for such here say to be admissible as court evidence or reference of character is criminal and unjustified, no weight should be taken.
Officer Jason Ames States: We asked if we could come into the venue and speak to him. Cordell refused initially starting that there was no rave.
" Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was just a visitor and had no right without consent of the occupiers to unlock the gate, at no point did he have the key to the gate, To which the occupiers use to unlock the gates to allow access for the police to come in.
Officer Jason Ames States: He stated that it was a private "conference."
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he did say he had also gone to have a conference with his friends in regard to get the empty co2 gas cylinders he was carrying to be re filled as well as to attend to see his friends.

Officer Jason Ames States: Inside he could see around 20-30 people milling around, 2 small tents, a large set of speakers and sound system and a supply of bottled water. AT no point did I take part or organise a birthday party or a illegal rave or bring any equipment leading to a large sound system on said premises as it would not fit in my car Index MA57LDY a ford focus as mentioned in police statement for me to be driving on the 9th June 2014.
Officer Jason Ames States: Cordell was informed that the rave was going to be closed down and despite a slight resistance to this by him trying to quote legislation to us he agreed to pack up and leave. Yes when asked to leave by police.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he did get into index Ma57Ldy and go home to his flat 109 Burncroft avenue Enfield to be he lives and reside every night.
Officer Jason Ames States: Cordell was informed that the rave was going to be closed down and despite a slight resistance to this by him trying to quote legislation to us he agreed to pack up and leave. "At no point would he go against police directions"

Officer Jason Ames States: He was reluctant but co-operated at this stage.
"Mr Simon Cordell will state that at no point would he go against police directions"
Officer Jason Ames States: The venue had more or less emptied, but the organisers were still packing their equipment away.
"Mr Simon Cordell will state that at no point of time did he have any equipment in fact by this time he had left to go home but got detained by way of a police road block at the top of Millmarsh avenue soon to be realized with other members of the public.
Officer Jason Ames States: Approximately 100 people arrived in Millmarsh Lane at the same time.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that as stated at no point of time did he take part in organising any event on the 9th June 2014 he did in fact travel alone to attend a friends birthday party not an illegal rave as he is being accused of and at the point mentioned did he meet any of the people in question out of the 100 people or advise them to attend.
Officer Jason Ames States: This appeared odd to me that so many people turned up all at once.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that as stated above he was just attending a friend's birthday party not a illegal rave as suspected of it being.
Officer Jason Ames States: The crowd appeared to be angry at the fact that police had interrupted their evening and were shouting and advancing at officers.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he did go to Millmarsh lane driving index MA57LDY in a silver ford focus on his own to attend a friends Birthday party. He has been to Millmarsh Lane before the date in question. His reason for this is he had been invited to do so at any time. Mr Simon Cordell will state that he had been invited to a birthday party at no point was he attending an illegal rave, neither at any point did he take part in the organisation of this birthday party or supply any equipment and that he was present only as a civil citizen up holding the UK Law.
Officer Jason Ames States: One of the groups shouted let's just storm it."
Officer Jason Ames States: Cordell appeared to have realized that this crowd was in attendance and half emerged from the venue and appeared to be encouraging the crowd to act up and try to false their way into the site.
"Mr Simon Cordell will state that at no point would he knowingly encourage such behaviour as to in danger others, as this is not who he is, so the believe that he appeared to take actions, such as stated that he would in fact in danger life's of others would not be true to it statement' of facts.
Officer Jason Ames States: Officer Jason Ames States: there were also reports of missiles being thrown at officers.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that as stated above he travelled alone and was in attendance as a visitor of a friends birthday party and no point of time on the 9 /8/2014 did he take part in the hiring of any equipment or organisation of an open air rave as stated, or did he have any influence or encourage any others to any events that occurred on the 9th June 2014

Officer Jason Ames States: A male and a female that was present did not back down and leave, they were arrested by officers.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he does not know who the people are that officer Jason Ames refers to as the male and female, who got arrested neither did he have any involvement in the events leading to their arrest.
Officer Jason Ames States:
The events from the 9th June 2014 have a negative impact on Enfield Borough and a strain on police forces across London's 33 boroughs.

Statement of (A) Aaron King,
Police officer PS 91YE,
Statement made 15/08/14,
Referring to 9th August 2014 Mill Marsh Lane

Officer (Aaron King States: On Saturday 9th August 2014 I was on duty in full uniform posted as Acting Inspector. Shortly before 2230hrs I was informed via our GPC that Intel had been received via social media that there was going to be a large illegal rave somewhere in the region of Millmarsh Lane, Enfield, EN3. I was advised that this was being advertised on Face book by "Every Decibel Matters" who run unlicensed events.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he understands that the information received by police via social media, was that there was going to be a large illegal rave, this was said to be some were in the region of Mill Marsh Lane, Enfield En3. This intelligence was past to police Intel Unit public order team, who had been in contact with the director of Every Decibel matters, prior to the information being pasted on to AAaron King, police had attended a location and had spoken to members of the public in regards to the private birthday party to which Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was not present, it then got stopped and moved to the location to where he was at to no arrangement of his own. Mr Simon Cordell will state that he is not a director to this company; neither was he working for the company name every Decibel Matters on this date.

Officer AAaron King States: At this time I was in company with Ps Ames 123YE and we made our way to the location. On route, I informed the control room of what was potentially occurring and accepted the offer; from some units to attend the location to assist me. On arrival in Millmarsh" Lane it was obvious that something was about to happen. There were a number, of groups of teenagers who were milling around clearly looking for something.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was not one of the people in question; neither did he take part in any Anti-social behaviour, organising or should he be accountable for other people's actions.
Officer AAaron King States: After a brief search I noticed two metal gates next to the Greggs Factory which suddenly closed as we passed them. We stopped and I got out and approached the gates. Although dark, street lighting was on and I could see a male was using a chain and lock to secure the gates.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was not the person locking the gate and he did not have a key as he was not an occupier of the land and that he was just a visitor. Who was sitting in his car Ma57ldy parked next to the gates as the police arrived. He could hear music coming from further inside.
There was no power source and the music was coming from a car related to the same land in another warehouse owned by the same landlord as the land connected to this incident being rented out.
Officer AAaron King States: Stood by the gate I immediately noticed an IC3 male who I know to be Simon CORDELL. I recognised Mr. Cordell as I have previously spoken to him recently at illegal raves where I have seen him setting up sound equipment and subsequently taking it away.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he has nether been arrested or charged for illegal raves.
Officer AAaron King States: when confronted by Police...I explained to Mr. Cordell why we were there, but he immediately denied it was a rave. Mr. Cordell stated first it was a private conference but then said it was a birthday party.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was there to have a conference with a friend who lived at the premises at the same time another occupier of the land agreed to have a friend's private birthday party at the location, to no involvement of his own.
Officer AAaron King States: When asked about permission to be there he stated friends were squatting on the land and they had said he could stay.
402

Edited part 5.pdf
This is true.
Officer AAaron King States: I explained to Mr. Cordell that I needed to come onto the site to see what was going on as for all I knew he could be damaging it or stealing from it. Eventually after promising I would not remove anyone squatting and only myself and Pc Ames would come in, Mr. Cordell agreed that we could come in.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he did get involved and speak to the police as they knew him by name and had already chosen to involve him.
Officer AAaron King States: Near to the gate was a silver Ford Focus index MA57LDY which I knew was Mr. Cordell's, - The boot was open, and I noticed it contained three large thin industrial gas bottles. From experience I knew this was likely to contain nitrous oxide which is currently used on the rave scene as a legal high. As we passed the car Mr. Cordell quickly lowered the boot. I queried Mr. Cordell about the gas and pointed out that it was on the news earlier how Nitrous oxide was dangerous and Mr. Cordell stated that the Government would probably ban it soon like everything else.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he does remember talking to the police in regard to Nitrous Oxide but at no point did he cause any Anti-Social Behaviour or was he breaking the Law.
Officer Aaron King States: Mr Cordell was polite and showed us around the site which appeared to be a large concreted area that was completely open to the air.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that this location was being occupied under section 144 and also has self-contained warehouse on it, evidence supplied in case bundles this is not open to air land.
Officer Aaron King States: There was a large sound system to the rear which was amplified though I could not see any power source.

Mr Simon Cordell will state that he this proves the fact that music could not have been made by anyone spoken to by police.
Officer AAaron King States: There was a number of people wearing yellow hi-vis jackets who Mr. Cordell stated were first aiders and there was a pallet of water near to the sound system as well as a couple of tents closer to the gates.
"Mr Simon Cordell will state that a female who had just past her first aid test, who is a occupier of the land was present, wearing a yellow hi vest jacket as it was cold and a load of yellow hi - vest jackets had been donated and he does remember everybody present talking about her doing so. "

Up to here so far 09/02/2016 13:32
Officer AAaron King States: I could see no obvious Toilet facilities nor shelter from what had been forecast as a stormy night. Inside the venue mostly just stood around in small groups were about 30 people, mostly teenagers.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that no police officers walked into the part of the building being occupied were there was running water and toilets.
Officer AAaron King States: Mr Cordell stated he was an entrepreneur and was awaiting licenses from the council so that he would soon be legitimate.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was and still does intended to create a festival if this ASBO case stops darkening his name.
Officer AAaron King States: When I explained all the "ingredients" for a rave were present Mr. Cordell began to try and argue his point that it was not a rave and that it was a private party. I spoke at length with Mr. Cordell explaining the legal situation and how by definition this was a rave and that ultimately there were too few people present at the time to stop police and so on this occasion I could act and close the rave. Mr Simon Cordell will state that at no point of time did he take part in any form of Anti-Social behaviour neither did he organize or hire any equipment or was he attending a rave on the 9th June 2014 in regards to the allegations presented within the ASBO application, he did attended a friends birthday dinner party as a guest.
Officer AAaron King States: Whilst on an industrial estate it was my opinion that such was the proximity to local housing and my knowledge of the volume music is played and the duration it is played for, often throughout the weekend that a rave would constitute serious disruption.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that Google Earth shows the closest house to Mill Marsh Lane the premises in question, to be one mile from the closest house. (Exhibit)
Officer AAaron King States: Mr. Cordell was clearly not happy but did not want his equipment seized so agreed to start packing up the sound equipment.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that as noted by officers and officer AAaron King he was present in a ford focus and with three empty welding cylinders, so he could not have been carrying any sound equipment as this would not have fitted into his vehicle.

Edited part 5.pdf
Officer AAaron King States: Whilst talking with Mr. Cordell there were small groups of teenagers arriving at the site and entering via a break in the fence, (the gates still being shut at this time). I got Ps Ames to get units to us to prevent further people trespassing on the land and to discourage people from attending the location and exited the venue to a wait.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he should not be accountable for other people's actions that he took no part in. For people to further be trespassing someone would have had to be arrested for trespass in the beginning, who is this person.
Officer AAaron King States: Mr. Cordell's exit with the sound equipment. Whilst waiting I radioed for the on-call Superintendent so I could get the various Rave legislation approved so that I could seize the sound equipment and enforce a rave cordon on Millmarsh Lane to prevent people entering.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that Inspector AAaron has been told this third party and he knows that he has stated the true facts in his statements of truth, that Mr Simon Cordell was present in a car and would not able to carry such large sound equipment.
Officer AAaron King States: Whilst stood by the venue a number of people began leaving, most were laughing but the odd one was blaming police for stopping the event. Suddenly there was a huge number of mainly teenagers walking towards me from the direction of Mollison Avenue. Apparently, this group had all arrived together from the nearby railway station. Straight away some of this group headed straight towards us saying they were going to storm the place. I had been joined by a few team officers and we advised them that the rave had been closed down and they would not be allowed to enter. There was some verbal confrontation but the large group which was up to 100 strong moved off round the corner with some overheard saying they would break in round the corner.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that at no point did he take part in anyone else's Anti-Social Behaviour and he did not cause Anti-social Behaviour.

Officer AAaron King States: As they began to move off Mr. Cordell stood by the break in the fence and shouted words to the effect of, "Come on, there is more of you".
And he quickly went up to Mr Cordell and told him to stop or he would arrest him to prevent a breach of the peace. At this Mr Cordell went back and stayed away.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that at no point of time would he say this, and he would never in danger another person's life in such a manner. Mr Simon Cordell will state that he would never encourage activities that would lead to incitement of a riot, and as there was more than 12 people present he know if this statement was true, he would have been arrested under offences contrary to section's 5, 4A, 4, of the Criminal Justice Act 1967 and or section 91.

Officer AAaron King States: The large group did indeed try to get into adjoining premises that they thought led to the rave venue hut were stopped by officers and moved off back into Millmarsh lane, although one officer Pc Wale was injured- during a struggle. T requested the attendance of as many units as possible including dogs and TSG as the group were becoming more hostile towards officers despite there being no music now and being informed of the closure. A short while later officers I had positioned at the junction radioed that there was now an even bigger crowd advancing on them. I arrived at the junction to see a very large number of people, now up to 200 walking with purpose towards officers stood in the road. Suddenly objects began to get thrown from the crowd towards police. I saw traffic cones, cone lights, bottles and stones begin to land near Officers so that they had to quickly move out of the way. I again heard phrases similar to "storm them". Fearing imminent violence I drew and extended my baton as did my colleagues. I could hear shouts of "get back" but the crowd continued to throw items, some of which were landing on cars that had been temporarily stopped due to the group. We had been joined by two dog units who took the lead in dispersing the crowd. At this point there were two arrests to my left and along with the dogs this seemed to make the crowd withdraw. I told my officers and the dogs not to follow the crowd as they were now by the train station with nowhere to go as the barriers were down. There was a tense standoff for some time, but the group eventually got onto trains and left the area.
Officer AAaron King says I could hear shouts.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was not the person shouting or causing any Anti-Social Behaviour neither did he take part in the organisation of the private birthday party.
Officer AAaron King States: I was informed by another unit that Mr Cordell had also left with his equipment.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that this proves police were told third party, but already new Mr Simon Cordell was in his car that was full because he was carrying cylinder bottles in accordance to the law of The CARRIDGE OF DANGRESS GOODS CDG. Officer AAaron King States: I tasked arriving TSG with local reassurance patrols but shortly after they started, I was advised that most of the group were wandering around 404
280,
Edited part 5.pdf
near to Ponders End. I tasked TSG with following this group and was informed by their Inspector that their unmarked unit had overheard talk that the' rave was now going to be South West of the original location.
I WAS NOT INVOVLED IN THE ORGANISATION OF ILLEGALE RAVES NEITHER WAS I ARRESTED AND GIVEN THE RIGHT TO DEFFANED MY SELF.
I was aware that TSG subsequently saw Simon Cordell by the Crown lane Industrial Estate where he has held a rave before and had stopped the group from forcibly breaking into this location.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that this is two occupied building of 6 within a 2 mile radius, that were all being occupied in Enfield, within the same Local Borough that he has lived in a resided in since his Birth, and he does not think that it is right for police to say who he can and can't have as friends or as associates.
Officer AAaron King States: Finally after close to three hours later, the group dispersed, and I was informed that social media was indicating the rave would now be Epping Forest.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he did not go to Epping forest on this date.
Officer AAaron King States The whole incident took a vast number of resources to police and there were two arrests for drugs possession and two for drunk and disorderly behaviour. One officer was injured with a deep cut to his elbow requiring first aid by the Police FME and emergency calls whilst answered were subject to delay.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he is sorry to hear that any police officers had been hurt and understand the offenders faced criminal prosecution for the offences they had caused.

The version of events declared in the statement of Aaron King Dated 07/09/2014 and 15/08/14 are both in correct and misleading to each other as pointed out;
Aaron King states: I could see a male was using a chain to lock and secure the gates.
" Mr Simon Cordell will state that at no point was he this person, as there was no reason for me to have a key as he was just a visitor."
"As Aaron king states I could see a male was using a chain and lock to secure the gates he then states, while stood at the gates I immediately noticed an ic3 male who I no to be Simon Cordell,
Mr Simon Cordell will state that to which is true as he was sitting in the car index MA57LDY parked close to the gates, when approached from the street, As noted by AAaron king Near to the gate was a silver Ford Focus index MA57LDY, which he knew was Mr Cordell's. This statement was made 15/08/2014 seven days after the occurrence of accused events referred to on the 9th August 2014 then another statement was made to amendments of this statement dated 07/09/2014 stating they know it was Mr Simon Cordell locking the gate a mix ic3 male who they no to be himself, which is a contradiction of events that have been noted on two different dates by the same police officer leading to events within his and there witness statements, that Mr Simon Cordell is being accused in that should not justified towards an Asbo application and should not have no effect on himself by way off effecting his civil liberty's human rights or acting as a bad marker in his name of reference, to which he feel punished for and now in turn has affected his life.
AAaron King state's: I have been asked to clarify the role that Mr Simon Cordell had during the incident.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he does not see how any person can preserve his role off being an organizer, as he was only being helpful and polite and curites, in his friend's place of residence towards the police, while being a invited visitor. It was his friend's birthday and he had been invited for dinner. At no point did he take part in any form of Anti-Social behaviour, nor did he organize or hire any equipment and he was not in attending to a rave on the 9th June 2014.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he did attend a friend's birthday dinner party as a guest.
Aaron King states: as a male quickly locked the gates upon apparently seeing my marked police vehicle. This male was Mr. Cordell
"Mr Simon Cordell will state that he could not have locked the gates as he was only a guest and at no point in time had the keys to the lock on the gates.
Aaron King states: It was initially Mr. Cordell who said he could not entre and it was him who was very much in charge of deciding if police were going to be let in.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was asked by police if he would let them in to which he explained he was not the occupier and never had any keys. At this point in time one of the occupiers went off to get the keys and let the police in.

Statement of PC Donald Mc Millan 759YE Dated: 19th August 2014 Police officer Unit 6 Progress Way
Referring to 6th 7th 8th June 2014
This statement refers to an illegal rave which took place between 6th June and 8th June 2014 on the industrial Estate near Woodgrange Avenue.
On Thursday 14th August 2014, police spoke with a resident who lives in Woodgrange Avenue, Enfield. The resident is an elderly female and both she and her husband are retired.
She has stated that on Saturday 7th June 2014, she contacted Police regarding a rave that was happening on the industrial estate close to her home address. Her reason for contacting Police was because the music noise was horrendously loud, and this was disturbing their peace and had been going on for some time. She states that both her and her husband were extremely distressed about this whole incident because something similar had happened in the past.
She states that lots of youths had been jumping over fences and she was very concerned and frightened about this and feared that something would happen to them or one of their neighbours. This made them both extremely anxious, nervous and made them worry.
This lady is worried that an incident like this could happen again. She did not want to provide Police with a direct statement as she is frightened that the organizers could trace where they live and make their lives even more of a misery. She is extremely concerned that something like this may happen again in the future.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that at no point in time did he take part in any form of Anti-Social behaviour, causing or likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress.
And he did not organize any events within this ASBO application.
At no time did he encourage any other persons to commit any offence causing or likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that at no point of time has he committed or been rightfully arrested and charged for an offence to one of a similar nature presented within this Asbo application.
He will state that he did not supply any equipment on the 6th 7th / 8th June 2014

Alma Rd

Referring to: Thursday 24th July 2014
Officer Pc Edgoose States: On THURSDAY 24th JULY 2014 I was on duty in plain clothes as operator of an unmarked police vehicle in company with APS 212YE MARTIN, PC 151YE ROBERTSON, and PC 229YE O'NEILL. At around 1625 hours on Alma Road EN3 we had cause to stop a silver Ford Focus VRM MA57LDY due to the manner of its driving. The driver was a male I know to be Simon CORDELL dob21/01/1981.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he has no disputes with reference to statement made by pc Edgoose above, apart from the manner to which MR Simon Cordell is being accused of driving.
Officer Pc Edgoose States: I know him as I have dealt with on a number of previous occasions. He was initially hostile about having been stopped, but once he had calmed down, he engaged in conversation with us.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that at no point was he acting in an Anti-Social Manner Officer Pc Edgoose States: He stated that he is staying out of trouble now, and he does not get involved in any of the things he used to.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he has not caused any offence since he was much younger; and that he just gets accused and harassed by members of the metropolitan police a lot.
Officer Pc Edgoose States: He stated that he has 4 brand new speakers at home which are suitable for use at raves, but he does not use them and has offered to lend them to any "youngsters" to use.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he had been on curfew for one year for a case he proved his innocents in and had been working hard in his Local community trying to make a positive effect towards his self and other that he could help, so he had been spending his time building his company and would not link himself to illegal raves,
Edited part 5.pdf
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he did say he had been getting his equipment ready and proposals for picket's lock and barley lands ready and had been in contact with both venues. Mr Simon Cordell will state that had also been working at his local community hall as well as Muswell Hill festival ponders end festival lock to lock festival and Enfield town festival and would have been talking about such on goings only and had been working with the youngsters from Kemp Hall Community Hall.
Officer Pc Edgoose States: He went on to say that they are not interested though as these days they just want to steal everything.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that the people he meets appreciated the work he was doing for them so he does not see why this would be said.
Officer Pc Edgoose States: He said he gets inundated with requests to run raves all the time, but he doesn't get involved now. He claims to have 20,000 followers on one social media site, and 70,000 on another. He said he could organize a rave and get 20,000 people at it with no problems whatsoever.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that the word Rave has been used and he does not see how this relates to the conversation on the day or his activities as he was talking about the hard work he had been committing himself to, constrictive legal work and for the term Rave to be used without the key elements is an injustice, which if true would have led to criminal convection, as the term illegal rave is of an illegal formality and his PNC Criminal Record and his other recollection of events in his life state otherwise. Mr Simon Cordell will state that did not cause any Anti-social behaviour on this date in question.
Officer Pc Edgoose States: He gets requests from anarchist type groups to run raves for them.
Ile went on to say that he had been asked by Occupy London, Black Block and other anarchist type groups to run a rave at Notting Hill Carnival for them so that they could cause carnage and mayhem, but he had refused.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he disputes that he would say this as he knows that he is not black neither is he white. Mr Simon Cordell will state that he is mixed race of British Nationality and that he has neither heard of a group called Black Block, neither would he promote verbally of such a group the same as he would not verbally promote such anarchist type groups such as the kkk because he has been created by both.
Officer Pc Edgoose States: Whilst on public order duty at Notting Hill Carnival I saw Mr. CORDELL walking through the area I was deployed around TAV1STOCK ROAD. He was pushing a wheelie bin, and he was approached by members of a group of around 10 - 20 people who had been waiting at a junction near our location. This group had been playing drum and bass music and had told officers they were heading to an event but were awaiting the location. It was somewhere between 2200 - 2300 hours when I had seen the group, and Mr. Cordell.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that at no point did he cause any Anti-Social Behaviour or Alarm harm or distress on the date in question.

109 Burncroft Avenue
Referring to: Friday 12th September 2014
On Friday 12th September 2014 I attended the address of Simon Cordell in Burncroft Avenue EN3 with A/PS 556YE PETRUCCI, PCSO NASSEER and PCSO TILLEY.
I knocked on Simon Cordell's front door at 1230 hours and he opened the door and asked what we wanted; I asked him if he was Simon Cordell, to which he replied, "Yeah." I stated to him that I was here to issue him with a summons to attend Highbury Corner Magistrates Court on 6th October 2014 at 1:30pm. Mr. Cordell stated, "What is this for?" I informed him that it was for an ASBO; I showed him the summons and the folder and as I went to hand him the folder and the summons Cordell stated, "I am not accepting that, I'm not having that." Cordell then placed the folder on the floor, outside his door, in the hallway. I stated to him that he does not have to accept it and that I have already informed him of the date, time and where to go. Mr. Cordell then shut the door before I could hand him the summons, so I posted it through his letter box. Mr. Cordell was also told to inform his solicitor of this.
Mr. Cordell was a light skinned, mixed race male, with short black hair and was of medium build.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that on this date he caused not Anti-Social Behaviour that might lead to Harm Alarm or Distress to any other person.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he disputes the fact that he was served the Anti-Social Folder Paper Bundle as it was not handed to him self at no point of time.
Copt of Complaint Sent)
To Whom It May Concern:
I am writing this down for Simon Cordell to a incident that happen 12/09/2014 around the Time off around 12:00pm Of concern to all of many factors such as British Standards relevant to good business practice.
Human Rights, Laws protecting our community governed by the United Kingdom well as many other relevant factors. as of date prior explained in this chapter what happened leading up to events today at address. 109 Burncroft Avenue EN3 7JQ on the 12/09/2014
Mr. Simon Cordell was at home making plans for positive future development in regards to his company and future proposals as well as relevant documents and data, To the surprise of a knock on his front door, this was a surprise because he has no intercom and was expecting no visitors.
So with this all explained he was couscous to open the door as he approached the door with caution of un-expected visitors he looked into the keyhole on his front door,
He could see it was the police through his keyhole. He asked them without opening the door what was wanted of him, they said they needed to talk to him. At this point Mr. Simon Cordell opened his door a little to see what the police wanted to talk to him about, once the door was opened a little they then said to him that they wanted to serve some documents on him at which point Mr. Simon Cordell replied he was not willing to accept anything and closed the door.
Upon closing his close he told the police he was not being rude but he was not willing to accept receipt of any documents due to him having learning difficulties as noted on the police national police system and other governing services, which he then heard the lady police officer say through the closed door I was again looking through the keyhole watching what the police officers was doing I heard the " Lady police office say what should we do to the man police officer said just put it on the floor in front of the door and he took some letters from the lady police officer and posted them into my letter box"

The Man police officer posted 4 pages of papers in Mr. Simon Cordell letter box and the lady police officer put a large blue file on Mr. Simon Cordell front door step outside.
My son then called me and told me what had happened but due to a death in the family I was unable to attend his address until today the 13/09/2014 when I got to Mr. Simon Cordell address I saw the blue folder that the police had left at his front door which was in plan view of anyone. It had been opened and left opened so anyone could have looked into it.
I was shocked to see that inside the document there was full details of Mr. Simon Cordell and also other people names under the data protection act the police should have never left this folder outside Mr. Simon Cordell address which would give anyone access to it.
I am going to the police station to hand this back to them as it was never served on Mr. Simon Cordell and he will not accept it from the police. I am not sure if any papers are missing from the folder Cl. I said it 'was opened on the floor when got there.
I believe that the police when Mr. Simon Cordell did not accept the documents they should have took them back with them and arranged for signed delivery or tried to again serve them on Mr. Simon Cordell as the file is far too big to put into a letter box. This is also a complaint due to the data protection issues that the police could have avoided by not leaving the folder on a doorstep that anyone had access to. The folder would have never fitted in a letter box and I do not feel that the police putting 4 bits of paper in a letter box is serving anyone the full paper work which should have been done and not just left it on the door step for anyone to see and read and take data out of it if they so wished, this is a beach of the data protection act.

Subject: RE: Simon's updated statement
Dear Josey
The statement we have been asking you to request from Superintendent Coombes since Sep 2015 will help this case Josey, I cannot understand how you can say it will not. Simon was not in Essex which will show in Superintendent Coombes statement. it will show that Superintendent Coombes contacted the met police and spoke to a Superintendent and give them all the information and told the MET to keep a close eye on this event as it could happen within the METs bounders. It will say Superintendent Coombes asked for an officer name that would be on duty in the met police that weekend in case of problems.

It will show that Superintendent Coombes made many phone calls to the organisers of the rave way before the day that the event was due to take place to try and get them to stop. None of this will come back to Simon. And it will also show more information than this so how can this not help.
Just the met police knowing about this event and getting the person name who spoke to Superintendent Coombes will mean a great deal as this will clearly show the MET police was warned about this event before it even started. so, in turn the MET police would have known where is was moved to.
Please tell me how this will not help?
Josey the public order unit no full well who was the organisers of most of the dates within this ASBO application. is it right they got information on their system showing who was the real organisers which is not Simon, yet a case is put in Simon name.
Josey people can have friends it does not mean they know what people are doing does it.
Josey the case for illegal raves has not been proven at the trial already and can never be proven as there is no trespass to the applications case. The team raves cannot be used in a legal team read Simon 90-page document and you will see the law there in it.
Why do you think in the new Skeleton Argument the word illegal has been taken out within the whole document and the word rave has only been used? But they cannot use this team in the application as said above the team raves cannot be used in a legal team.
So now what is the case Simon acted in an anti-social manner, well clearly this is the case that was proven at trial but I cannot understand why and no one else can even the councils I have spoken to do not know how this was proven, as not one police officer stood up at trial and said Simon acted in a rude or anti-social manner towards them, they said he spoke to them and done what they asked of him. The witness statements not one of them can give an ID of Simon so how do they know it was Simon that has acted in an anti-social manner?
Josey to prove this case the burden has to be of high standard, and it is not, or they would have been able to prove illegality at trial which could not be proven.
Josey there was a reason the application was done in the way it was they could not prove outright Simon acted in a way to prove he:

- That the offender has acted, at any time since XXXXXX in an anti-social manner, that is to say in a manner that caused or was likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress to one or more persons not of the same household as himself, and
- An order under this section is necessary to protect persons in any place in England and Wales from further anti-social acts by him.

The reason being Simon did not act in an anti-social manner to any person and this is proven in their own application. AS said above Simon was not rude to anyone even the police he spoke to them so this is not acting, in an anti-social manner that is to say in a manner that caused or was likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress to one or more persons not of the same household as himself.
But if he was the organisers of these illegal raves then he would be the person that was overall reasonable for any person that caused or was likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress.
They cannot prove Simon was the organisers of these illegal raves.
Once you have had time to look after Simon document tonight can you please supply bullets of all points you feel he has issues.
Would it also please be possible to ask the court for more time in order to get the document in as Simon does not want to run out of time in order to get this all addressed and all documents in and the list of witness that will need to be called that was due in yesterday to the court.

Lorraine
I am sorry that you have not been well.
As the updated statement is not yet completed by Simon please indicate when this statement will be ready. This is not a rushed request as you seem to suggest, you were aware of this from before Christmas break so please do not blame me.
The information that you are asking me to request from does not assist Simon's case and if anything will lead to an inference that he is involved with the organisers of the rave. If Simon insists on this being requested, then I will of course request this, but it does not help Simon. I have not delayed any information from being included in the bundles. It is for Simon to provide this information in a timely manner. Simon's appeal is based on the definition of whether the events cited in the respondent's application were raves by definition. Legal aid funding does not remunerate me for sitting through meeting after meeting. This is why I asked for Simon's statement in advance of the meeting so the meeting would be constructive.

Your perception of the strengths and weaknesses in the case differ from my interpretation as does your belief in information that is being sought and how this assists Simon's case/ appeal. I am giving you my honest view on the Police evidence.
If Simon's statement is not ready and I assume it is not, then please email it this evening and I can reschedule for 4.30pm tomorrow.

Josephine

Dear Josey
due to not getting replies to my emails since the new year asking if anything else was needed to be done by as and getting no reply I have not had time since yesterday to deal with getting a statement re Dwayne, but I think that is covered already as Jamie Duffy was there and he has already wrote a statement.
I told you before Christmas Dwayne was due to go away to complete his trip that he has to cut short due to my mum's death. I told you he is back packing so would be very hard to get hold of once he left which was a few days after you asked me to get the tickets to show when he was leaving and the hall details. and when you told me about Dwayne would need to attend, I told you that would be imposable as he was due to leave a few days after you asked me. I even called him in your office Josey so you cannot say you did not know this.
Yes, I should be able to get statement of other people and in your last email you did not say you needed these statements today in the daytime you said by tomorrow evening. Which is tonight.
I am sorry you now feel you have to rush things as they have not been done but that is not my fault or Simon's
Josey you know I have many health problems and I have only just had a huge amount of injections into my spine on the 17/01/2016 and I am not allowed to run around and do things for 6 to 8 weeks after having these done. I also got the flu really badly and have not been well for the last 2 weeks. but have still tried to get things due that was needed but getting no replies to my emails did not help.
Josey you have had Simon 65-page statement for months I think since Oct 2015 at the last meeting you allowed him to attend it was given to you. It is this statement he is updating again since we got the information from the cps in am email on the 04/02/2016.
Simon is trying to get things done so you do not have so much to do. I have done the same thing. Me and Simon from the start of this case have done all that was asked of us and much more,
We were asking for things to be done since this case started which was not and only started to be done when the appeal was put in.
If you feel the need to re-schedule the meeting which has happened many times before then please update us, but this meeting is to

I note that I have not received the updated statement from Simon, nor any additional statements from any witnesses re Dwayne's leaving party. I advised you previously that Dwayne was required to attend court, clearly, he cannot as he is travelling, hence the request for alternative witnesses to back up Simon's alibi.
If the updated statement is not received by 3.30pm then I will have to re-schedule the meeting for until such time as the updated statement is received.

I am the mother of Simon Cordell.
I have been asked to write this updated statement due to calls that I made in regard to the updated Skeleton Argument bundled emailed to me on the 0410212016.
Please refer to page 5 within the Skeleton Argument bundled section 20
As to the particular prohibitions on the ASBO, significant effort was made by the Respondent and by the court to ensure that any legitimate business activities that the Appellant wished to undertake would in no way be inhibited by this order. For the Appellant to provide recorded music to a gathering of people he would either need to have a licence for that event or to provide the music on a licensed premise for fewer than 500 people with a general licence to play recorded music (see s. 1 and Sch.l of the Licensing Act 2003). This order specifically does not preclude him from providing regulated entertainment under the auspices of a valid licence.
I found this very hard to believe as I did from when this case started, and many times issues were raised due to the conditions but things were never addressed, not even on the trial days.

These conditions do not just have an impact on my son Simon Cordell Business, which he has been building for many years. But also, his normal everyday life, but this was never taken into account. And the ASBO was given without illegality being proven of illegal raves for the whole of the UK for 5 years.
I have since reading the Skeleton Argument made phone calls to local London boroughs in way of asking if this ASBO order and the conditions of the order would cause problems obtaining any form of Alcohol and entertainment licences, there seem to be 5 types of Alcohol and entertainment licences that any person can put an application in for these are.
6. Personal licence.
7. Premises licence.
8. Club premises certificate.
9. Temporary event notice.
10. Minor variations
The cost to apply for each application for an Alcohol and entertainment licence is:
Personal licence. Premises licence.
Club premises certificate. Temporary event notice. Minor variations £37.00 each application, this is not refunded if refused.
£190.00 to £800.00 each application, this is not refunded if refused £190.00 to £800.00 each application, this is not refunded if refused £21.00 each application, this is not refunded if refused
Was not given a price on this as this licence can change to a full one if it was to ask for later opening times for an event in an already licensed building to a full variation licence. There is so many variations this can go into. But again, this is not refunded if refused

33,

I spoke to Kelly Hickmott (East Team) who said the ASBO and the conditions within the ASBO order would cause a problem with obtaining any of the above licences. I told her the full ASBO conditions within the ASBO Order.
That anyone applying for any type of licence would have to go the licensing process and each time the police would be contacted; the police would then conduct a background check to the person who was applying for the licence.
I was told that the process was harder for some licensing then others and for the higher the licence that was being applied for the more checks that are done.
She also emailed me the police officer name Matthew Mcgrath and his email address who deals with licensing within the Lewisham area who I emailed under my friend's emails address:

I spoke to Costa and he told me the same thing as Lewisham licensing team Kelly Hickmott told me, that it was be very hard to process an application for someone that had this ASBO order in place.
I was told that any order would be sent to the Pollution Team, police licensing officer and they would do ground checks. That would bring up the ASBO order and in turn they would write a report back to the local Council with risks, there is licensing objectives that have to be followed with every application applied for.
I told him the full ASBO conditions within the ASBO Order.

I did not get the name of the person I spoke to; I have tried to call them today when I was asked to do this updated statement, but the phone line was going to voice mail.
I did get told the same as above by the other 2 councils I was told the process that was taken and how the ASBO conditions would have an impact on the report from the local police licensing officer.

Jillian called me back a while later and I explained again what I needed advice about. I told her about the ASBO and all the conditions and again asked whether this was affect any application for an Alcohol and entertainment licence, again I was told the process that is taking and again was told there would be issues with someone applying for an Alcohol and entertainment licence with the ASBO conditions that where in place.

Again, I did not get the person's name she did say it but i forgot to write it down. But i am sure they note calls that are made to any council department.
Again, I told the lady the call was for advice and told her about the ASBO and all the conditions, I again was told the process that is taken when someone applies for an Alcohol and entertainment licence.
Again, I was told that the police licensing officer would do checks and a report back to the local council, I was told it would be very hard for someone to get un Alcohol and entertainment licence due to the checks that were done.
I was also told that if an application for an Alcohol and entertainment licence was refused the person could then has it heard by 3 council committee members where the person that had applied for the licence could put his case? I asked would the police be there also and was told yes, they would be.

The lady told me to get better advice would be to call the police Licensing officer I said I had tried the numbers listed on their website but I was not having no luck, she then got me the correct number to call which is listed below.
Croydon Police Station - Licensing Sergeant (Spoke to Darren)
Address Line:
Licensing Office Metropolitan Police Service Croydon Police Station 71 Park Lane.
Croydon, CR9IBP
Telephone:
020 8649 0157 or 0167 (this is the wrong telephone numbers I was able to get the correct one from Croydon Council, Licensing Team the correct number is 020 8649 0172
After trying the 2 numbers that are on the website to speak to the Police Licensing officer and having no luck it was then I called and spoke to the Croydon Council, Licensing Team the lady I spoke to give me the correct number and l called this after and spoke to a male called Darren.
We spoke in great detail about the ASBO and the conditions and that we were told these would in no way would any person be inhibited by this ASBO order who applied for a licence.
He could not understand this and asked me more details who we have been told this by.
I explained what went on at the trial and also my son's business.
He could not understand why we were told this and asked who had applied for the ASBO order.
I told him this that it was the police who applied for the order.
He said that no one had the right to say this within an ASBO application due to the fact it would be down to each local police licensing officer to make a decision, as each licensing application is dealt with by the local area police licensing department within their area.
At this I asked him if he would be willing to confirm this in an email to me if I gave him my email address.
This reply was what I was already thinking, he could not write this without him knowing all the facts and that due this being a police matter and going to police he would not feel comfortable.
He said if he gave me his email and I wrote everything down and the full information about the application for the ASBO he would look into it.
We spoke a little more and I explained that I did not want information as to the ASBO application just advice as to if someone had this ASBO order under the conditions that I have said would they be able to get a licence.
But there will be problems he said he would have to look over everything and have meetings with my son and do a lot more checks.

Due to him being busy and the call taking longer he was due to go into a meeting and had to get off the phone I forgot to take his email due to talking about the licensing.
So, I do not understand how within this whole application my son has been told that this ASBO would have no impact on his business and not be inhibited by this order.

I asked Simon about the word confess, as this suggested to me a response to a criminal charge or accusation. Simon gave examples of confessions, but it was not possible to explore this further as I could not re-engage Simon on this subject. Simon spoke at length about plans for the future, that he is working hard to help other people. I talked about sometimes we all need help, but Simon said he has a hundred thousand friends and hundreds of family members. I said these sounded like very large numbers and asked how he made so many friends, Simon said through being nice and helpful.
I asked Simon about the records he keeps including recordings of conversations, he said it is like keeping minutes for a meeting. I asked several times if he understood how this could seem to others like the behaviours of someone with paranoid beliefs to but he did not address this.
Simon said that he had been told he is not mentally ill, and that staff had cheered this at the MHA review. I tried to explain that mental ill health and health are a continuum and there is not a binary system of sickness vs. health. I tried to explain what I have been told and read that Simon did not meet thresholds for detention un MHA in terms of severity of mental illness or risk of harm to others or himself, but he did not acknowledge this. I told Simon that I thought he hadn't grasped what I was saying but regarding the MHA, but he did not continue the conversation with this topic. I also said that our conversation has seemed tangential at times, Simon changing from one subject to another. He said that was to make the conversation varied.
I asked if he needed any help, he said he needed space to work, but did not want weekly assessments from mental health services, and that he'd previously agreed to the appointment today but after thinking about it, decided he didn't want to attend. Simon agreed that I can call him from time to time but did not want to meet with me when I offered. He said he would call me if he feels he needs help in future. I asked Simon to consider having a low threshold for asking for help and not to let things get very bad if he feels he would like to contact me.
Although the content of Simon's speech was not bizarre, it did appear that he expressed paranoid thoughts at times, in addition to his behaviour of recording and monitoring of others. Simon made a clear view that he did not wish to have continued engagement with mental health services, and it is my view that he has the capacity to make this decision. I will discuss the case with the clinical team and other staff/managers as appropriate regarding future action from mental health services and the EIP team in particular

Any application would be looked at on its own merits. The test for the application would ultimately be 1 Is that person responsible to ensure the promotion of the licensing objectives?'.
If the ASBO relates to unlicensed events i.e. raves, then this clearly demonstrates a risk to the prevention of crime and disorder licensing objective.
The MPS would make representations to the Licensing Authority due to the risk posed.
This does not mean a licence would not be granted, you would have to satisfy any Licensing Authority that you pose no risk to the licensing objectives.

117 woke me up by attacking me on purpose by stamping and dropping articles above my head!
Continually, reiterating to flushing the toilet when I am in the bathroom being sick in my toilet because they made me ill
Banging with objects onto the internal main buildings walls and floors, so to intimidate surely me and maybe others living close by whom may be present to an extent only worthwhile for the perpetrators selfless glory, In them perpetrators knowing that their behaviour would only leave all those getting victimized towards getting left by their wrongful actions as to being put into a state of a mental health patient and not rightfully with this occurring within mine and their rented or paid for homes!
The occupiers of 117 the Mathiyalagan family and also Stain Curtis off 111 Burncroft Avenue and continue to Slamming the water tap on and off, causing damage to my health and the buildings fixtures at an unacceptable rate!
They all mentioned in the address of 117 Burncroft Avenue keep Dropping articles on to their own wooden flooring to make loud banging noises all day and night!
117 - Slamming the main, communal entrance door closed!
Stain will not stop banging on the kitchen wall with intent of victimising me on a full 24-hour assault!
Address of 117 Burncroft Avenue attacking me by the continual dismay of the kitchen draw being slammed shut or opened either way it got effectually, closed, to then anon after aurally perceive the sharpening of the kitchen utilities knifes to a fictitious extent to make a constructive sense of logic and reason, visible for explication of any benevolent character of themselves with the time need to look after an Adelson in today's word safely!

Subject: Simon Cordell v. The Metropolitan Police Commissioner - appeal against the imposition of an ASBO to be heard at Wood Green Crown Court on 22nd February 2016
To: Adrian.Coombs@essex.pnn.police.uk
Dear Superintendent Coombs
I am representing Simon Cordell in respect of an appeal against a standalone ASBO that was imposed at Highbury Corner Magistrates Court on 4th August 2015.
One of the many incidents referred to in the bundle as a reason cited requesting the ASBO is date specific on 6th,7th and 8th June 2014 at Progress Way, Enfield.

Miss Lorraine Cordell, Simon Cordell's mother researched the internet for any information in relation to Progress Way incident on 6th and 7th June 2014 to try to show that her son was not involved in this incident and did not set up the rave. etc. She found an article on the internet which had your contact details. She states that she telephoned you regarding this incident as she believes that the event originally planned in Essex relocated to Progress Way due a male called Chris Lurcher Lewis posting an entry on a Facebook page. We are interested in whether this information is accurate and also whether you took any action to prevent this event from being set up elsewhere. Miss Cordell refers to you are stating that you issued a dispersal notice and she also states that you notified your colleagues in the Met regarding this.
The Met Police are accusing Simon Cordell of setting up this event at Progress Way. They have also only produced evidence from 7th June 2014 in relation to CAD messages that appear to relate to a number of different GPS Locations, one of which is Crown Road, near Southbury Road where another rave was taking place.
We are seeking to show the court that Mr Simon Cordell did not organise this event and that another male did. We are also seeking to establish that the Met Police could have closed this event down on 6th June 2014 when they were aware that it had started up i.e. the dispersal notice that you issued would demonstrate this.
We would very much appreciate if you could give this matter your earliest attention and provide us with a statement concerning the event that was originally scheduled to set up in Essex but due to your vigilance was stopped. Could you please provide specific detail of any event page/ media publication that you monitored and whether you relayed this information to the Met and they simply did not act on your information.
Can you also please confirm whether Simon Cordell was present for the Essex event and whether he was one of the organisers that you served the dispersal notice on or telephoned during your enquiries.
We thank you in advance for your kind assistance in this matter and we await hearing from you at your earliest convenience.
Yours faithfully

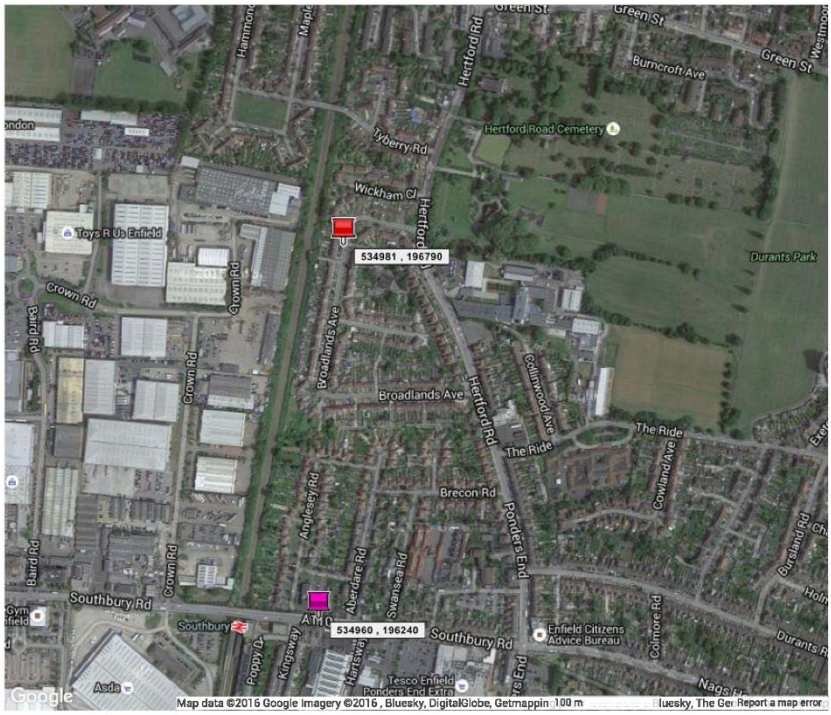
Simon please look at this email and attachments and see if it ok to send Josey please as I am not sending it without your say so.
Hi Josey
I know it is the weekend and I am not asking you to reply to this over the weekend but if you could please do this on Monday, I would be grateful.
I am very worried and know that things will not be ready for the 22/02/2016 when this 3-day trial is due to start.
You don't have a barrister yet and from what you have said all the barristers you asked have said no they will not deal with this case as it is to large, and I am very worried as any barrister will not time to go over all the paper work if they agreed to take this on.
I don't know what will happen in a case if you can't get a barrister as this has never happened. And I don't want a barrister turning up that don't know anything about this case nor does Simon.
I am not sure what is going on with the public order unit information I know you said you can deal with this when you got the refusal from the section 35 DPA and FOI Act you put in from Val Tanner. Also I have large issues with how she did the refusal due to the rules that are set when a DPA request or a FOI request is put in. it has to be sent to the data protection officer to deal with it, Val Tanner should not have just been able to refuse this. But as far as I am aware nothing has been done can you please explain what your plans are for this matter please.
There has been no list given to the court for witnesses that will need to be called and this is worrying me a great deal as they can just say sorry your witness list was not in time it should have been in for the 8th Feb 2016.
We were meant to be asking for all the missing CAD's and for them to un blacked the CAD's grid ref out for all grid ref this would be

- ATT - Map grid Ref:
- INC - Map Grid Ref:
- CALL LOC - Map Grid Ref:



The reason for this is please see attached PDF and you will see why.
Also I cannot see why nearly full pages are blacken out, I cannot understand a need for this as far as I am aware the only thing that should be needed to be blacked out is the information as to the caller. Why would there be a need to blacken out full pages.
Also on page 39 statement of PC Jason Ames there is a next CAD that is missing CAD 9717 09/08/2014 that related to the intelligence received to the illegal rave on Millmarsh Lane the information in that CAD must have given the information to the address as PC Jason Ames and Aaron King went right to the address, this is Every Decibel Matters. Please also see Aaron King statement page 41. I believe the information came from the public order unit for Every Decibel Matters. Due to this post which I have attached to this email.

I know you had all the information that was meant to be asked for re the CAD's. And I not sure if anything has been done about this. Or what the plan of action will be for this is.
I know you have sent the email now to Superintendent Coombs for him to do a statement, we don't know if this will come back in time, I know when I spoke to him he said he was willing to do a statement but that was a long time ago.
This case has made Simon so ill they have the information on the police Systems Josey they know this was not Simon already. Are they allowed to withhold information they have got that they know will prove someone has not done what they say to get a case proved or guilty?
Josey this needs to go back to court ASAP as I do not want the judge blaming Simon that things have not be done and it is not ready. the judge needs to understand the information we are after and why.
Regards
Lorraine

Hi Josey
What I forgot to add is where you put the information we got only started from the 07th June 2014 the police in the application have been proved wrong and there got to be information as from the 6th June 2014 as if you look at page 34 and 35 of the bundle you will see PC Donald McMillan states from the 6th to the 8th June 2014 so he is the only one who has said the truth as to the dates at Progress Way. I should have added this to the information that you got wrong in the email to Superintendent Coombs in my below email sorry

Hi Josey
He served a dispersal notice which would have only covered Essex and an order to not setup within 24 hours after they were dispersed from Essex it is that order not to setup for 24 which would cover the UK as it comes under the public order act.
He also landed in a helicopter in the Field they were going to use in Essex as they were out all day looking for the location.
He called the organiser many times way before the date of the rave to try and get it stopped.
He told me on the phone all of this and that he had called and spoke to a Superintendent in the met police and gave them all the information as he was still not sure due to the boundaries if the rave would take place in Essex or the MET area so told the Superintendent in the Met to keep a close eye on the event page. he also said he took an inspector's name that would be on duty that full weekend in cause of problems.
| So there was a lot of information passed to the Met police.
He also said after we spoke in an email that he had got his full file and notes out, but this was back in Sep 2015.
He has also got pictures of Chris in that file.
401,
He said more than this but can't remember it all but I did send you an email with everything back in Sep 2015 after I spoke to him.

Every Decibel Matters
10 August
We apologise profusely for the outcome of tonight however the circumstances were beyond our control We had police turn up at both of our houses threatening us with arrest if this event were to have happened In addition to that we had a massive venue in harrow but police spent the day looking for us in the area with helicopters leaving us no option but to relocate With all odds against us. we still tried our absolute hardest to deliver however within 30 minutes of sending out the location we had police turn up and they simply did not have a bar of it from us. We really are sorry for tonight as we were truly as excited as you were. We will be back in the future to make amends for this
We hope you all manage to have an amazing night anyway. Sorry guys! The Every Decibel Matters Team!

Dear Nicholas Foster
I sent you a Subject Access Request on the 27/01/2016 along with a letter of authority; I got given with your email, as we got told you are the person who deals with Subject Access Requests.
We got a read reply but did not get an email back saying you are dealing with this request; I know a Subject Access Request can take up to 40 days to deal with. But I do not want to be waiting 40 Days and then find out you are the wrong person to deal with this request.
Could you please reply via email and let me know, if you are the correct person who deals with Subject Access Requests please and if not, could you give me the person names and email who deals with this please.

I have still not heard anything about the complaint that was put in on the 16/10/2015 or the below email asking it to be taken to a stage 2 complaint due to not hearing about thing back from my 1st complaint. Please see attached an Authority Letter from my son and can this be placed on file within Enfield Council departments so that I will not have any problems talking or writing on my son's Mr Simon Cordell Behalf. I believe Louise Brown when she called on the 26/01/2016 at around 14:20 to speak to my son, said that a letter of Authority would be needed to also be covered with Mr Simon Cordell ID and proof of his signature, but I have found out this is not needed. That only the letter of Authority is needed. Louise Brown also said that my son had also never contacted the police about Debbie when I said he had we do have all the CAD's and the police have been to my son's home. We have also spoken to the Mental health team and shown them all the letters Debbie puts into my son's door we also told them we have videos of what Debbie is doing which they told us to keep them safe, and also told them about the lack of response to emails and complaints, they were very shocked that Enfield Council is doing nothing, and that the 1st complaint that was put in was 16/10/2015 and that is now over 4 months ago and we have heard anything.

Louise Brown / Jackie Gubby,

I have still not had a reply to my complaint to ASB unit dated the 16/10/2015. Louise Brown your last email was dated the 03/11/2015 where you said you would send a response outlining action to date, this has not happened, and I fill that my complaint is not being dealt with correctly. Therefore, I would like this to go to stage 2 complaints, as nothing is being done. Could you please make sure this is handed to the right department that deals with stage 2 complaints? And email me so I know this has been done.

Regards

Dear Ms Ward

Freedom of Information Request Reference No: 2015120000861

I respond in connection with your request for information which was received by the Metropolitan Police Service (MPS) on 15/12/2015. I note you seek access to the following information:

- Whether Simon Cordell has been named as an organiser of any illegal raves on the Metropolitan Police Area of Greater London since The Public Order Unit was tasked by the Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police in June 2014, following the Croydon rave
- Whether Simon Cordell has been contacted by the Public Order Unit to desist from organising illegal raves
- Whether Superintendent Adrian Coombes from Essex Police notified the Metropolitan Police regarding Hippy Fest, an event that was originally planned as an open air rave in Essex but potentially could have been set up in the Metropolitan Police area due to the closeness of the border of both forces. Whether he provided information regarding Simon Cordell as being the organiser of this event, or if not then who did Superintendent Coombes state was the organiser.
- Please provide the details held of the organisers of the following illegal raves: (I) Wharf Wood (Canary Wharf) 12.01.2013 (ii) Cannabis Day 420 day 24.04.2014 (iii) Unit 5 St Georges Ind Estate, White Hart Lane, N17 (iv) 1 Falcon Park, Neasden Lane 20.06.2014 (v) Carpet Right, A10 Enfield
- (vi) Millmarsh Lane, Enfield 27.07.2014 (vii) Millmarsh Lane, Enfield 09.08.2014 and
- 10.08.2014
- How many of the above events were organised by Every Decible Matters and who are the persons attributed to Every Decible Matters

Following receipt of your request searches were conducted within the MPS to locate information relevant to your request.

EXTENT OF SEARCHES TO LOCATE INFORMATION

To locate the information relevant to your request searches were conducted within the MPS.

DECISION

Before I explain the reasons for the decisions I have made in relation to your request, I thought that it would be helpful if I outline the parameters set out by the Freedom of Information Act 2000 (the Act) within which a request for information can be answered.

407,

The Act creates a statutory right of access to information held by public authorities. A public authority in receipt of a request must, if permitted, confirm if the requested information is held by that public authority and, if so, then communicate that information to the applicant.

The right of access to information is not without exception and is subject to a number of exemptions which are designed to enable public authorities to withhold information that is not suitable for release. Importantly, the Act is designed to place information into the public domain, that is, once access to information is granted to one person under the Act, it is then considered public information and must be communicated to any individual should a request be received.
In accordance with the Act, this response represents a Partial Refusal Notice for this particular request under Section 17(1)&(4) of the Act.
Constituents of this information attract section 31 and 40 of the Act.
Please see the Legal Annex for the sections of the Act that are referred to in this response.
The MPS can provide information which answers both question 1 and 2 of this response.
This information can be accessed via the link to the MPS external website, provided below.
http://content.met.police.uk/News/Man-given-a-five-year ASBO/1400033211719/1257246745756
In case you have any difficulty with the link, I have provided you with another link to information in the public domain.
http://www.enfieldindependent.co.uk/news/13595919.Man_given_ASBO_for_organising_illegal_raves/ REASONS FOR DECISION
Some of the information you have requested is exempt by the virtue of Section 31 (1)(a)(b) & (3) of the Act.
Section 31 (1) of the Act is applied to information, that if it was disclosed, would or would be likely to cause significant harm to the functions of a public authority (in this instance the MPS) and Section 31 (3) is applied if to confirm or deny that information is held would prejudice any of the matters in subsection (1).
Section 31(1) is a prejudice based qualified exemption and there is a requirement to articulate the harm that would be caused, as well as carrying out a public interest test (PIT) for both subsections (1) and (3).
The purpose of the PIT is to establish whether the 'Public Interest' lies in disclosing or withholding the requested information for subsection (1) and to articulate the harm that would be caused in confirming or denying that any information is held for subsection (3).
Section 31(1) Evidence of Harm
You have asked whether Superintendent Adrian Coombes from Essex Police notified the MPS of certain events.
There is sufficient information within the public domain which confirms the sharing of information by police forces and certain law enforcement agencies and partners. To confirm what information has been shared and by whom, will affect the prevention and detection of crime, which is the core function of the MPS. The disclosure of specific information will affect the law enforcement and tactical approaches undertaken by the MPS.
Public Interest Test
Section 31(1) Public interest considerations favouring disclosure
Disclosing and confirming intelligence could promote public trust in providing transparency and demonstrating openness and accountability into where the MPS spends public funds. This transparency would provide a better awareness to the general public regarding this type of sharing of information to prevent crime. Disclosure can aid accurate debate around the use MPS resources and the MPS's approach to tackling and deterring this type of crime. This could empower individuals to make more effective decisions about their own activities regarding criminal behaviour.
408,
Section 31(1) Public interest considerations favouring non-disclosure Policing today is intelligence led and the MPS share information with other law enforcement agencies as part of their investigative process. To disclose what intelligence was shared and by whom (on a case by case basis) would identify tactical approaches used by police forces and identify cases or persons of interest to the police. This could hinder the prevention and detection of crime as well as undermine the partnership approach to investigations and law enforcement.
Balancing Test
The MPS is charged with enforcing the law, preventing and detecting crime and protecting the communities we serve. Whilst there is a public interest in the transparency policing abilities, processes and techniques, there is a strong public interest in safeguarding the integrity of the MPS.
It is therefore in our opinion, that the balancing test for full disclosure is not made out.
Section 31(3) - Evidence of Harm
The public interest is not what interests the public but what will be of greater good if released to the community as a whole. It is not in the public interest to disclose information that may compromise the MPS's ability to complete any future criminal investigations.
You have also asked for the details held of organisers for the stated illegal raves you referred to above, and whether any of the events were organised by Every Decible Matters.
The release of such information, if it exists, would reveal policing tactics regarding who was of interest to the police generally. This could be to the detriment of providing an efficient policing service and a failure in providing a duty of care to all members of the public.
Information disclosed under the Act is considered to be a release to the world as once the information is published the public authority in this case the MPS has no control over what use is made of that information. Whilst not questioning the motives of the applicant it could be of use to those who seek to disrupt any police investigation as it would by a process of elimination, enable them to identify whether specific people or groups have or have not been subject of a police investigation. This would lead to an increase of harm to either the investigation itself or the subject of the investigation. To release details as to whether specific individuals, groups or events have or have not been investigated would enable any member of the public to define and identify who or who is not of interest to the MPS.

This could be to the detriment of providing an efficient policing service and a failure in providing a duty of care to all members of the public.

Section 31(3) Factors favouring confirmation or denial

By confirming or denying whether information is held would enable the public to have a better understanding of the type of events and individuals the police are focussing their resources on, in order to disrupt and deter such events from taking place, in line with their law enforcement role.
Better public awareness may lead to more information from the public about individuals who they believe may be linked to organising illegal raves, thereby providing intelligence to reduce crime.

Section 31(3) Factors against confirmation or denial

By confirming or denying that the requested information exists, law enforcement would be compromised which would hinder the prevention and detection of crime. More crime of this nature would be committed, and individuals would be placed at risk. This would result in further risks to the public and consequently require the use of more MPS resources.
Disclosure of information, if it exists would provide valuable intelligence into the public domain, which would be useful to criminals captured by this request, in that they can take steps to evade apprehension and prosecution, thereby continuing with criminal behaviour. This will directly affect the law enforcement role of the MPS.

Balance Test - Section 31(3) Law Enforcement

The disclosure of this information to the public by the MPS would undermine individuals' confidence in 409,
helping the MPS and would furthermore impact on the trust of witnesses in making statements in the future.
Anything that undermines this would have a detrimental affect reducing the quality of information the MPS receives and consequently compromise any ongoing or future similar investigations. Therefore, I consider that considerations favouring non-disclosure of the requested information, if it exists, far outweighs the considerations favouring disclosure.

However, this should not be taken as necessarily indicating that any information that would meet your request exists or does not exist.

Section 40(5) - Personal Information / Absolute Exemption

You have asked for personal information about individuals attributed to Every Decible Matters. To confirm or deny whether personal information exists in response to your request could publicly reveal information about an individual or individuals, thereby breaching the right to privacy afforded to persons under the Data Protection Act 1998 (DPA). When confirming or denying that information is held would breach an individual's rights under the DPA, Section 40(5) of the Act becomes an absolute exemption, and there is no requirement for me to provide evidence of the prejudice that would occur, or to conduct a public interest test.
The MPS is unable to confirm and unable to deny whether the information in relation to this request is held.
To ensure you understand why this response is necessary I have provided excerpts from the Information commissioner's office (ICO):
The Duty to Confirm or Deny
The Information Commissioner's Office (ICO) guidance titled 'When to refuse to confirm or deny information is held' states:
'In certain circumstances, even confirming or denying that requested information is held can reveal information...
It can be important to use a neither confirm nor deny response consistently, every time a certain type of information is requested, regardless of whether the information is actually held or not...
Within the ICO guidance there is a specific police example:
'...a police force may hold information regarding particular properties they have under surveillance - it is likely that if a request were made for information about the surveillance of a certain property, this information would be exempt under section 30 (investigations and proceedings conducted by public authorities)...
Furthermore, this would apply even if information was requested about a property not under surveillance. If a police force only upheld its duty to confirm or deny where it was not keeping properties under surveillance, an applicant could reasonably assume that where the police force refused to confirm or deny, the property named in the request was under surveillance.'
A public authority could therefore refuse to confirm or deny whether it holds information about a property under surveillance...
This should not be taken as necessarily indicating that any information that would meet your request exists or does not exist.

I dislike to understand that you get upset, but I cannot blame you as you help me as my mother and friend a lot in that sense, you say I throw tantrums but you are the one saying you will delete all my life files rather than just send them to me; I am not a three-year-old kid, this is why I keep telling you to stop answering questions when people are asking me them. And I do not think that of myself that I done nothing wrong in my life on earth, but I think that if I got left to my own judgement, and you to action to such guidance when supporting me that I would make the right decisions for myself, I am not different from any other person who has got made to pay so many judges, police offices and solicitors wages growing up in London just because of wanting to do something of themselves. In trying and doing well, but no matter what I do I get treated, different, as if I am the bad guy all the time. I look around and see the rich getting richer; I believe being white should not be the main element of which you can be and what you may achieve in life as it seems to have been for me. All the good things I do compared to a lot of the people I know that should have got noticed and taken into account. we live in 2016 a modern society and should all be equal to one and another, but most times this does not happen, the fact is that the police led me and tucker into believing that we may be able to help others and repeat history by becoming like a Glastonbury but in London, on stead I feel like they gave him the chance while ripping it from me helping the wrong person, at the time of the generations of a large circle of people coming together united and into force. I got locked away under one or another conditions for years now with no justice, so yes my life has been a lot of stress for you, myself and everyone and as for being disrespectful yes, in life, I may have and I am sorry for that, but you must admit: that if it was not for you, always doing Josie's job and blocking me, because you trusted in your instincts and her word ,against what I am saying: is best for me, and I turn out to be right, Anyone would get upset.

I have taken time to listen to my solicitor's advice in regard to the applicant's proposal of an ASBO order that was on the

13/08/2014	ASBO application was in progress and being created by Steve Elesmore
13/08/2014	A meeting was held with Steve Hodgson who is a representative for Enfield Local Authority Council and Jane Johnson on behalf of the Metropolitan police alongside others.
12/09/2014	A ASBO Application bundle is said to have been served on Mr Simon Cordell at 109 Burncroft Avenue, to which he disputes.

06/10/2014	Mr Simon Cordell was meant to have a hearing for an interim Order, but legal aid had not been granted. Michael Carroll acting solicitor came to court; the judge overturned and granted legal aid. The application for the Interim hearing the judge would not hear on this day.
22/10/2014	Interim hearing but could not go ahead due to Andy Locke Acting Barrister had a flood at his home address.
05/11/2014	Interim hearing and the order were granted.
02/12/2014	Mr Simon Cordell's mother has a note on her mobile phone, stating he was in court at Highbury Corner not sure what it was for in the ASBO Application.
09th 10th 11th 03/2015	Meant to have been set for the full ASBO Application trial but the court only booked 1-day hearing, this was then put off until the 03rd and 04th Aug 2015

Si-Information-Part-Edited-01.doc

It is said that Mr Cordell had been found proven partly on the 3rd 4th August 2015, to which he disputes to be correct.
An appeal date has been set for Feb 22nd 23rd 24th 2016
Legal aid was re granted on the 00/00/2015
In understanding that Mr Simon Cordell's acting solicitor has explained to him that she cannot arrange a barrister that every barrister that has been asked will not take the case on due to the size of the case and due to it being at appeal stage and legal aid will not cover the cost of such a large case. I have been explained that Andy Locke who did the trial at the lower court is on sabbatical leave till April 2016, and that the acting solicitors wish to put the appeal date of until April 2016 when Andy Locke will be back from sabbatical leave.
If granted by the Judge this would in fact set the new appeal date to be two months after the already agreed appeal date of 22rnd February 2016, if the court agreed to such a date, contained within the time scale of April 2016 and not any time after, due to the court diary already being pre booked.
Mr Simon Paul Cordell is asking for a Former judge to examine the role of police officers, who present the applicant cases of an ASBO order against himself.
Mr S. Cordell is asking for this to be assessed and agreed under the grounds of Article 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights, the Right to a Fair Trial Act 1998, Legislation.
Which in legal terms, should be the best means of separating the guilty from the innocent and protecting against injustice. Without this right, the rule of law and public faith in the justice system collapse. The Right to a Fair Trial is one of the cornerstones of a just society.
Article 6 the Right to a fair hearing:
The right to a fair trial is fundamental to the rule of law and to democracy itself.
The right applies to both criminal and civil cases, although certain specific minimum rights set out in Article 6 apply only in criminal cases.
The right to a fair trial is absolute and cannot be limited. It requires a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law. The procedural requirements of a fair hearing might differ according to the circumstances of the accused.

418,

Si-Information-Part-Edited-01.doc

The right to a fair hearing, which applies to any criminal charge as well as to the determination of civil rights and obligations, contains a number of requirements and I believe the causes below full within them requirements.

An ASBO order has been appealed against after the magistrates court decided a decision to prove the application case in part but with no legality being proven, the decision had been made against Mr Simon Cordell, this was at Highbury Corner, Magistrates Court, on the 4th August 2015 in pursuant to s.1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 it was agreed to make him subject to an Anti-Social behaviour order. This was in pursuit for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis.

The respondent's case is that Mr Simon Cordell has been accused of being integrally involved in the organisation of illegal raves in London and Enfield.

Part of the Barrister submissions that represented Simon Cordell, had been that the allegations were that he was involved in the organizing of illegal raves, but the applicant hadn't adduced evidence, of trespass or evidence of breach of the licensing Act 2003 which is a requirement for proving, that an indoor rave was illegal. The Deputy District Judge ruled that the applicant did not need to prove illegality, - all the needed to prove was he had acted in an anti-social manner. In the view of the barrister this was a very questionable decision: firstly, the applicant based their case on the illegality of the raves rather than the fact of the raves themselves and secondly, without proof of illegality the presumption of innocence leads to the conclusion that the raves were legal, and thus, Simon being prohibited from engaging in an ostensibly lawful activity requires more careful consideration on issues of proportionality.

It should be agreed with the barrister statement as when dealing with this case Mr Simon Cordell was addressing the applicant's case to prove that he had not been involved in organizing illegal raves, as this is what the application against him was.

Yet in the application papers themselves and on trial at the lower court no police officer had said Mr Simon acted in an anti-social manner, nor did any of the hearsay witnesses give an ID of any people.

Other points of concern are.

Inaccuracy's leading to incorrect time stamps contained within the applicant's bundle created by Steve Elsmore on the 13/8/2014.

Please note every day the met police call centre starts at CAD 01 and goes up to the average of 10,742 to 15,000 callers per day the clock is reset to 01 each day at 00:00 hours.

(We can tell this by the number of CAD incident numbers supplied, within the applicants ASBO bundle supporting the evidence supplied, for a standalone ASBO order to be gained against Mr Simon Cordell.

On the average the Met police call centre will receive on the average of 300 callers per hour as marked and time stamped below.

Every half hour is 150 callers on average and every 15 mins is 75 callers on average Every 7 half mins is 33 callers on average and 3 half mins 17 callers on average

Please take note to (CAD number / Incident Number 10481 7th June 14) this is the 10,481 Met police call of the 7th June 2014 time stamped 22:47 hours.

So it is incorrect for (CAD 10506 7th June 14) externally inputted 25 calls later, to have an earlier time stamp of the 7th June 2014 at 22:44 hours.

In fact the time should have been 22:49 hours for CAD 10506.

Please take note to (CAD number / Incident Number 4323 7th June 2014 at 12:25)

How many calls from public did police receive?
Witness
In excess of 15 calls - how many to the same venue and not other address.
Doe's does not know the number of callers that are in relation to each of these occasions.

Where did you get such info officer.

Why did officer no and rely on Pc Kings Statements later than on the Crimit's reported. Officer no and involved in taking info from Pc King.
(Confesses he did it.)
He did not notice the discrepancy regarding official statements.
Have heard of Every Decibel Matters - They were advertising and I believe the D knows a member of the above company.
No evidence D is involved in running their operations.
No attempt has been made to speak to directors of company.
No reason to why you didn't /contact the company.
I think from memory have met D once @ Edmonton police station.
(At Page 16 1st paragraph - not consistent to fact that he met him on the 7/6/2014) All notes with cad number were listed from reports not officers' own words - same applies from Cads that had known input.
Has not made attempts to contact owners of premises.
Officers unable to assist courts in relation to why statements were not signed on notebooks profiles.
Another example of doings put in statements to blacken Mr Cordell's evidence in statement @ point 12, No convictions that of class A drugs unlike what's written in Statements - another example of untrue cut and paste.

My solicitor tried to get taken off record for this case
On the 19/02/2016
My solicitor tried to get taken off record for this case, which got denied by the court. What I understand to be correct practice and would like to maintain is for my solicitor to act in a timely manner in co-Hurst with the respondent and I have all the case files ready for my Appeal and in an addition to deal with the issues about disclosure, I am also concerned about this being concluded in a fair and timely manner and so that the requests get completed so not to be waiting until the last moment and not ready as you honour has ordered on time. I would still like to be able to sit down with my barrister and for him to hear and take on board what I am explaining and for them procedures not to make me rushed into seeking the correct legal guidance when adequate time has got given by you for this to get accomplished. The past six months has gotten granted so that in the final stages leading to the appeal for myself not to still be requesting disclosure that I believe I am sure to be: entitled to it as it plays such a fatal role in my defence. I do not feel that it is fair on my solicitor to get placed in a perdition by the respondent for not complying with what has gotten requested of themselves, so for them to seek re disclosure of what we requested, as my solicitor firm have now had to draft another letter the day before the court hearings and then expect me to rush and go over everything in time so to be able to make any amendments that I will needed to stand a fair trial, for myself to get placed in a confusing perdition as my solicitor refused to re request the same disclosure as prior requested as understood to be under your order. I have asked time and time again for documents to get added to my bundle the clerk, court notes of the trial, along with many other documents, I asked many times since the trial for it to get taken back to court to get the conditions I am placed on defined as this never got done at the trial even when Andy Locke and my mother was asking the judge to do this, this has agreed to get done but never has been, I sent emails and it can take months for a reply, this also leads me to further once again having to keep emailing to even get a response. Throughout the duration of the Asbo proceedings I gained so many emails which prove the truth of my statements that I quote that get contained within the context of this short report about what I am saying but I should not need to use these, with my representing solicitor firm, whenever there legal guidance may get required and always stayed happy with their services and persons this has imprinted a high level of respect for them, I disheartened right now as I believe if the solicitors deal with things on time it would have not come to them once again asking to get removed from this case.

Simon needs to finalise his statement. The 90-page document will be sent across will have to be chopped back unless he wants me to email that across to the Public Defender Service.
Also, in an email dated 12th February 2016 the screen shot from Every Decible Matters dated 10th August I do not believe will assist. If, however Simon wants this included to demonstrate that no ASBO has been applied for against Moses etc then please confirm by return email as I am in the process of emailing this across to the Public Defender.
There are two attachments to the email (a) the screen shot from Every Decible Matters (b) Crown Road grid reference map showing a Crown Road rave in contradiction to the evidence that PC Elsmore gave.
Please get back to me as soon as possible.

no Josie I am not happy, I did not write this with you or was not involved in the making of it, you want to deal with the applicants skeleton bundle but I have yet been able to put my updated deference statements in towards the police statements which the applicant clearly states, that they rely upon in the skeleton bundle point 2. I did send them to you but could not draft them, with the skills need by a person of your profession. I listen to your legal guidance and it is up to me to make the decision to which way I decide to steer my case and evidence. I do trust in you, but it is legally right for the decision to be mine. I would like the legal points of my defence added as the back bone to my statements such as a copy of the licencing act 2003, copy of the magistrates court transcripts, a copy of a section 144 a copy of an environmental section 80 abatement notice, Adr carriage of dangerous gas's, parliaments official documentation regarding the word (rave) so the acting barrister can clearly state out the points of law relevant to my plea of innocents, I would also like it noted that I do not think that I can stand a fair trial with the time stamps being the way that they are under article 6 of my human rights and I have drafted a letter in regards to this which I would like to go over with yourself. I have made a bundle of all the relevant documentation oi think is relevant towards my case but would like to go over it with you if and when possible please.

SIMON CORDELL APPELLANT RESPONSE TO RESPONDENT SKELETON ARGUMENT 20.02.2016.docx
IN THE WOOD GREEN CROWN COURT CASE NUMBER: A21050064
IN THE MATTER OF AN APPEAL AGAINST AN ANTI-SOCIAL BEHAVIOUR ORDER BETWEEN:
SIMON CORDELL
Appellant
-and-
THE COMMISSIONER OF POLICE FOR THE METROPOLIS
Respondent

Listing: For appeal hearing 22.02.2016 for 3 days
Issues: (I) whether the Appellant has acted in an anti-social manner
- whether an ASBO is necessary

1. The Appellant's case is that he has not acted in an anti-social manner on any occasion.
2. The Appellant has not organised or supplied any equipment for any the events cited in the Respondent's original application.
3. The Appellant challenges and disputes the evidence presented that he was an organiser. The Appellant will deal with each event, chronologically.
4. In response to paragraph 13 of the Respondent's skeleton argument the Appellant will state that he did not organise this rave on 7th / 8th June 2014. The Appellant will state that this event

431,

SIMON CORDELL APPELLANT RESPONSE TO RESPONDENT SKELETON ARGUMENT 20.02.2016.docx commenced on 6th June 2014 and not 7th June 2014. The Appellant will state that the Respondent has wrongly specified that this event started on 7th June 2014. The statements on PC Donald Mc Millian dated 19th August 2014 confirms the date the event started.
The Appellant will state that he did not provide any sound recording equipment, speakers, generators etc to this event. The Appellant will state that both him and his brother Tyrone Benjamin have been wrongly accused of organising this event. The Appellant will state that his brother Tyrone Benjamin was incapacitated due to a major traffic accident that resulted in both his legs being broken and also his pelvis. He was immobile. The Appellant relies on the account he gave in his initial statement dated 24th February 2015.

I. The Appellant disputes that he was inside the premises. The Appellant will state that he was not the male identified by security at the gate. The Appellant takes issue with the evidence of Inspector Hamill and APS Miles. The Appellant will state that he was approaching the premises to drop off keys to a friend. The Appellant will state that he had left his cousin's leaving party, Dwayne Edward's to do this. The Appellant was approached by police and Environmental officers who tried to serve a noise abatement notice. The Appellant refused to accept the notice and he did not engage in any conversation with the police. The Appellant was not asked whether he had organised the party, had he been asked this then the Appellant would have denied this.

II. The Appellant disputes that admitted to Inspector Skinner that he organised the event on 7th / 8th June 2014.

III. The Appellant disputes that he admitted to Inspector Skinner that he organised the rave that was stopped by police on 19th July 2014. The Appellant will state that he never entered the premises. The Appellant will state that he never provided any equipment's or generators etc to any persons inside the premises. The Appellant will state that none of his vehicles were inside these premises. CAD 10635 19THJULY2014 (R 303-313). The Appellant will state that he is mixed race and not white and therefore he could not have been one of the males inside the premises. The Appellant will also state that CAD980419JUL14 entry 22.12:53 police did not see any (PG 301 R bundle) audio equipment inside the building.

IV. The Appellant accepts that he had a conversation with PC Edgoose concerning his efforts to establish a mini festival or the community within the Enfield Borough. He accepts that he discussed equipment. He totally disputes any conversations about Occupy London, Black Block, anarchist groups of Notting hill carnival. The Appellant disputes that he was driving in the manner alleged and believes that had he been driving like this then he would have been arrested.

SIMON CORDELL APPELLANT RESPONSE TO RESPONDENT SKELETON ARGUMENT 20.02.2016.docx

V.The Appellant does not accept that he had any sound recording equipment at this incident. He attended this incident in his car. He had no sound system, speakers, generators etc. The Appellant specifically requests the CAD 9717 referred to in the statement of PC Ames as he believes that this will reveal the true identity of the organisers.

5. The Appellant will state that he has no connection with Every Decible matter. The Appellant will state that he met Moses Howe in 2011. Moses Howe was a sound engineer. The Appellant will state that he was offered a three-month trial at Club Juice,

6. 1 Jute Lane, Enfield, EN3 7PJ to see if he could increase numbers to the Club. Moses Howe was going to be the Appellant's sound engineer. The Appellant will state that Liam Philip was an MC who was going to inspect Club Jute. The Appellant provided entertainment at the Club previous to this. See attached promotional flier for an event, "Rewired" organised on 23rd July 2011 at Club Jute featuring DJ Substance and DJ Calous. This was licensed. The Appellant however had to stop due to police persistently stopping and searching him.

7. The Appellant will state in response to paragraph 17 that he had nothing to do with the organisation of the event at Progress Way that gave rise to the complaints of anti-social behaviour and noise nuisance.

8. The Appellant will state that this ASBO is disproportionate and it prevents him from engaging in lawful business. The ASBO will prevent the Appellant from applying for licences to hold events. The Appellant will state that whilst he is subject to an ASBO he will be prohibited from applying for any entertainment licence and any licence application will automatically fail and therefore this is disproportionate.

9. The Appellant has designed a business plan, a festival plan and community event that sets out clearly the plans for events including marketing, safety, stalls etc and also specifically refers to co-operating with the police. The ASBO prevents any applications from being successful.

10. The Appellant will state that he has never been involved in the organisation of an illegal rave as defined under section 63 of the CJPOA 1994.

11. The Appellant will state that he has never had any equipment seized during an illegal rave as defined by section 63 of the CJPOA 1994. The Appellant will state that there has only been one occasion when his sound system was seized, and he had hired this out to he believed to be a genuine customer. The Appellant will state that

12. The Appellant will also state that the current terms of the ASBO are too broad.

With regards to your statement I have tried to help you with this. I have explained what is not helpful etc. You simply disagree with the advice that I am giving, and this has always been the case. You are misinterpreting the Respondent's case which is simply that the raves / parties whether legal or not cause anti-social behaviour - i.e. sleepless nights, noise, nuisance etc. You dispute that you are the organiser and that is the only facts that I requested information about. The court is not looking at one isolated date but all dates and the conduct on each of the dates. I have also explained to you the events that cause you problems and the reasons why. Organisation is not simply providing equipment, manning the gate but also sourcing premises and I have explained that this can be inferred. Even if a section 144 LAPSO is up there can still be antisocial behaviour albeit the event is not a rave under the legislation.

I have made it very clear the irrelevant points and aspects that do not assist you. You do not accept the advice.

The applicant's case is that I organised illegal raves which caused alarm harm and distress.
To which there is no breach of the licencing 2003 Act or no breach to section 63 present such as tress pass.
The incidents in question are not of a consecutive manner over a long time period and any person not in breach of licencing acts or trespass is entitled to have a party without local authority permission for as long as there is no health and safety risks.
Not that I organised legal moving in or out House party's or birthday parties, with or for others. that caused alarm harm and distress, as they are not a breach of law in doing so without a warning of the local council. With regards to statement I know you have helped me and I have taken a your advice in so many different aspects of the case already, but strongly believe it is in my best interest to confront the police statements point out the consistence's as they seem to be misled to the truth.

as for the Time stamps do I stand a fair trial or would any other person do so if presented with such errors in the evidence, when polices rely on as the case against myself with no civil witness mentioning myself to be present or acting in a manner likely to cause alarm harm distress.
I would also like to point out that as my acting solicitor and that of you having a copy of my criminal record, you would know if I had been the dates in question for acting anti-social, no matter if civil or criminal.
And I do listen to you and respect you and what you say to me, I just some time question it.

Read section 20 of the Skeleton Argument that's why they have now added the word recorded music. as it was not in their application
Live music:
Q: What about Live Music?
A: We are proposing to raise the audience limit for live music to 500 to bring it in parity with the other deregulated activities.
Q: Why aren't you deregulating live music fully apart from in licensed premises?
A: The Government is fully behind creativity. But there is a balance to be struck in protecting our communities from potential noise nuisance. We think that the exemptions that will be put in place, as well as raising the audience threshold from 200 to 500 people in on-licensed premises and in workplaces, is a great deal for sensible musicians and audiences.
Q: Why aren't you waiting to assess the impact of the Live Music Act 2012 before going ahead with further deregulatory measures in this area?
A: To bring it into parity with the other deregulated activities and to avoid unnecessary confusion. But we will of course keep all these changes under review
Q: Why aren't you extending the Live Music Act deregulation until midnight?
A: Residents groups, local authorities and the police all had concerns about deregulating beyond 11pm, which is recognised in noise legislation as a time when disturbance caused by noise can have a greater impact. However, we will keep these changes under review.
Q: What is the definition of a workplace in relation to regulated entertainment?

A: The term is defined in the Workplace (Health, Safety and Welfare) Regulations 1992 and is, broadly speaking any non-domestic place where someone works. Recorded music:
Q: What is recorded music?
A: Recorded music activities amount mainly to discos and DJ events - where the audience is there primarily to be entertained by the music activity. If in doubt, check with your local licensing authority.
Q: Why have you not deregulated recorded music?
A: The Government is fully behind the creative industries but there is a balance to be stuck in protecting our communities from potential noise nuisance. We think that the exemptions that will be put in place, as well as the measure for on-licensed premises will be a boost for those holding responsible recorded music events.
Q: Why is live music deregulated in workplaces, but recorded music will not be?
A: As recorded music events are easily portable; they have in the past been more prone to noise and public order problems from unscrupulous operators. We have looked to support responsible community events but retain controls where the risks are higher.
Q: Won't this allow raves?
A: No. Recorded music activities (usually disco and DJ events) will only be deregulated in the following places (between 08:0023:00): In premises with an alcohol licence (unless this has been precluded by a licence^ condition) In events organised by Local authorities, schools, nurseries or hospitals, or in 'community premises'.
Read
Q: What if a recorded music event is noisy? A: Other legislation is already in place which gives powers to Local authorities and the police to deal with issues, arising from a problem event. We do not see this situation as much different to the status quo.
440,

417,
RESPONSE TO HHJ PAWLAK'S LETTER DATED 22ND FEBRUARY 2016
(1) WHAT INVOLVEMENT IN EACH EVENT (RAVE) RELIED ON BY THE RESPONDENT, THE APPELLANT ADMITS TO HAVING HAD ANY INVOVMENT!

(A) 25.05.2014 - 5 ST GEORGES INDUSTRIAL ESTATE, WHITE HART LANE
The Appellant relies on his previous statement served.
The Appellant will state that he was delivering food to some homeless people.
The Appellant will state that there was no rave, no sound equipment, lights, generators etc in his van.
The Appellant will state that there was no rave in progress and no intention for any event to take place.
The Appellant will state that there was a section 144 LAPSO notice clearly displayed by the occupants who were treating the premises as their home.
The Appellant will state that he had empty speaker cases in his van which would not have been able to play any sound as they never had any drivers in the speaker boxes. The van was used to store the speakers.
The Appellant will state that he specifically requested that the officers who attended note down the fact that he had only non-working speakers inside his van and no other component parts for a sound system.
The Appellant will state that he did not commit any criminal offences on 25th May 2014. The Appellant will state that the premises were not broken into as alleged but were being legally used as a home. The Appellant will state that the occupation was legal by virtue of section 144 LAPSO notice being clearly displayed and this is within the law.
The Appellant will state that no Licensing authorisation was required as there was no music being played or intended to be played.
The Appellant will state that he did not engage in any acts of Anti-social behaviour as defined by section 1 of the Act.
The Appellant requests disclosure of the CCTV of the persons breaking into the premises, the CRIS and details of any persons arrested for criminal damage / burglary.
The Appellant will state that he did not break any laws on 25th May 2014, nor did he engage in any acts of anti-social behaviour.

The Appellant will state that the description of events on this day has been altered and recorded in a biased way towards him.
The Appellant requests full details of the original intelligence report inputted on 25th May 2014 and also reasons why there was a need to update this report on 19th June 2014. The Intelligence report should not be allowed in evidence under the hearsay rules as it is prejudicial to him. The report has been amended.
(A) PROGRESS WAY 6th, 7TH AND 8TH JUNE 2014
The Appellant disputes any involvement whatsoever in the event at Progress Way.
The Appellant accepts that he approached the gates on the 08th June 2014 with a view to dropping off house keys to a friend that had been left at his house on an earlier date. The Appellant did not enter the premises / venue at Progress Way.

The Appellant did not provide any sound equipment, speakers, generators to any person inside Progress Way.
The Appellant will state that he is being wrongly accused of organising this rave / event. The Appellant will state his brother is also wrongly named as being involved. The Appellant will state that his brother was severely disabled at the time and in a wheelchair following a very serious road traffic accident which the police are aware off.
The Appellant questions the accuracy and truthfulness of the statements, CADS etc served in support of the above.
The Appellant questions why some of the CAD reports have been redacted. The Appellant believes that the CAD's may well confirm the names of the real organisers, vehicle registrations etc that will confirm no vehicle belonging to the Appellant being inside the venue. The Appellant also questions the chronological sequence of the CAD reports due to the time stamps.

CAD	Num	Date	Time	Page
CAD	2637	07/06/2014	08:18	Page 191 to 195
CAD	2672	07/06/2014	08:16	Page 196 to 198
CAD	3005	07/06/2014	09:22	Page 203 to 205
CAD	3037	07/06/2014	09:20	Page 179 to 183
CAD	10481	07/06/2014	22:47	Page 233 to 237
CAD	10506	07/06/2014	22:44	Page 238 to 241

The Appellant believes that some of the complainants are police officers and no civilians. The Appellant believes that some of the Cads' may relate to completely different areas but are being added incorrectly and linked to Progress Way.

In the interests of a fair hearing the Appellant requests all Cad's cross linked and referred to should be served in an unedited format. All Cad's that do refer to a different location should be removed from the Respondent's bundle as they are too prejudicial.
The Appellant will state that this is yet another example of the police manipulating the evidence to paint him in a bad light. The Appellant strongly believes that the police are presenting their evidence to persuade the court that he was an organiser of this event.
The statements presented are unreliable and prejudicial. The Appellant will state that he cannot possibly have a fair hearing as a result to a breach of regulations inclusive of his Human Rights one of which is article six his right to having a fair hearing will be violated due to the way the Respondent is selecting editing and presenting Cad's. The Appellant specifically requests that the redacted CADS be served unedited or excluded from the Respondent's bundle.
The Appellant will state that he is being deliberately targeted by the police as was his younger brother. Neither organised any event at Progress Way.

The Appellant specifically asks the Respondent to confirm why the event was not closed down or proof of trespass or evidence of profit being made as required under the licensing act 2003 and section 63 of the CJPOA, if it was in fact a rave. The Appellant also asks why went the sound systems not seized under section 63 of the CJPOA.
The Appellant seeks clarification as whether a section 144 LAPSO notice was on display or tress pass had taken place.
The Appellant also questions why the Respondent has not supplied any Cads from 6th June 2014, which is in fact the date when this event started and why so many Cads' are missing from the 07th and the 08th June 2014.
For the purposes of clarity, the Appellant denies being an organiser. He denies providing any sound system equipment to the organisers of this event. He denies entering the venue but accepts that he approached to deliver keys. The Appellant did not commit any criminal offences. The Appellant did not engage in any anti-social behaviour.
(c) FALCON PARK 20TH JUNE 2014
The Appellant was not present at this event.
The Appellant accepts that he hired out his sound equipment in good faith for what he believed to be a house party.
The Appellant will state that he was at home when he was contacted by the hirer to come to collect his equipment which was then seized by police. The Appellant will state that his equipment was restored to him by the police.
The Appellant will state that he did not commit any criminal offences, nor did he engage in any acts of anti-social behaviour.
420,

The Appellant will state that he was not an organiser and merely hired out his equipment in good faith.
The Appellant did not commit any criminal offences.
The Appellant did not engage in any anti-social behaviour.
1. CARPET RIGHT 19TH JULY 2014
The Appellant denies organising or supplying equipment for the above event.
The Appellant never entered the premises Carpet Right. The Appellant will state that the true organisers were inside the premises and the police ought to be in possession of their details. This has never been disclosed to the Appellant.
The Appellant will state that none of his vehicles were inside the premises.
The Appellant notes from the Respondent's bundle there was no rave /event, no sound recording equipment inside the premises and therefore no rave was taking place.
The Appellant did not commit any criminal offences.
The Appellant did not engage in any anti-social behaviour.
2. ALMA ROAD - 24TH JULY 2014

The Appellant disputes the conversation with PC Edgoose regarding raves.
The Appellant will state that he did discuss with PC Edgoose his entertainment company and his dream of hosting a local festival at Pickets Lock for the benefit of the community. He will also say that he discussed other charitable events that he had participated in and events in the pipeline.
The Appellant will state that this date should be struck from the Respondent's bundle as there was no rave / Event. The Appellant did not supply any sound recording equipment.
The admission of this disputed conversation is extremely prejudicial to the Appellant. The Appellant finds it bizarre that he was not arrested for any criminal offences bearing in mind the manner of driving described. The Appellant will state that he did not engage in any antisocial behaviour on this date.
The Appellant will also state that he was in his private motor vehicle.

3. MILLMARSH LANE- 9th AUGUST 2014

The Appellant will state that he was invited to a private birthday party by one of the persons occupying the premises at Millmarsh Lane, and that they had been occupying these premises since before the 27/07/2014 which the police were aware off.

The Appellant will state that there was a section 144 LAPSO notice displayed and the building was being treated as a home. The Appellant will state that he was an invited guest and not a trespasser.
The Appellant will state that there was no rave as the location was not open air and by virtue of him being invited by one of the occupiers who had established a section 144 LAPSO notice he was not a trespasser so the legal definition of a rave could not be made out.
The Appellant was a guest at the location and not an organiser. He attended the location in his private motor vehicle. He did not provide any audio or sound equipment.
The Appellant did not commit any criminal offences.
The Appellant did not engage in any anti-social behaviour.
The second event at Millmarsh Lane on the 27/07/2014 the Appellant disputes that he was an organiser. He disputes that he was operating the gate as stated by police.
The Appellant will state that this was not an illegal rave but a private birthday party for a girl who lived there, that he attended as a guest and not as an organiser.
The Appellant did not commit any criminal offences.
The Appellant did not engage in any anti-social behaviour.

4. WHETHER THE APPLICANT CONTENDS THAT THE INVOLVEMENT HE ADMITS, WAS IN FACT WITHIN THE LAW, IF SO WHY

Please see above.

5. WHETHER THE APPELLANT AGREES THAT ANY OF THE RAVES DID OR COULD HAVE CAUSED DISTRESS TO LOCAL RESIDENTS BY WAY OF NOISE OR MOVEMENT OF PERSONS PARTICIPATING IN RAVES

The Appellant can only comment on his own behaviour and he refers the court to the fact that he himself has not acted in an anti-social manner. He has not been arrested for any criminal offences.

The Appellant accepts that such events could cause noise nuisance, but he is adamant that he did not organise or supply equipment for any of the events cited in the Respondent's application.

6. WHETHER THE APPELLANT AGREES THAT A PREMISES LICENCE WAS REQUIRED FOR EACH RAVE

The Appellant will state that he believes that no licence was required for Millmarsh Lane as the premises were being occupied and treated as a home due to a section 144 LAPSO notice being displayed. The building was being used as a home and not as a commercial building.

The Appellant will also state that as the building was being occupied as a home then no licence was required for a private house party.

(5) WHETHER THE APPELLANT CONCEDES THAT FOR ANY OF THE RAVES IN WHICH HE WAS INVOLVED, WHETHERBY HELPING TO ARRANGE OR BY PROVIDING SOUND EQUIPMENT HE BELIEVED THE EVENT TO BE A LICENSED EVENT AND THEREFORE WAS AN INNOCENT SUPPLIER OF EQUIPMENT, AND IF SO FOR WHICH RAVE OR RAVES IN PARTICULAR.

The Appellant will state that he supplied equipment on one occasion only, in good faith to what he believed to be a private party. He did not attend the premises beforehand and therefore did not know the equipment would be used at a different place. The Appellant will state that his equipment was restored to him by police after they concluded he had no part in the event and had innocently hired out his equipment. The event the Appellant is referring to is Falcon Road.

The Appellant on no occasions cited in the Respondent's bundle hired out any sound equipment, audio equipment or organised any rave in the London Borough of Enfield on the dates cited in the original application.

PROPORTIONALITY:

The Appellant will state that the current ASBO was imposed by the District Judge after the police had failed to establish that the Appellant had engaged in any acts of anti-social behaviour.

The Appellant will also argue that the Respondent could not establish that the Appellant engaged in any illegal acts. The Appellant will state that the Respondent could not establish that any of the events cited came within the definition of an illegal rave as defined under section 63 of the CJPOA 1994.

The Appellant will state that the ASBO has significantly impacted his ability to run his Entertainment Company and also his future plans to hold an open-air festival. The ASBO would significantly prevent his ability to apply for licences to run out-door festival events. No other entertainments company is subject to the same due diligence when hiring out equipment.
The Appellant will argue that the terms of the ASBO are too restrictive and the geographical restriction too broad, being that the ASBO was put in place for the whole of the UK. Also, that the ASBO conditions have never been defined, and due to this does not know what he is allowed to do and what he is not, due to how broad the conditions have been set.
The Court did not take into consideration the fact that the Appellant was made subject an interim ASBO and the duration was not reduced accordingly.

The Appellant will argue that the court was wrong in principle in granting the original ASBO application as the Respondent made the original application based on the Applicant being involved in illegal raves. The Respondent did not establish this at the initial hearing and the District Judge erred in granting this ASBO.
The Appellant questions the facts of their being so many inconsistencies contained within the police statements, as can be recognized by so many irregularities that he knows that he has not committed nor has he had the right to challenge under the criminal justice acts.
The Appellant feels the need to defend his legal rights against such allegations of illegal statements and so many irregularities within the case put against him, made by police officers against himself the same as he would if the allegations were made by any member(s) off the public such as offences off (organizing illegal raves) In the understanding of civil and criminal law.
The Appellant has learnt in the understanding off all criminal cases were some think is alleged to have taken place that is said to have been illegal the correct Police procedure in them circumstances is that a crime will be created under the crime and disorder act 1998 by way of a victim or witness making a report then members of the police will be allocated to the incident and start investigations depending on the matter of relevance to the initial report to the resources available at the time.
The investigations may lead to an arrest what will lead the detainee to his or her statuary legal rights.
If charged any person’s rights are gained under section 24 and 25 which does relate to the rights of any person charged and the minimum standards of criminal procedure. But my case seems to sit in it civil capacity at court with none of the above regulations and my rights being carried out in accordance of the United Kingdom laws; please can you explain this to me?

It has been noted and said by PC. Parcel that the Applicants is known for class A drugs and or supplying drugs this was proved not to be true as can be read in a copy of the magistrate's court transcripts and that of the district judge agreeing to take no weight in such statements, why has this not yet been deducted?
The Appellant feels as if he is now left with not understanding, with what has been proven against him and what he needs to prove for his appeal. As the conditions he is prohibited from doing is all for illegal raves and illegal raves were not proven.
It is unjustified also that The Appellant's name has been slandered in the metropolitan police website, stating that he was given an ASBO for organizing illegal raves, when the case for the ASBO was not proven for organizing illegal raves.
The Appellant understands that it was proven, that he had acted in an Anti-social manner, to which if justice profiles, he intends to prove his innocence at his appeal.
The Appellant address was put into the metropolitan police website stating that illegality had been proven in the case of illegal raves, which the prosecution rests their case upon. It has also been stated that The Appellant is well known for organizing illegal raves in Enfield and across London, to which he has never been arrested for any think of that nature or been found guilty off.

This has led him to having his life turned upside down. He has had his name put into all the local newspapers, stating that he has been found guilty for illegal raves when the judge clearly stated that no illegality had been proved.

This has led The Appellant health, to being affected in a negative manner. He was already ill before this case started due to other allegations made by members of the police, and what the police have done over many years, not only to The Appellant but his whole family, there has been many complaints put into the police, due to the way they treated and intimidate him and his family over many years, there is only so much a person can take and The Appellant has taken so much over the past 20 years from the police. He is not coping any longer and he thinks the police wanted this, they knew he had hopes with what he wanted to do with his life and the way the police could hurt him was by taking his dreams away, of ever doing anything that he had dreamed of doing.
The Appellant will state that he has attempted to engage in legitimate business activities, and he has been spurned at all attempts by the Police.
The Appellant has designed a business plan, created a website, researched and developed a proposal for an open-air licensed festival.
The Appellant feels that there is so many irregularities within the case bundle that this should be invested and feels without this being done he will not stand a fair trial.

RE: SIMON CORDELL V. THE COMMISSIONER OF POLICE OF THE METROPOLIS

APPEAL AGAINST THE IMPOSITION OF AN ASBO –
26TH SEPTEMBER 2016 AT 10:00 AM
To whom it may concern
I am writing this letter due to concerns of non-disclosure: -
The reasons of concern are as follows:

1. Since the start of the Asbo dated 12th September 20141 have been explaining that the respondents application of an Asbo order should not rely quote "That a case should not rely solely on hearsay" as mine seems to do by police officer's with no witness present in court as I request to be, so that my barrister can question the truth of their statements and even further to the matter of witnesses I raise the concern of Most of the 999 intelligence calls being hearsay any case, reported by third party person and therefore does carry less weight in any sense.

2. I also want to show the true facts of the case as for I am the one who is suffering because of un true cut and paste facts that represent the basics of the respondent case and that singed evidence being amongst other fabricated statement such as police statements with different annually incident dates but numeric order URN numbers,

3. I understand that a lot of the matters that should be dealt with at court will be but only if the disclosure that the judge ordered is served in time for appeal.

4. I still urge for a speedy and fair trial: and feel that when a judge asks the respondent to reply by a set date such as the 1/08/2016 as the judge has ordered to happen it should.

5. The respondent should do so within the time duration as dated 01/09/2016 and agreed by the judge and then received with the correct response, as has not happened.

6. I have been awaiting the reply since 24/02/2016 from an ongoing civil application that is dated 13th August 2014 so to be able to have a fair trial up and till date.

7. After waiting on the 01/-9-2016 with no response I waited till the 2/09/2016 and telephoned the respondent I spoke with a lady called sally gill Hurst, she states that she has served some paper work to my solicitors at the beginning of august a month prior, after finishing our conversation I contacted my solicitor she explained to me that she was away on holiday and that I must wait till she gets back on the 6th September 2016.

8. I again put the phone down and called my solicitor firms office to see if any paperwork had been served to be told no.

9. On the 8TH August I spoke with my mother who explained to me that she had been in contact with my solicitor and that I would be reviving a letter to sign to be sent to Sally Guilchurst.

On receiving this letter, it raised the following concerns.

- The paperwork has not been served in time.
- In a preliminary hearing so to be ready for the appeal the judge ordered this to be achieved.
- The respondent has had another 6 months sine 22/02/2016 from the start of the on goings as dated 13/08/2014
- We are now in 08/09/2016 the appeal is on the 26/09/2016 this leads me to the concerns of once again the case being postponed, as it has already been ten times before.
- I have handed in two articles Six regarding mine and every person's rights to a speedy and fair trial, with issues of my concerns referring towards a multitude of my human rights being breached, because of the on goings in the ASBO proceedings that do draft clear corruption and fabricated evidence, with myself asking for the case to be investigated and the correct paper work to be served in accordance to my response to HHJ Pakared.
- Yes, my instructions are clear I did not organise any illegal raves or provide any equipment with an intention of holding an illegal rave and surely did not cause any Anti-Social behaviour on the dates sighted, this is also to include Mill Marsh Lane with no exception.
- Yes, in some I am visiting my friends who are or where homeless at the time.

10. The legal technicality, to i.e. absence of trespass that does not prevent parties from being held in accordance of the law, I do agree may lead to a standalone anti-social behaviour order being granted if a person commits a public order offence, to which I did not cause as I was not organiser neither did I take part in the organisation of the party or did I commit any civil or criminal offence.

11. In any one un-regular occasion over the duration of the weekend I can; A. understand the noise nuisance and distress to neighbours this can cause if the allegations were to be true and not fabricated by police as I can prove. I was not the organiser of the event.

The case is based on what the respondent based it upon and in my case, this is the Organisation of Illegal Raves not the organisation of raves: -

- So, I proved that indoor parties are not illegal unless there is a breach of the licensing act 2003 as this is the law for entertainment.
- That the word rave cannot be used by law in a building; such as it has within my case as for sure section 63 requires key elements, one being of the nature that "tress pass must have taken place in private Air" as clearly is not the situations in None of the incidents that I have been found guilty of and now the conditions being imposed upon my statue.
- I proved that I was not the organiser to the events as I was not.
- That I never took part in any anti-social behaviour or intended or encouraged any other person to neither.
- Anti-social behaviour was not clearly caused as a result of the Progress Way by myself or my actions as I was only a visitor who never cased any offence.

I feel any legal professional should have the truth and my best interest at heart and if any person Knows a police officer to be caught for being corrupt for the evidence that they have supported so that a human being faced a wrongful convection of any sort that they should encourage them to stand up for what is correct and right.

The response I made was already served on the 22/02/2016 and the Judge ask for the respondent to answer them questions by the 01/02/2016 and the respondent refuse to do so.

I do insist for the challenges to be answered as it is my life that has been tarnished for wrongful civil proceedings.

I feel that the meeting with my barrister has been left to the last minute to no fault of my own I have been requesting this to be accomplished in a multitude of emails well in advance to the date that has now been made a few days before appeal.

I do not see how the case will not get re listed due to lack of late disclosure to be quite frank due to no fault of my own but still at my life's expense.

I do not feel that it is right or fair that I am being encouraged to go to appeal and my requests to the respondent not being replied to in time, that I believe will prove my innocents and will also clearly draft out the police corruption and wrongful conditions that I know have been imposed on myself.

All Legal professionals should work in Co Hurst towards the understanding of noun precedent in relation to the weight of any evidence put towards a client.

I am concerned about the case relying sole on hearsay by police. Is this correct in procedure?
I do also understand and take note from the respondent's bundle that all resident parties contained within, were held on single occasions and in places of residence and where not held as a running commercial business by the occupiers or by myself to my knowledge. This has leaded me to read that any person is entitled to have a house or resident party in private air under the licensing act 2003 or where they reside. To my understanding each accused incident in the respondent's bundle is a place of residence and was in fact different people holding their own private parties at their places of residence.
Aloe there may have been complaints in regard to issues of concern about them house parties I was not the occupier to any of the accused locations; neither was I the hirer of equipment and surely not the organiser.
I was establishing a hire company around the dates of the accused events and have provided evidence of the work I had been committing myself to. I was not trading at the time and whenever hiring out equipment I do with due care and responsibility, however I do not accept responsibility for other people's actions when hiring out such equipment in good faith. I do take legal action for any persons when breaking my terms and conditions. I do not hire out equipment to any person without being in the constraints of the law and in good business practice or without the correct ID.
On one occasion I did hire out a sound system in good faith on a pro bono basis, this being of the understanding that no laws were being broken and as a Ltd company acting responsible. I know that I should not be liable for them persons actions when hiring out equipment and having the correct protocols in place as I clearly do.

I do not feel that it is right for the respondent to obtain criminal punishments such as section 63 of the Crime and Disorder act 1994 and for that section to be then imposed against my freedom of movement & other Human Right that have been breached by being pro-claimed under wrongful civil proceedings, as I have now suffered to a multitude of incorrect procedures, legalisation and wrongful claims that I have occurred, for instance I have no previous nurtured offences of a similar sort as required by law when applying a standalone Asbo on a person's statue, as I do feel I should have. Also, the case has made me feel that I have not had the right to challenge the allegations under a true Criminal investigation, especially when referring to the Organisation of Illegal Raves as the respondent has clearly headlined the offence to be.
I also have the listed concerns of: -

12. I understand that the correct protocols for the offences I am being accused of should be carried out in a manner to be of a high professional standard as required by law, so for me to be able to defend myself.

13. I am therefore not happy with the issues of police corruption not being addressed, by all legal persons, as I know I cannot stand a fair trial or appeal without them issues being rectified first.

14. I have suffered since 2014 for conditions that have been wrongful imposed upon myself and still awaiting an appeal.

· Me and my acting solicitor drafted a letter requesting the respondent to remove any CADS that have been placed in the Asbo bundle, as I understand that the cads are already inputted incorrectly, leading to the further understanding that I could not have and did not commit the alleged offices that I have been accused of as a fast majority of the other CADS contained within the application are incorrect and them cads do have some blocked out context; such as the Att Locations that are redacted and the intelligence reports grid references do state Crown road and other locations such as Hardy Way, on the same day as progress way so I could not have committed as I could not be in two places at once.

24.11.2013 However, I am even further worried about CADS such as all the listed and any in the format such as fully retracted where know person can or is able to see the true CAD intelligence in regards to the wrongful fabricated claims being held against my person, so for all to be able to see the truth.

24.11.2014 I do believe when all CADS do get retracted and un blocked then that will help any barrister and put them in a better position to defend me, so for all Cads and pages in the Asbo application being served in an un edited format and so, for myself to understand the truth, to why the conditions have been imposed upon myself since the Asbo's on goings.

15. I am also seriously worried about the reasons why the case has taken so long with all the evidence I have supported towards my innocent plea, such as: -

- The incorrect time stamps.
- The facts of the conditions of law relating to a section 63 of the crime and disorder act being imposed upon myself for wrongful claims of myself holding indoor house parties without tress pass taking place and no truth or evidence of myself causing anti-social behaviour.
- The Events that I am being accused of no police officers have gone and spoken to any landlord's or owners.
- There has been no evidence of a breach under the Licensing act 2003.
- No proof of organisation being present against myself.
- There is also the matter being of; all incident that are in the Asbo application with particulars to them members of the police involved, not having 101 books that are time stamped for them incidents and I once again would like to request them.

16. In relation to all cads that do have a grid number of 53491,196790 and or Att location of Crown road I request that the police officers involved in attending that incident attended court so to be able to prove that what Pc Elesmore stated to the Judge at the magistrates court on the date of trial to obtain a guilty plea against my person, not to be creditable in any weight, that being of all the statements that he made that are contained in a copy of the magistrates court transcripts on the day of trial, which does quote him saying that: When making the Asbo application and redacting any intelligence he was sure that all event on the 7th 8th June 2014 was in fact 100% progress way and that he was sure that there was no other parties / events in the borough on them dates.

I intended for my acting barrister to be able to use a copy of the magistrate's court trial transcripts on the date of the appeal.

I also request the incorrect statement regarding that I am knowing for class A drugs to be removed as it is also incorrect.

Kind regards Simon Cordell

continued that sometime around mid-September 2016, one of the Defendant's neighbours reported that the Defendant confronted him outside his block as he was going to the local park and started to shout abuse and threats at him and said to him "I can get you over at the park, I know you go for a walk". This incident led to his arrest and to the matter being referred to the Magistrates Court. A file note of the report is exhibited on page 31 of the exhibit bundle LN1.

11. A file note of the incident is at page 34A of the exhibit bundle.

13. I hereby attach a case history detailing incidents of reports from Mr Mathiyalagan about the abuse, threats and persistent intimidation by the Defendant. The case history is at pages 35 to 40 of the exhibit bundle LN1. It shows that Mr Mathiyalagan reported incidents too numerous to set out in this statement about abuse, threats, attempts to extort money and intimidation by the Defendant. Examples are that the Defendant banged on his front door while his wife was alone at home with their young daughter and shouted abuse at his wife and asked her to turn off the bathroom taps. He also removed his electricity fuse thereby cutting off their power supply. Mr Mathiyalagan reported the incident to the police and was given CAD 5753/23 December 2016. A file note of this incident is at page 37 of the exhibit bundle.

14. Other examples of aggressive and anti-social behaviour reported by Mr Mathiyalagan were that on 21st January 2017, the Defendant aggressively banged on his door, swore and shouted abuse and threats at him and his family and accused them of making noise.

15. On 9th June 2017, the Defendant attacked Mr Mathiyalagan's cousin in the communal hallway as he returned from work late at night by grabbing him on the arm and neck thereby causing bruising to his arm and neck. The Defendant also snatched his mobile phone from him as he tried to record the incident.

He also reported that as they left the block, the Defendant ran after them swearing and shouting abuse and demanded that he must pay him money if he wants him to leave him alone. The Defendant also said to him that he has all their personal details. A report of the incident is at page 40 of the case history.

20. Case history notes exhibited at pages 41-46 show reports of similar aggressive and intimidating behaviour displayed to Mr Mathiyalagan was being experienced by another tenant who wishes to remain anonymous because of fear of reprisal from the Defendant.

21. Similarly, further case notes exhibited at pages 47-52 show that another tenant who wishes to remain anonymous was being subjected to the Defendant's antisocial behaviour. She had to be moved from the block because of the harassment from the Defendant and because she suffered from mental health problems and was particularly vulnerable and unable to deal with the threats and harassment from the Defendant.

22. On 7th February 2017, the Defendant approached the leaseholder of 117 Bumcroft Avenue and his plumber outside the block as they were attempting to resolve low water pressure issues affecting the flat. The Defendant informed the leaseholder that there were problems between him and his tenants but did not give specific details. The leaseholder explained to the Defendant that his tenants were experiencing low water pressure in their flat and that they were trying to fix the problem. The Defendant said to the leaseholder, “you will not resolve the problem as I am restricting their water supply”. The leaseholder later asked the Defendant to increase the water pressure and the Defendant stated, "I cannot do anything at the moment, I will sort it out later”. A report of this incident is at page 55 of the exhibit bundle.

flats above his. While inside his flat they noticed that the Defendant have installed a metal security gate inside his front door. It also appeared that the Defendant may have removed the wall between his kitchen and living room thereby creating an open plan living space. A copy of the file note is pages 56-57 of the exhibit bundle.

24. On 8th May 2017, the Claimant's officers, Ms Fletcher, a Neighbourhood officer who has since left the Council and Mr Steve Stirk, a Surveyor visited the Defendant's block of flats following reports of low water pressure to flats 109, 113 and 117 Bumcroft Avenue. While the Claimant's officers were outside flat 113, the Defendant came up to them and started to complain about his perceived victimization by his neighbours, the police and the council. While the Defendant was talking to the officers, Mr Mathiyalagan came down the stairs and the Defendant said to him, "I'm going to the police station now with my evidence about you and I'm going to ruin your life". A file note of this report is exhibited at page 58 of the exhibit bundle and an email from Steve Stirk is at page 59.

25. On 14th May 2017, yet another neighbour who wishes to remain anonymous reported that the Defendant aggressively banged on her door, shouted abuse and threats at her and falsely accused her of making noise and coming into his flat to attack him. The neighbour stated that the Defendant later followed her to her car as she was leaving the block shouting abuse and wanting to know where she was going. The neighbour also reported that the Defendant allowed his dog to roam freely in the communal area of the block without a lead. A file note of the report is at page 60 of the exhibit bundle LN1.

26. On 28th May 2017, the Defendant was issued with a first instance Harassment letter by the police following allegations of harassment and threatening behaviour made to the police by his neighbour. A copy of the letter and the PC's statement are at pages 61-62 of the exhibit bundle LN1.

DIRECTIONS ORDER

27. On 12th July 2017, Mr Neville Gray, the Claimants repairs surveyor attended the Defendant's flat to investigate reports of low water pressure to the flats above the Defendant's flat, but the Defendant refused him access. Mr Neville Gray attended the Defendant's flat again at about 5:39pm following reports from the leaseholder of flat 117 Burncroft House that the water supply had stopped completely, but the Defendant also refused him access. The Defendant later shouted abuse and swear words at Mr. Gray and would not allow him to approach his car. Mr. Gray has provided a witness statement in relation to this incident.

A. The Defendant is in breach of the following conditions of his tenancy agreement.

B. Condition 10 - "You must not act in any way which causes, or is likely to cause, a nuisance or annoyance or is anti-social."

DIRECTIONS ORDER

January 2017 inviting him for a meeting on 9th February 2017, 16th February 2017 for a meeting on 22 February 2016 and 16th March 2017 for a meeting on 22nd March 2017. These letters are exhibited at pages 63-70 of the exhibit bundle.

30.1 have enquired with the Mental Health Team whether the Defendant is currently known to the team and was informed that he is no longer under their care.

2. The Claimant's operatives have had difficulties in accessing the Defendant's flat to inspect the state of the property and the unauthorised works and modifications which the Defendant is purported to have carried out without a written consent from the Claimant.
The Claimant has also been unable to check whether the Defendant Is restricting water supply/pressure to the properties above his since December 2016. The Defendant has admitted to restricting the water supply but has refused to allow the Claimant's maintenance operatives access to his property to investigate and rectify the problem.

3. The Defendant has intimidated the residents in the entire block and because of his behaviour, we have received numerous complaints from residents, requests to be transferred from the block and we have had to move a vulnerable tenant from the block.

4. I have made attempts to engage with the Defendant, but he has not been cooperative and has continuously displayed abusive and threatening behaviour towards the Claimant's members of staff and his neighbours. A Notice of Seeking Possession has been served on him and possession action is being considered. However, in the meantime, this injunction is required to ensure that the other residents are not subjected to further intimidation and harassment by the Defendant. This application is being made without notice because if the Defendant were given notice, he would intimidate the witnesses in an attempt to prevent the order being made.

Subject: Re: Fwd.: Re: R v Simon Cordell Appeal Letter
I am in the right by asking you to look into the time stamps so that I can have a fair trial and you will not, I have many emails of myself and my mother asking you to act with my best interest at heart and write to the witness in time for my appeal date, to which this was not done in time as I had explained I was worried about as well as the true points of law relevant to the applicants case. The Jude did set a fair time period for you to set the key objectives so that I could be ready to stand a fair and speed trial.
You have refused to meet myself in this time set and would only meet my mother, this was due to me asking you on the phone, if I could take a copy of the minutes in audio format of our meeting, to which you took as a fret, I have the texts of me being polite to you straight after our conversation stating that I meant no offence and saying sorry if I did upset you, as I class you as a close family member after you representing me over the years.
I have not sent you any correspondence to show that I am not of well health as you seem to be claiming and had not meet you for months, as you refused to do so.
after you are refusing not to meet me after such a long period and you only meeting my mother who was not at any of the incidents contained within the applicant's bundle. I find it unjust as I clearly have the texts asking you to deal with just me about my statements and case and asked if you would forward my mother as she is going to help with my emails.
on the last occasion of a meeting regarding my case you allowed me to attend with my mother as you had got over me asking for minutes of the meetings you was holding with my mother or any that you might have with myself, I attended and there was no problems at your office I even tidied up a little in your office as our meeting was coming to an end as you had your next client waiting so I was very quiet.

I have already been assessed by the mental health team on 3 occasions now over a fair period of time and each time I have been told that I am well. In fact, the last time I asked for minutes of the meeting to be taken with the mental health team, as I did with you and there was no problem in me doing so, I have the whole recording on cd dated 25/01/16. In the time I had with the mental health team I showed them issues about my court case and the time stamps and other issues that I have raised with yourself and they clearly state on the cd that it is a serious error that you my solicitor needs to pay attention to me as does any other person that I show my case.
Points I have not seen you to show you that I am of ill health
The barrister that meet me on our first occasion only see me for 2 mins the other day at my said appeal date which was not ready in time I have already been cheeked by 3 different teams, who clearly state and write if the members of the Met police had treated them in such a manner over a period of time they would have issues of concern regarding equal rights and many other relevant rights I am well on mind as the police put their signature at the end of the case papers that I ask you to make sure that I get a fair trial with and the doctors agree that I am right on cd as does many over people on the internet and legal ombudsman please can you reply to what grounds you believe me not to be fit for trial and any plans of action that you may plan to take in regard to my ongoing appeal.

Dear Simon / Lorraine
I am forwarding across to you a letter that I have received from HHJ Pawlak, who will be adjudicating at the appeal hearing on 26th September 2016. He will also be presiding over the mention hearing on 4th April 2016.
The first point that must be addressed in question 3 and this concerns your mental health Simon and your fitness to follow proceedings, instruct solicitors and consider advice. I am therefore going to apply for funding so that you can be assessed so that this area can be clarified. This is important. Your behaviour in court on Monday raised a number of concerns surrounding this point.
The second point is answering and responding to question 2. This question can only be properly addressed once we receive confirmation from a Psychiatrist that you are able to follow proceedings etc
Paragraph 4 makes it clear that the Court will not allow Michael Carroll & Co to come off the record unless the Senior Partner attends in person. We cannot advance your case or respond to question 2 until such time as the psychiatric confirms that there are no issues with your ability to follow proceedings.
You will note the areas that the court wishes to concentrate on are listed in paragraph 2. All the points will have to be carefully considered; in my view they are loaded questions that are seeking to achieve foundation for the ASBO application. The Judge is referring to events but in brackets using the word rave.
He is not stating illegal rave. There are five subsections but ultimately subsection 2(c) is probably the question that Judge is most interested in knowing your response to.
Paragraph 4 makes it clear that the Court will not allow Michael Carroll & Co to come off the record unless the Senior Partner attends in person or unless you wish to transfer legal aid.
443,
Paragraph 5 deals with the hearsay application to be served by the respondent.
Superintendent Coombes is forwarding his statement in the post. I will forward this on receipt.
Can you please confirm by return email Simon whether you are willing to be assessed by a Psychiatrist so that we can determine whether you are fit to follow proceedings.
I await hearing from you by return email.
Yours sincerely
Josephine Ward MICHAEL CARROLL & CO.

Dear Josey
You have not attached any paperwork so we cannot see what has been said by the judge or the barrister that was there can this be forwarded please.
Josey at court the judge would not hear what the barrister for Simon was saying or anyone else this case went in and out of court. I asked if I could speak to the judge myself which he took no notice off when a note was written by a person in the court and handed to the clerk to pass to the judge.

For Appeal against Conviction - Case Started - 10:19
For Appeal against Conviction - Respondent Case Opened - 10:50
For Appeal against Conviction - Case adjourned until - 11:20 - 11:08
For Appeal against Conviction - Resume - 11:29
For Appeal against Conviction - Case adjourned until - 11:50 - 11:41
For Appeal against Conviction - Resume - 11:43
For Appeal against Conviction - Hearing finished for SIMON PAUL CORDELL - 11:58 And there was one more time that the judge went out in fact it could have been 2.
And as even the barrister said to us the judge was not hearing what we wanted to say or he would have understood all the judge wanted to do was make this case go ahead even when Simon Barrister was saying it could not, at this point it was not due to Simon heath. it was other reasons that the barrister felt uncomfortable going ahead.
If the judge had heard what was being said and was being fair, then at that point it should have been put off as the barrister had very good reason for it not to go ahead.
It was at this point I asked the lady to write a note to the judge to ask if I could speak which she did and it was pasted to the judge, and the judge took no notice of it.
Simon has had an assessment from the mental health team on I believe 03/02/2016 as you are well aware as Simon told you himself in the office. the warrant was granted on the 25/01/2016 but they never used it until the 03/02/2016
He agreed that he would work with them and have meetings with Goody. The judge does not know any of this because he would not let me speak in court.
Also have you heard yet from Superintendent Adrian Coombs I believe from what you said to me on the phone he was meant to be getting a reply from him on Monday
Regards
Lorraine

All I want is a fair trial and a professional good relationship with yourself. I ask for legal guidance off yourself. I have created a bundle with the relevant back bone points of law, relevant to my case and a shorter up dated statement, I have also made a skeleton argument out of the docs you have provided me with up to date. at this time I would like you to apply to the court so that I can have the ASBO conditions defined as trespass was not present for section 63 conditions to be imposed, neither was there any breach of the licencing act 2003 as amended Jan 7th 2013 and 2016, also proofing the fact that the applicants case of illegal raves, could not be correct in law. please see a copy of the licencing act 2003 attached that clearly states that all house parties or private parties are not regulated and do not need a licence and there for not illegal. I would also like the right under article 6 of my human rights to be called as I do not feel that it is possible with the only evidence the police rely on not only to be incorrect in law but that of a fabricated evidence by way of the time stamps and other relevant errors such as PC Elesmore stating under oath to the district judge that any location blocked out or within the applicants bundle, are that off progress way, when we have clearly proved otherwise. Please see a draft copy of my backbone points of law attached. The folder I have attached proves that illegal raves was not possible to be present, as the police have no power on private parties, until the local authority applies at the local court to give the police such powers such as a section 80 noise abatement notice, which has not been served within any of the dates in question contained within the applicants bundle, I believe this is why the local council never turns up to any of the court hearings which they are bound by law to do so, as I would like them to attended and answer such questions. please can you reply to my points in the last 3 emails in bullion points so I can understand your legal guidance.

Dear Josey
You have not attached any paperwork so we cannot see what has been said by the judge or the barrister that was there can this be forwarded please.
Josey at court the judge would not hear what the barrister for Simon was saying or anyone else this case went in and out of court. I asked if I could speak to the judge myself which he took no notice off when a note was written by a person in the court and handed to the clerk to pass to the judge.
For Appeal against Conviction - Case Started - 10:19
For Appeal against Conviction - Respondent Case Opened - 10:50
For Appeal against Conviction - Case adjourned until - 11:20 - 11:08
For Appeal against Conviction - Resume - 11:29
For Appeal against Conviction - Case adjourned until - 11:50 - 11:41
For Appeal against Conviction - Resume - 11:43
For Appeal against Conviction - Hearing finished for SIMON PAUL CORDELL - 11:58 And there was one more time that the judge went out in fact it could have been 2.
And as even the barrister said to us the judge was not hearing what we wanted to say or he would have understood all the judge wanted to do was make this case go ahead even when Simon Barrister was saying it could not, at this point it was not due to Simon heath. it was other reasons that the barrister felt uncomfortable going ahead.
If the judge had heard what was being said and was being fair, then at that point it should have been put off as the barrister had very good reason for it not to go ahead.

It was at this point I asked the lady to write a note to the judge to ask if I could speak which she did and it was pasted to the judge, and the judge took no notice of it.
Simon has had an assessment from the mental health team on I believe 03/02/2016 as you are well aware as Simon told you himself in the office. the warrant was granted on the 25/01/2016 but they never used it until the 03/02/2016
He agreed that he would work with them and have meetings with Goody. The judge does not know any of this because he would not let me speak in court.
Also have you heard yet from Superintendent Adrian Coombs I believe from what you said to me on the phone he was meant to be getting a reply from him on Monday

448,
Dear Simon / Lorraine
am forwarding across to you a letter that I have received from HHJ Pawlak, who will be adjudicating at the appeal hearing on 26th September 2016. He will also be presiding over the mention hearing on 4th April2016.
The first point that must be addressed in question 3 and this concerns your mental health Simon and your fitness to follow proceedings, instruct solicitors and consider advice. I am therefore going to apply for funding so that you can be assessed so that this area can be clarified. This is important. Your behaviour in court on Monday raised a number of concerns surrounding this point.
The second point is answering and responding to question 2. This question can only be properly addressed once we receive confirmation from a Psychiatrist that you are able to follow proceedings etc
Paragraph 4 makes it clear that the Court will not allow Michael Carroll & Co to come off the record unless the Senior Partner attends in person. We cannot advance your case or respond to question 2 until such time as the psychiatric confirms that there are no issues with your ability to follow proceedings.
You will note the areas that the court wishes to concentrate on are listed in paragraph 2. All the points will have to be carefully considered; in my view they are loaded questions that are seeking to achieve foundation for the ASBO application. The Judge is referring to events but in brackets using the word rave. He is not stating illegal rave. There are five subsections but ultimately subsection 2(c) is probably the question that Judge is most interested in knowing your response to.
Paragraph 4 makes it clear that the Court will not allow Michael Carroll & Co to come off the record unless the Senior Partner attends in person or unless you wish to transfer legal aid.
Paragraph 5 deals with the hearsay application to be served by the respondent.
Superintendent Coombes is forwarding his statement in the post. I will forward this on receipt.
Can you please confirm by return email Simon whether you are willing to be assessed by a Psychiatrist so that we can determine whether you are fit to follow proceedings.
I await hearing from you by return email.
Yours sincerely
Josephine Ward MICHAEL CARROLL & CO.

I am a 35 year old gentlemen as you already understand I am telling you that I do not want you emailing or talking to my mother behind my back and not forwarding me in the correspondents that you send to her about myself, in fact from the present time 18:29 hours of the 25/02/2016 I would like you to just contact myself. I am also prepared to meet yourself the sooner the better, so I can continue with my appeal. I would like you to know that you are more than welcome to come to my flat and see the mental health team letters I have as well as maybe listen to the cd and take a look over the bundle and statements I have prepared for yourself to put your professional skills towards so that I can stand my fair trial. As for you wanting to re asses me straight after I have just been checking I do not find this just as I had Katie and my mother present at the assessment.
I feel that You are in the wrong for what you are putting me throw, the texts I have and emails prove the truth that you refuse to see me for months due to me asking you a professional question such as can I have minutes to the meetings that you hold with my mother or myself in audio format.
All you had to do was say no but on stead you stated that "no client has ever asked you this before and that I am frightened by what I had asked you" as I keep clearly saying in all the emails and texts I have sent to you that I never meant any offence.
You refused to meet me for months and would only meet my mother, not once did iPhone you again after and still to date have not as I do not want you to upset You.
You have acted for me for well over 20 years and I have never been any problem to yourself in fact we have always had a good friendly professional relationship as I keep stating the cd I am in possession of does in fact prove my statements to yourself to be true, that being from the mental health team's "in proving that they even think that I am well of mind as I keep stating and will do so if you question my health or integrity.
I am mixed race as you do no yourself and the time stamps are wrong in the applicant case, I can get a calculate in front of yourself and prove this or in front of doctor and it is you that does not want to accept this and question my stability, which has lead me to being found guilty for a case that I should never have been. (or in fact was not as Andy Lock states the barrister paid to represent me)
I also went to a private psychiatrist who has wrote me a letter explain that I am well and that you need to pay attention to what is going on with the police and harassment towards myself.
I have a large network of friends and family who also agree that this is wrong.
I have emails of my mother taking to x police offices in a delegated forum room, who we also showed parts of the case and they state that it is wrong and you should help they even have offered to create an injunction for myself against the police to which they once were them self's.
Andy lock the barrister that you hired also agrees in his substitution in regards to the points of law that I have been asking you to act on since the start of this case I have the emails as do you of you.
What I am willing to do is pay for my own private psychiatrist opinion and forward that to yourself if need be, please can you contact me and tell me if I need to book an appointment with one ASAP, so I can get your help in continuing my case.

I have just now seen this email.
Further to your instructions I will cease all contact with your mother concerning your case.
Please see attached HHJ Pawlak's letter.

You refer to the letter regarding your Mental Health assessments. Can you please scan and email to me and if they are recent the this may well avoid the necessity for me engaging a Psychiatrist, funded by the Legal Aid Agency.
Regards
Josephine

Once I receive these and the opinion is that you are well and can follow proceedings, we can progress matters from there.
If the notes suggest that you are not well then, I will be applying for funding from the Legal Aid Agency so that you can be formally assessed to determine whether you can follow proceedings.
I have forwarded to you a letter that I received from the Judge. This is one of the points raised. Mr Morris, the Public Defender has also expressed concern as to your ability to concentrate on and follow proceedings, so I am duty bound to resolve the Mental Health Issue first of all.
Superintendent Coombes has telephoned me, and he is going to be forwarding a statement to me this coming week confirming detail with regards to the Essex event that Christopher Lewis was trying to organise before it was closed down. I will scan and email this across to you when I receive it.
If you can please sign the letter of authority as soon as it arrives that will greatly assist me.

I will be posting out to you a letter of authority requesting permission to access the notes concerning the recent Mental Health Assessments in the past 18 months that your mother disclosed to the Court. Once I receive these and the opinion is that you are well and can follow proceedings, we can progress matters from there.
If the notes suggest that you are not well then, I will be applying for funding from the Legal Aid Agency so that you can be formally assessed to determine whether you can follow proceedings.
I have forwarded to you a letter that I received from the Judge. This is one of the points raised. Mr Morris, the Public Defender has also expressed concern as to your ability to concentrate on and follow proceedings, so I am duty bound to resolve the Mental Health Issue first of all.
Superintendent Coombes has telephoned me, and he is going to be forwarding a statement to me this coming week confirming detail with regards to the Essex event that Christopher Lewis was trying to organise before it was closed down. I will scan and email this across to you when I receive it.
If you can please sign the letter of authority as soon as it arrives that will greatly assist me.
Yours sincerely Josephine Ward MICHAEL CARROLL & CO

Raves

Under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994, the police have the power to stop raves. Until January 2004, these were defined as unlicensed open air gatherings of 100 or more people at which loud music is played during the night. New provisions introduced into the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003, which came into effect in January 2004, reduced the number of people who constitute a rave from 100 to 20, and removed the requirement for the gathering to be in the open air. It also introduced an offence of attending another trespassory rave within 24 hours of a police direction, to stop people simply moving the rave to another place. There have been press reports of police in some areas holding back from using their powers for health and safety reasons, either because of the dangers of dispersing large crowds in the dark or because of other dangerous local conditions. However, there have also been reports of successful police action to control raves in particular areas.

Gatherings for which an entertainment licence has been obtained are not counted as raves within the meaning of the legislation. However, there was some controversy about so-called licensed "raves" under provisions in the Licensing Act 2003 which came into force in November 2005. These allow people to get temporary event notices for gatherings of up to 499 people for events lasting up to four days. The licensed events could involve the sale of alcohol, and while the police have to review the application and object if they consider that crime and disorder would result, there is no mechanism for the general public to object. The Government is keeping this area of law under review. These provisions would not apply to the kind of illegal raves covered by the 1994 Act, which by definition are unlicensed.

The Conservative MP Christopher Fraser has introduced a Ten Minute Rule bill in February 2008 designed to strengthen police powers, although it has yet to receive a second reading. In the debate, Mr Fraser argued that, although the police in his constituency of South West Norfolk were working hard to

1 Background

Going onto another person's land to organise a rave or for any other purpose, without the owner's permission, amounts to a trespass. Trespass to land is a civil wrong, but trespass alone is not a criminal offence. Generally the police have no powers to intervene when a civil wrong is being or is about to be committed. If the landowner has advance warning of a threatened trespass, he or she can apply to the civil court for an injunction to restrain those threatening to commit the wrong from doing so. Also, when people are trespassing, the landowner can apply for an injunction ordering them to cease doing so. Breach of the terms of an injunction would be a contempt of court, which may be punished by imprisonment.

Although, in an emergency, an injunction can be obtained very quickly, there are practical difficulties when the problem is a rave. The landowner is unlikely to have much, if any, notice of the organisers' intentions, he will not be able to identify them, and the duration of the rave is likely to be hours or perhaps days, rather than a long term occupation. It would therefore be, at best, difficult, and often impossible to prevent a threatened rave, or remove raving trespassers, by action through the civil courts. Past governments were unwilling to criminalise trespass itself, but did bring in legislation aimed at dealing with mischiefs seen to be associated with particular kinds of trespass.

2 Powers in the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994

It was in recognition of those difficulties that new powers were introduced in the 1990s to deal with the developing problems of squatting and unlicensed open air gatherings at which loud music was played in the night.

Sections 63-66 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 created new police powers to stop or prevent raves, i.e. unlicensed gatherings at which loud music is played during the night. Originally, the provisions applied only to open air gatherings of 100 or more people. However, the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003 extended them to gatherings of 20 or more and to raves held in buildings as well. It also made it an offence to attend another trespassory rave within 24 hours of the police giving a direction to leave land, in order to deal with the problem of rave organisers just moving to another area.[1]

Section 63(1) of the Act (as amended) defines the gatherings which are caught by the provisions as follows:

[1] Section 58 Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003

478,

Legal definition of (Raves).pdf

(1) This section applies to a gathering on land in the open air of 20 or more persons (whether or not trespassers) at which amplified music is played during the night (with or without intermissions) and is such as, by reason of its loudness and duration and the time at which it is played, is likely to cause serious distress to the inhabitants of the locality; and for this purpose

(a) such a gathering continues during intermissions in the music and, where the gathering extends over several days, throughout the period during which amplified music is played at night (with or without intermissions); and

(b) "music" includes sounds wholly or predominantly characterised by the emission of a succession of repetitive beats.

[(1A) This section also applies to a gathering if—

(a) it is a gathering on land of 20 or more persons who are trespassing on the land; and

(b) it would be a gathering of a kind mentioned in subsection (1) above if it took place on land in the open air.]

Section 63(2) gives a police officer of at least the rank of superintendent the power to direct people to leave land and remove vehicles if he reasonably believes that:

- two or more persons are making preparations for the holding there of a gathering to which this section applies,
- ten or more persons are waiting for such a gathering to begin there, or
- ten or more persons are attending such a gathering which is in progress.

The direction may be communicated to the people concerned by any constable at the scene and people are to be treated as having had a direction communicated to them if reasonable steps have been taken to bring it to their attention. The direction does not apply to "exempted persons", who are the occupier of the land, any member of his family and any employee or agent of his and any person whose home is situated on the land.

A person who knows that a direction has been given which applies to him and fails to leave the land as soon as reasonably practicable, or having left re-enters the land within a period of 24 hours of the direction being given, commits an offence punishable by up to 3 months' imprisonment (which would increase to 51 weeks when provisions in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 come into force) and a £2,500 fine. He or she may be arrested by a constable in uniform without a warrant. It is a defence for a person to show that he had a reasonable excuse for failing to leave the land as soon as reasonably practicable or for re-entering the land.

Section 63 does not apply to gatherings licensed by an entertainment licence in England and Wales.

Section 64 of the 1994 Act gives the police powers to enter land in relation to which a direction may be given under section 63, in order to exercise powers under that section or to seize and remove any vehicle or sound equipment where a direction under section 63 has not been complied with. Police constables exercising powers under this section may enter land without a warrant. Section 67 of the 1994 Act enables the Home Secretary to make regulations providing for the retention and safe-keeping of vehicles or their disposal and destruction in prescribed circumstances. Section 67 also gives the police powers to retain sound equipment seized under section 64, which may be kept until the conclusion of proceedings against the person from whom it was seized. Section 66 gives the courts powers to order the forfeiture of sound equipment seized under section 64(4) from a person convicted of an offence under section 63 of the 1994 Act.

Section 65 of the 1994 Act gives police constables powers to stop people proceeding to raves. It provides that if a constable in uniform reasonably believes that a person is on his way to a gathering in respect of which a direction given under section 63 is in force, he may stop that person and direct him not to proceed in the direction of the gathering. The power may only be exercised within 5 miles of the boundary of the site of the gathering. It does not apply to "exempted persons", i.e. the occupier of the land in respect of which the gathering has been given, any member of his family and any employee or agent of his and any person whose home is situated on the land.

3 The exercise of police powers in practice

In May 2008 there was some controversy over press reports that Kent police were refusing to break up illegal raves until daylight for health and safety reasons.[2] There have been other examples where, because of the location of the rave or other circumstances, the police have reportedly taken the decision that it would be unsafe to use their powers to disperse the crowd.[3] However, there were also a considerable number of stories in local and regional papers throughout the summer of 2008 reporting successful police operations to stop raves.[4]

4 The Licensing Act 2003

Section 100 of the Licensing Act 2003 provides for a Temporary Event Notice (TEN) to be issued for events involving "licensable activities" to be held in premises for up to 96 hours and for up to 499 people. The provision came into force on 24 November 2005. Licensable activities include selling alcohol, providing "regulated entertainment" (including live music) and providing late night refreshment.[5] As well as notifying the local authority, the premises user has to give a copy of any notice to the chief constable of the local police force. If the chief constable is satisfied that the event would result in crime or disorder, he or she must, within 48 hours of receiving the TEN, give an objection notice stating reasons. The local authority must hold a hearing to consider this, and make a decision at least 24 hours before the beginning of the event. However, there is no provision to allow others to object – a situation which contrasts with applications for premises licences, for example, where "interested parties" (including people living nearby) can make representations to object to the licence being granted.

Of course, technically speaking, such events, being licensed, would not count as "raves" under the terms of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994. In addition, under common law, the event organisers would need to obtain the consent of the owner of the land to avoid being sued for trespass. In addition, health and safety legislation and environmental protection legislation would apply in the normal way.

In 2005 the Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) conducted a consultation exercise on draft regulations on temporary event notices under the Act. This set out why the Government felt that a "light touch" regime is appropriate:

5 section 1

Legal definition of (Raves).pdf

> The most important aspect of the system of permitted temporary activities is that no authorisation as such is required for these events from the licensing authority. The system involves notification of an event to the licensing authority and the police, subject to fulfilling certain conditions.
> 2.2 In general, only the police may intervene on crime prevention grounds to prevent such an event taking place or to agree a modification of the arrangements for such an event; and it is characterised by an exceptionally light touch bureaucracy. The licensing authority may only ever intervene of its own volition if the limits set out in the Act on the number of temporary event notices that may be given in various circumstances would be exceeded. Otherwise, the licensing authority is only required to issue a timely acknowledgement.
> 2.3 Such a light touch is possible because of the limitations directly imposed on the use of the system by the Act itself. The limitations apply to:
> • the number of times a person (the "premises user") may give a temporary event notice (50 times per year for a personal licence holder and 5 times per year for other people);
> • the number of times a temporary event notice may be given in respect of any particular premises (12 times in a calendar year);
> • the length of time a temporary event may last for these purposes (96 hours);
> • the maximum aggregate duration of the periods covered by temporary event notices at any individual premises (15 days); and
> • the scale of the event in terms of the maximum number of people attending at any one time (less than 500).
> 2.4 In any other circumstances, a premises licence or club premises certificate would be required for the period of the event involved (…).[6]

However, an article in the Daily Telegraph in October 2005 described the provisions as "a licence for raves with no chance to object":

> Rave parties or festivals lasting up to four days and involving as many as 500 people able to drink round the clock will be allowed without the public having any right to object under the new Licensing Act, it emerged yesterday.
> Council leaders called on ministers to rethink proposals that would allow temporary licences to be issued without taking into account the concerns of residents about noise or nuisance.
> Only the police would be able to lodge formal objections - and then only on crime and disorder grounds.
> At the same time, ministers are still resisting pressure from village halls and other small venues to remove restrictions on running occasional events without having to apply for full alcohol licences.[7]

The regulations were approved and came into force on 10 November 2005.[8]

Further information on Temporary Event Notices is available from Frequently Asked Questions on the DCMS website.[9] These make it clear that only the police can object:

Can I object to a TEN if I believe it could lead to public nuisance or crime?

No. Only the police can intervene to prevent an event covered by a TEN taking place or agree a modification of the arrangements for such an event and then only on crime prevention grounds. However only a limited number of TENs can be given in respect of any particular premises each year, and the powers given in the Act to the police to close premises in certain cases of disorder or noise nuisance extend to premises in respect of which a TEN has effect.

In November 2005, DCMS launched the "Scrutiny Council Initiative", inviting a small, representative group of 10 licensing authorities to help monitor and evaluate the new licensing regime. A final report was published on 24 July 2006.[10] Two of the suggestions on TENS could have a bearing on raves:

1) Some Scrutiny Councils thought that the 48 hour period during which the policy may make objections was not long enough, particularly if notices were served on unmanned police stations on a Friday.

2) The Scrutiny Councils raised the issue of whether all "responsible authorities" should be able to object as well as the police and whether these authorities should be able to make objections around other licensing objectives, such as public safety.

Under the 2003 Act, "responsible authorities" are (in addition to the police) any of the following:

- The fire authority for the area in which the premises are situated
- The health and safety authority for the area in which the premises are situated
- The local planning authority for the area in which the premises are situated
- The environmental health authority for the area in which the premises are situated
- The body recognised as being responsible for protection of children from harm for the area in which the premises are situated
- Inspectors of Weights and Measures (trading standards officers).[11]

In its progress report on the Scrutiny Council Initiative, published in 2007, the Government gave its response to these suggestions:

> All these issues were considered by DCMS as part of a review of the TENs regulations during 2006 and the Minister specifically asked SCs for their views on the issues relating to village halls and the TEN limitations. At the time, the Government did not consider that there were convincing arguments for making significant changes to the TENs process. However, DCMS will continue to monitor this area and will make any adjustments that prove necessary in the future. In addition, the commitment to look at possible improvements to the application process under the DCMS simplification plan includes the requirements for giving a temporary event notice process, such as the notice form and time limits.[12]

5 Recent debates

Christopher Fraser MP introduced the Criminal Justice (Raves) Bill[13] under the Ten Minute Rule on 20 February 2008, aiming to strengthen police powers. Currently, as set out above, police can direct people to leave a rave, stop people on their way to one, and seize vehicles and sound equipment. The powers apply to gatherings of 20 or more where amplified music is played at night which "by reason of its loudness and duration and the time at which it is played is likely to cause serious distress to the inhabitants of the locality." The Bill would:

- apply the powers to music likely to cause distress by its loudness or duration or the time it was played (rather than all three)
- create new offences of organising a rave and transporting equipment for one
- widen police powers to seize sound equipment and court powers to forfeit it

The Bill has yet to have a second reading and is most unlikely to pass into law this session. Further information on the progress of this bill can be found on the Public Bill List on the Parliament website.[14]

Introducing the Bill, Mr Fraser explained why, in his view, the existing powers were insufficient:

> The Government have talked tough on antisocial behaviour, and we have seen the introduction of numerous initiatives designed to tackle antisocial behaviour on our streets and in our towns, but what about our rural communities? Farmers in the country have to endure hundreds of trespassers entering their land in convoys of 50 or more vehicles, rubbish strewn over their fields and drug use on their land. There is huge damage to the environment and property. The clean-up and repair costs reach into the thousands. That cannot be a fair way to treat people who are trying to make an honest living. The countryside is not a theme park, and its residents have every right to protection under the law.
> I want to make it clear that I and other Members have not been raising this issue in such a persistent way in order to be killjoys, or to deny others pleasure and fun just for the sake of it. I am sure that those who attend these unlicensed events enjoy themselves enormously, but that enjoyment comes at a very high cost to those living in the area. This is not a victimless crime.
> There are excellent venues for licensed live music events—High Lodge in Thetford forest, for example—where people can enjoy concerts that are properly and safely organised. Unlicensed music events have nothing to do with the altruistic values of young people. They are hugely profitable to the organisers, who employ a get-rich-quick formula that tramples on the rural economy. Costs are minimised, no tax is paid and there is no regard for anyone, or for anything but profit. Even if no charge is made for people attending a rave, money changes hands for drugs and alcohol. Rural communities must deal with the terrible repercussions, week in, week out. Last week, it was the village of Weeting in my constituency that suffered. This is simply not fair.
> The problem lies in the inadequacy of current police powers. The police in Norfolk are working extremely hard to tackle raves. They are gathering intelligence on organisers, and collaborating with neighbouring forces in order to pool resources. However, the police are looking to the Government to allow them to be more proactive. The Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 gives the police powers to direct those preparing for a rave away from a site, and to remove any vehicles or property that they may have with them. These powers are not enough.
> Despite the distress that an unlicensed music event might cause to local residents, or the damage that it might do in rural areas, the existing definition of a "gathering" stands > in the way of appropriate policing in rural areas. The law seems to suggest that because loud, continuous music is disturbing only a relatively small number of people in a rural community, it is acceptable. If successful, my Bill would expand the definition of a rave to address that issue. It would create two new offences: of organising a rave, and of transporting sound equipment for use at a rave. People convicted of organising such events would face a tough penalty, providing a strong deterrent. In short, my Bill would make it much easier to prevent raves from happening in the first place.

> The police have told me that they have the necessary intelligence on regular organisers, but that can be frustrating because it is not an offence to organise a rave. I shall illustrate that point. Last week, riot police were called out to disperse more than 1,000 revellers as they congregated in my constituency. More than 100 police officers, with dogs and a police helicopter, were used. The operation was, to Norfolk constabulary's credit, successful. However, I dread to think how much it cost. Norfolk police are already struggling with a tight financial settlement, without needing to spend an exorbitant percentage of police funds on stopping raves. Under the Bill, the police could have used the intelligence that they clearly have in order to arrest organisers and seize equipment before the event happened.[15]

Mr Fraser had previously secured an adjournment debate on the subject on 19 July 2007, and raised with the minister the question of creating a new offence, and the logistical difficulties for the police:

> It often seems to the public that the police are not doing all they can to prevent a rave, but the site of the party is often revealed only a few hours or minutes beforehand, specifically so that the police have no time to act. That means that the law relating to the prohibition of "trespass assemblies", which requires an application to the district council for a prohibition order, cannot be applied. The police have the power to direct people away from a rave in a 5 mile radius of the site, but in the maze of country lanes that criss-cross Norfolk, that would demand huge numbers of police and is not workable.
> In practice, the principal offence is:
> "Failing to leave the site of a rave as soon as reasonable, once directed to do so."
> Again, Norfolk constabulary simply does not have the resources to round up and arrest hundreds of young people who have no intention of leaving. Does the Minister agree that it would be helpful to make attendance at a rave an offence? What about an offence of organising, or being involved in organising, an event?
> I am also concerned that the law focuses on single events. It does not pave the way to prosecuting persistent organisers or serial rave-goers. Power to confiscate equipment relates only to the failure to leave today's event, and is not retrospective. Norfolk constabulary told me:
> "Because the legislation is aimed at stopping an event, interrogating and possibly arresting people leaving a site at the end of a rave is not within the spirit of the law."
> Does the Minister agree that the ability to gather vital intelligence about regular rave-goers, the identity of the organisers or plans for future raves would be hugely helpful to the policing process? Would not it give the police a fighting chance of making progress? [16]

15 HC Deb 20 February 2008 c365-6
16 HC Deb 19 July 2007 cc536-542

The Home Office minister, Vernon Coaker, gave the following response:

> The use of legislation in an operational context is entirely a matter for the strategic direction that a chief officer provides for his or her force. Whether it be in an urban or rural area, this is an extremely important issue, which this debate helps to reinforce. Tactics on how individual raves should be policed are at the discretion of the officers deployed at the scene of an event and involve difficult judgments on minimising disturbance to local communities and residents, preventing any escalation in public disorder and ensuring the safety of police officers and rave-goers.
> Although the detail of operational decisions is not necessarily a matter for ministerial interference, Ministers are keen—and I am certainly keen—to see best practice in policing raves disseminated across the police service, including in Norfolk. In that regard, a workshop on policing raves was hosted in June by the recently established National Policing Improvement Agency, which was attended by 100-plus police officers from around the country, including officers from Norfolk. I understand that police tactics, the sharing of intelligence, partnership working, national guidance and current legislation—issues also raised by the hon. Gentleman this evening—were all discussed, and that the feedback from the workshop will be collated and used both to promote short-term steps that forces can take further to improve their response to raves, and to inform longer-term strategic work, including whether any changes to legislation are required.
> That should be of help to the hon. Gentleman, because, clearly, such a workshop will consider issues such as the policing of raves in remote rural areas, and the sharing of good practice between police forces, especially when one force has found a particular way of operating to be effective. I take his point that there is a big difference between policing a rave in a remote part of Norfolk and policing a rave in a field on the edge of London, for example.
> The sub-group on raves, which was set up by the Association of Chief Police Officers working group on public order, provides an appropriate forum to take work forward, and further underlines police commitment to work nationally to improve policing of illegal raves. ACPO has recognised that the problem is growing, and the sub-group is building on work done in an earlier forum. I shall ask my officials to read the record of the debate, and to send the relevant points made by the hon. Gentleman to that working group for consideration. That might benefit him and perhaps other Members across the country who have had such problems. He asked, if I remember rightly, whether it would be possible for attendance at a rave, or organising a rave, to be made a criminal office. The group will be able to consider whether that is appropriate, whether other legislation covers that, or whether something could be done.[17]

[17] Ibid, c541-2. At the time of the debate Mr Coaker was Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for the Home Offfice.

13th August 2014	A meeting was held with Steve Hodgson who is a representative for Enfield Local Authority Council and Jane Johnson on behalf of the Metropolitan police alongside others.

Mr Simon Cordell was meant to have a hearing for an interim Order, but legal aid had not been granted.
Michael Carroll acting solicitor came to court, the judge overturned and granted legal aid. The application for the Interim hearing the judge would not hear.
Interim hearing but could not go ahead due to Andy Locke Acting Barrister had a flood at his home address.
Interim hearing and the order were granted.
Mr Simon Cordell's mother has a note on her mobile phone, stating he was in court at Highbury Corner not sure what they were for.
Meant to have been set for trial but the court only booked 1-day hearing, this was then put off until the 03rd and 04th Aug 2015
Highbury Corner trial case part proven on the 04th 08/2015

Was 1st appeal date which was set for a 1-hour hearing 22nd 23rd and 24th 02/2016 Set for appeal at the crown court.
It is said that Mr Cordell had been found guilty on the 3rd 4th August 2015, to which he disputes to be correct.
An appeal date has been set for Feb 22nd 23rd 24th 2016 Legal aid was re granted on the 00/00/2015

In understanding that Mr Simon Cordell's acting solicitor has explained to him that she cannot arrange a barrister till April 2016, due to him being on leave, if granted by the Jude this would in fact set the new appeal date to be two months after the already agreed appeal date of Feb 22nd, if the court aggress to such a date, contained within the time scale of April 2016 and not any time after, due to the court diary already being pre booked.
Mr Simon Paul Cordell is asking for a Former judge to examine the role of police officers, who present the applicant cases of an ASBO order against himself.
Mr S. Cordell is asking for this to be assessed and agreed under the grounds of Article 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights, the Right to a Fair Trial Act 1998, Legislation.
Which in legal terms, should be the best means of separating the guilty from the innocent and protecting against injustice. Without this right, the rule of law and public faith in the justice system collapse. The Right to a Fair Trial is one of the cornerstones of a just society.
Article 6 the Right to a fair hearing
The right to a fair trial is fundamental to the rule of law and to democracy itself.
The right applies to both criminal and civil cases, although certain specific minimum rights set out in Article 6 apply only in criminal cases.
The right to a fair trial is absolute and cannot be limited. It requires a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law. The procedural requirements of a fair hearing might differ according to the circumstances of the accused.
The right to a fair hearing, which applies to any criminal charge as well as to the determination of civil rights and obligations, contains a number of requirements and I believe the causes below full within them requirements.
An ASBO order has been appealed against after the magistrates court decided a decision of guilt, the decision had been made against Mr Simon Cordell, this was at Highbury Corner, Magistrates Court, on the 4th August 2015 in pursuant to s.1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 it was agreed to make him subject to an Anti-Social behaviour order. This was in pursuit for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis.
The respondent's case is that Mr Simon Cordell has been accused of being integrally involved in the organisation of illegal raves in Enfield.
Part of the Barrister submissions that represented Simon Cordell, had been that the allegations were that he was involved in the organizing of illegal raves, but the applicant hadn't adduced evidence, of trespass or evidence of breach of the licensing Act 2003 which is a requirement for proving, that an indoor rave was illegal. The Deputy District Judge ruled that the applicant did not need to prove illegality, - all the needed to prove was he had acted in an anti-social manner. In the view of the barrister this was a very questionable decision: firstly, the applicant based their case on the illegality of the raves rather than the fact of the raves themselves and secondly, without proof of illegality the presumption of innocence leads to the conclusion that the raves were legal, and thus,

Simon being prohibited from engaging in an ostensibly lawful activity requires more careful consideration on issues of proportionality.

It should be agreed with the barrister statement as when dealing with this case Mr Simon Cordell was addressing the applicant's case to prove that he had not been involved in organizing illegal raves, as this is what the application against him was.
Other points of concern are.
• Inaccuracy's leading to incorrect time stamps contained within the applicant's bundle created by Steve Elsmore on the 13/8/2014.
CAD numbers 10471 / 10481 / 10506 of the 7th June 2014 = Please take note every day the 999-call centre starts at CAD 01 and goes up to the average of 10,742 to 15,000 callers per day. (We can tell this by the number of cad's incident numbers supplied, within the applicant's bundle supporting the evidence supplied, for a standalone ASBO order to be gained against Mr Simon Cordell.
On the average the 999-call centre will receive on the average of 300 callers per hour as marked and time stamped below. Every half hour is 150 callers and every 15 mins is 75 callers Every 7 half mins is 33 callers and 3 half mins 17 callers
Please take note to (CAD number / Incident Number 10481 7th June 14) this is the 10,481 emergency Met police call of the 7th June 2014 time stamped 22:47 So it is incorrect for (CAD 10506 7th June 14) externally inputted 25 calls later, to have an earlier time stamp of the 7th June 2014 at 22:44 hours.
In fact, the time should have been 22:49 hours.

Claim reference: 1623514
NI reference:
How Your Housing Benefit Has Been Worked Out for the period
From 04/04/2016 your Housing Benefit will be £93.19 each week.
The rent you are charged each week is £99.49.
Housing Benefit cannot pay for some service charges that are included in your rent. The rent you pay has to be reduced by the amount of these service charges. These amounts are shown below:
Actual amount for Ineligible Water £6.30
Total deductions for services £6.30
The amount of rent after deducting these charges is called your maximum eligible rent. Your rent of £99.49 must be reduced by £6.30, to £93.19 each week. This is your maximum eligible rent.
The maximum Housing Benefit you can get is £93.19 each week. This figure is used when working out 'your total weekly Housing Benefit'.
Your Total Weekly Housing Benefit
As you are receiving Income Support, I can pay the maximum Housing Benefit of £93.19 each week.
How Your Council Tax Support Has Been Worked Out
Based on your circumstances I have decided to assess your claim using the Working Age scheme.
From 01/04/2016, your council tax support is £11.92 each week.

Your Total Weekly Council Tax Support
A reduction of the maximum council tax support of £15.89 that you could get each week must be reduced by £3.97, to £11.92.
As you are receiving income support, I can pay you your maximum council tax support of £11.92 each week.

Dear Josey
What you are saying in your emails is that the judge says in his letter that I got to take an assessment, but this is not the case as part 3 of his letter states. " If the Appellant wishes to rely on any medical evidence as to his mental health, then any report dealing with such matters must be before the court on the 4th April 2016"
Which states, "if I wish to rely on any mental health evidence, then a report has to get submitted by the 04/04/2016," but this does not say I must rely on this, and I do not wish to rely on this. Can you please take my case back to court so that my conditions can get defined, and also for a meeting to take place, once you get the letters you are waiting for so we can deal with the appeal, Can you also please send me the notes from court, from the public defender that was there for me please as I have not had these. Also, the issue about the public order unit if they are not willing to give all the information, then they need to get summoned to court for the appeal. Also, what will happen as to the missing CAD and the errors in the CAD and with the statement off inspector Coomb's. The case is that I organised illegal raves on page two of the applicant's first bundle it states I quote "The Defendant got involved in the organisation and conduct of illegal raves. These, primarily, take place on disused or industrial land in London and cause alarm and distress to the residents, these raves are licensing activity, cause significant noise pollution and, lead to destruction of property and breaches of the peace. In defence to my case the 2nd line down states the Defendant got involved in the organisation and conduct of illegal raves, I have sent you the licensing act 2003 apex 4 which states, house party's and places of residents do not need a licence, which all the incidents in the applicant's bundle are places of residence in contained fencing in private air. In the licensing act it states this includes gardens and private car parks. I linked index page 4 of the licensing act 2003 within this document, which states unless profit is being made, to which I am not being accused of, then there is no breach of the law, and there for not illegal. For members of the public to have a moving in-house party is not a breach of law and therefore not illegal. The word rave clearly states the key element, such as in the open air must be present and when in private air trespass must be present. So, what law have I broken to make the case law abiding under reasonable doubt if I am not being accused of making a profit it is not illegal to organize a private house party for any British citizen as long as you have respect for the residents living around the local area?
Thanks Simon Cordell
PS. Regarding the statement off; "These, taking place on disused or industrial land in London and cause alarm and distress to the residents." All the locations are a place of fixed a bow and residence. Regarding "These raves are licensing activity, cause significant noise pollution and, lead to destruction of property and breaches of the peace. No home is licensable, unless a breach of the 2003 licensing act got made, to which contained within the applicants bundle and there is none. I have a bundle of the laws relevant to my case that should be in my defence bundle, please will you help me go over them and I would like to trade products with my company as I have explained to you for months and keep asking you to take the case back to court to get my bail conditions defined, which you have not to date even low Andy Lock states that I am right in my points of law and how it leaves me in a state of utter confusion to what I may do or not, as the applicants case gets based on illegal raves, their banning me from what is lawful legal. We cannot think of any jobs the conditions will not have an effect on, of that of my profession's, I cannot be a delivery driver, as most companies deliver to industrial estates, I cannot deliver parcels or goods to any person living under a section 144, this is not correct in law, I am, concerned, as to the applicant's case is for an Asbo in its civil manner that it sits in at court. The case got based on illegal activities, to which I never had the right to defend my innocents in. An ASBO on conviction is when a person has committed criminal activities when I got so called, found guilty and there is such a need to apply for a court to sit in its civil capacity to obtain such an order against any person, straight or therefore after. I have a standalone Asbo which should be on the 3rd strike of a smaller criminal conviction, to which I never got arrested for; illegal raves and it being granted is a breach of my human rights, a standalone ASBO put against myself with no criminal conviction is wrong in practice of law.
Thanks Simon

Subject: Josephine Ward wants me to have a medical check
Josephine I am not will to sign any form giving you consent to my personnel records as no judge has ordered for you to do so, I would not be a free man if there was a chance of me being a danger to myself or the general public. As I am sure you would understand the Mental Health Team are trained in dealing with people in such cases under section 135, 136, 2, 3, 4 and 5 of Mental Health Act 1983 & 2007 as amended 2016. I do in fact take offence in you questioning my ability to make decisions for myself and them decisions that I make I am making being of clear judgement towards the applicants case which contains false facts such as me being white and contained in side a warehouse surrounded by police, marked in the cads.
You know this not to be true for as long as two years.
For two years I have asked you and Michelle Carroll and co solicitors to write to the witness also the applicant and point out the true facts of law but most importantly make sure I have a fair trial.
Any person can get a calculator and see that the time stamps are in error as I have been emailing you and stating.
All I ask from you, is to have my best interest at heart and you refuse to see me for months now try to force me to see doctors when you have no legal obligation too.
I have a hard copy bundle of all the emails that have been sent to you from the start of this case and a list of the questions and guidance that I have been given I have taken the time to work out how many times and the dates, myself and my mother have had to asked you to deal with the same question(s) I am still asking to date 29/02/2016. to answer and the points of law that make my case illegal that I am supposed to have broken in fact how I have this standalone Asbo with no previous convictions of similar nature and it was not an Asbo on conviction granted.
I feel as if I have missed a whole interview and being charged for some think that clearly states that it is illegal in turn not having the right to defend myself.
I want the case taken back to court this week if possible as I want to start a night job driving and it involves me delivering to any possible address, can you please sort this.
Josephine, I have started to seek legal guidance as you will not give it to me, this is not right.
I will not wait till April for a pretrial hearing that will not go ahead as I cannot stand a fair trial, as I have explained I will bring a calculator to you and show you what I sent you in my drafted witness statement months ago asking you to defend me, in the fact that it would be impossible to stand a fair trial with us both knowing this.
The other day in your office you told me that I might lose my case knowing about the only evidence being that of the time stamps and the same people who created the application corrupting the time stamps then making statements about myself also that of me clearly pointing out the law and that I never done any think illegal and even you cannot explain to me how my case states it is illegal but I have not been arrested and in the understanding off section 63 inclusive of the licensing act as well as the warehouse becoming a place of residence when a section 144 is present.
As stated, I want to work can you bring this back to court please.
If you want, I will bring you the copy of the section 135 and that it has been signed now as void and you can see that I am still here.
If any think needs covering, it is what has not been done in this case already to date.

Dear Josey
What you are saying in your emails is that the judge says in his letter that I have got to have an assessment, but this is not the case as part 3 of his letter states
If the Appellant wishes to rely on any medical evidence as to his mental health, then any report dealing with such matters must be before the court on the 4th April 2016”

Which clearly states; “if I wish to rely on any mental health evidence then a report has to be submitted by the 04/04/2016,” but this does not say I must rely on this, and I do not wish to rely on this.
Can you please take my case back to court so that my conditions can be defined, and also have a meeting once you get the letters you are waiting on from Superintendent Adrian Coombs so we can deal with the appeal.
Can you also please send me the notes from court from the public defender that was there for me please as I have not had these as of yet.

This statement consisting of 7 page(s) each signed by me, is true to the best of my knowledge and belief and I make it knowing that, if it is tendered in evidence, I shall be liable to prosecution if I have wilfully stated in it anything which I know to be false or do not believe to be true.

Signed Signature Witnessed by

This is an updated statement further to the statement of Mr Simon Cordell Dated 24th day of February.
In reference to the 12th Jan 2013 Canary Wharf
• This date in question has been add to the applicants bundle as a reference as to the Limitation Act 1980. Which states a case must be applied six months prior from the date of the incident. Please take note to Mr Simon Cordell's last statement dated the 24/02/2015; he was in fact taken to The Royal London Hospital.
In reference to the 07th April 2013, Blakey's House
07/04/2013 = In Steve Elsmore Statement dated 11/08/2014
In regard to 07/04/2013 = Please read Mr Simon Cordell's last statement dated the 24/02/2015. He states that he did not attended any premises on this date to rave, Mr Cordell did not involve himself in the organization of any illegal rave this was his friends housing estate and was on a Sunday, nor did he supply equipment on said date.
Mr Simon Cordell will State; "that he was not rude to police, but he did feel like he could not even go out for the day with some of his friends, without getting stopped and searched by members of the police.
It is also noted that the caller was very clear that they saw a flat screen TV being put into Mr Cordell's van, which is confusing to why when the police searched the van they found no TV, but did in fact find two of his off road motor bikes, which is not included in Steve Elsmore statement. The police did checks on Mr Simon Cordell's
Off Road Motor Bikes but this is also not stated, but should show's up on the seizer notice, as Mr Simon Cordell did ask the police office to take careful note of the two off road motor bikes, as due to the high value of them.
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that he did get a bit upset when the police said they were going to seize his van, as he did have insurance in place to be able to drive the van in question, but there was an error on the MID database. Miss Cordell had been trying to help her son resolve the issue concerning his insurance policy not showing on the mid data base alongside with members of their local police force and his insurance company KGM too, together they had tried to work out why Mr Simon Cordell was showing as uninsured. There was information noted as intelligence on the police National Computer stating this I had asked the police to check on their systems due to this, but they would not they just wanted to seize Mr Simon Cordell's van without checking, so he knew he was being wrongfully accused at this point, as he had done nothing wrong and he did have insurance to be driving and had paid a lot of money for his insurance. He states he did not get upset in the manner that the police have said he did and that he does not mean to come across as rude to police. In this case he was just trying to explain the error on the system.

STATEMENT OF WITNESS new new.doc

In addition, the prosecution offered no evidence in respect of the charges that were brought even though they were reliant on police witnesses. Mr Simon Cordell had been wrongfully arrested for not having insurance when he was insured to drive. He also did not cause any Anti-Social Behaviour on this date in question.
There are no CAD's for this date, but yet they was meant to be, a CAD referring to the pacific details that should be relating to a person stating, that they believed a burglary was in progress and of the 999 caller stating that they had seen a person who was putting a flat screen TV into Mr Simon Cordell's van.
In reference to 24th May 2013 police station
Please take note to the picture above and that of the building on the far right being the old police station, you cannot see the front vehicle entrance as it is in the far right of the picture and is the only entrance.
The alley way in the middle is where I drove my car down and stopped there is no rear entrance to the police station from the ally as there is two other running companies in-between and to the far right is another running company.
24.05.13 = Mr Simon Cordell was looking for venues to set up an illegal rave
On the 24.05.13 = Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that he did not attended any premises on this date to rave neither was he involved in the organization of any illegal raves, nor did he supply equipment. This case was only added as a reference as the limitation Act 1980 which states that a case must be applied 6 months from the date of the incident, to which it was not. Please read my last statement dated the 24/02.2015.
It is alleged that Mr Simon Cordell was looking for venues in which illegal raves could be held, on 24th May 2013. Mr Simon Cordell dispute's this. He will state that he had been contacted by a friend called Joshua, who was living at 204 High Street Ponders End EN3 4EZ, also known as the Old Police Station at Ponders End, as he and some others were homeless, so was living and residing under section 144. as Mr Simon Cordell was driving towards 204 High Street, he drove his car down the alleyway so that he could park the vehicle he was in, He parked between two well-known land marks, Which is where many people who do live in an around the surrounding areas would be able to remember as the old ponders End police station next to the Kinder Garden Centre.
Mr Cordell states he knows the area very well as this is where he has lived all of his life, so he knew about the car park at the back of the two well-known landmarks, as he states you cannot park on the high road, because of the double yellow lines or other restrictions. He had parked there before, he states he believes and knows that the police saw his car as he began to take a right turn to be able to drive down to where he intended to stop, he knew the police had followed him, as he had seen them pay attention to himself as he had driven past.
Mr Cordell does remember clearly that of himself locking his vehicle as the police approached him and now was standing by his side. He states that this is normal for him and over the years of his life he has become use to the police approaching him for numerous accusations, so that has also made him used to their presents, Mr Simon Cordell states that that this is so normal for him, so he got ready for the police procedures, as they said they wanted to search him and his car because the police believed that the car he was driving smelt strongly of cannabis, Mr Simon Cordell sates that he would always consented to this. He is sure of his statements of facts and that the police cannot dispute this, that of the police officers that had approached him and who had stopped him as he had just got out of my car, or how would they have said his car smelt strongly of cannabis, which is the reason that the police officers gave him the conditions of search and their consent form due to a search of himself and that of his vehicle that he was driving.
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that he had not done anything wrong and nothing was found on his person or in his car."
Mr Simon Cordell will dispute making any comments about being able to attract people to illegal raves and illegal 3-day events, what reason would he have had to say this. Mr Simon Cordell will state to the applicant that he was a visitor to the location of interest, due to a call from a friend who asked if Mr Simon Cordell could loan him some money for food. He will also include that he did not cause any Anti-Social Behaviour on the 24th May 2013.
Mr Simon Cordell does not know what Joshua said to the police, as he was never with Joshua. Mr Simon Cordell does not know why Joshua would have said to the police that he was his lawyer, or if Joshua said this at all to police. Mr Simon Cordell has tried to get hold of Joshua to make a statement for this case, but due to him being homeless, it has been very hard. As far as he is aware the building was being occupied by people to live in, he states he does not know anything Joshua said to police about know any think about a rave. Mr Simon Cordell did not manage to visit him on this day.
At no point is Mr Simon Cordell being accused of acting in an anti-social manner on this date, or by any members of the public inclusive of members of the police, neither was he arrested.

In Reference to the 6th 7th 8th JUNE 2014; Progress Way in relation to the Applicants first bundle.

In relation to the 06/07/8th June 2014 Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was not involved in the organization of and / or supplied equipment for and / or attended an illegal rave at an empty warehouse on Progress way Enfield.

In the applicants bundle there are 93 incident numbers relating to the 6th 7th 8th June 2014 that Mr Simon Cordell is being accused of and only 34 complete cad files in the bundle, to which Mr Simon Cordell would like to apply to the applicant to receive related missing documentation to 59 cads.

A list of Cad; incident numbers including the supported relevant missing articles that should be contained within the applicants bundle has been listed and is required so that Mr Simon Cordell will be able to deafened himself from all accusation creating the bases of an ASBO application.

Around 2:00am on the 8th Mr Simon Cordell states he was just arriving at progress way and was said to have been seen by police.

On page 32 A/Insp Hamill 01566 states at 0200hrs on Sunday 8th June that he did in fact see Mr Simon Cordell for the first time, on the 3rd line from the last sentence.

CAD 1047 Name PC239YE Shinnick (pages 174 to 178) at 1:59 on 7th June 2014, was a 999 call location, which was a police officer calling the Enfield Patrol Site, Call name is of a PC Shinnick, "please allow an officer to call on duty."

A/ PS Charles Miles 724ye (page 31} explains that this date was on the 7thth June 2014 in his statement by is mistaken, this can be confirmed by any person who can do so by looking at cad 1047, to which A/Inspector Hamill 201566 states he had created cad 1047 at the first point of police intelligence leading to the police offices first point of contact in regards to progress way, as he dispatched officers to the location of the incident, from this information provided we can tell that this was in fact the 8th June 2014 at 1:59.

A/Insp Hamill then states, that the officers that he had sent, had reported back that Mr Simon Cordell and Tyrone Benjamin were present, and goes on to state that officers were not allowed access into the occupied building, due to the demand during the shift and low policing numbers, but cad incident number 1047

STATEMENT OF WITNESS new new.doc
07th June 2014 pages 174 to 184, states them officers in attendance who could not gain entry, somehow managed to see Mr Simon Cordell and his brother Tyrone Benjamin earlier in the day, to which Mr Simon Cordell will state would be incorrect as only he had arrived to visit a friend, and this was his first time at the location and for the true facts of the matter to be that of Tyrone Benjamin being in hospital.
As A/Insp Hamill 01566 states at 0200hrs on Sunday the 8th June 2014, Mr Simon Cordell did in fact arrive.
A/Insp Hamill 01566 Could not be sure of the fact of the person that he is stating was at the gate did in fact bring Mr Simon Cordell back to the gate, he does not state that she or he came back with Mr Cordell, who would have told A/ Insp Hamill that Mr Simon Cordell was in fact the person she had gone to collect and asked to assist in speaking to police as the event organiser, neither did he take any name(s) or personal details of the gate assistances. He also states that Mr Simon Cordell would not in fact speak to him, so if this was true then why would Mr Simon Cordell have approached him to speak to him as the event organiser and not speak, as for fact he was just arriving.
No police officers did in fact see Mr Simon Cordell, on the 6th 7th Jun 2014
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he did not talk to any police or council as he felt intimidated.
Mr Cordell will state that he was not given any noise abating order from the local council as confirmed on page 34 by A/Insp Hamill 01566 as he was not in fact the organiser.
(On page 33) A Insp Hamill 201566 states that he see Mr Simon Cordell, at the gates but believed that Mr Simon Cordell was coming from inside the premises, Mr Simon Cordell will state due to the large number of people at the location and due to other reasons and believes of the inspectors own that he is mistaken, Mr Simon Cordell states that he remembers clearly, that of the police approaching him, as he was walking towards the gates, when he was arriving from the Great Cambridge road, and that of the police asking him questions in regards to illegal raves. A Inspector Hamill states that he ask Mr Simon Cordell his name and that he gave him a reply, such as to the answer of "yes" verbally and then A Inspector Hamill states that he asked Mr Cordell the same question again but Mr Cordell would not reply, (chapter one of (A) Inspector Hamill statement page 33 the 5th line down;) he then states the 3rd time when Mr Simon Cordell was asked again, but this time by the council officers with inspector Hamill present his name, that he would not reply again, Mr Simon Cordell will state that he did not speak to anybody, he just listened to what was being said to him and complied when he was asked to walk back to where he had just parked his vehicle. The police officer is incorrect in saying that Mr Cordell was the person that the gate assistant went and collected, as the event organiser, as Mr Simon Cordell was in fact approaching the occupied building and was visiting his friend. He did state this in his first statement dated (24th/02/2015.)
Mr Simon Cordell will State that, as he was approaching the ally way were tops tiles is before the entrance gate for progress way as stated by A/Insp Hamill 201566 on (page 33 2nd line up from the last sentence.) Simon remembers it being dark and a lot of people being present in the ally way. Mr Simon Cordell will state that he saw, who he now knows to be A/ Insp Hamill for the first time, at around 2:00 am on the 8th June 2014 as he was arriving and had not seen a police officer on the date in question, till that point of time, when he had seen An Inspector Hamill talking too other people at the gate than himself as he was approaching, Mr Cordell will state he does remember the police trying to speak to him and that he felt that the police was accusing him of being an organiser, to which he was not, so he choose not to say any think, without a solicitor being present.
The Police and council let Mr Cordell go and he walked across the road to the petrol station, while waiting for his friend to turn up, which he had to give a set of keys back too.
Crown Road == There was no Licensable events or private parties on the 2nd apart from Crown Road that is contained within the applicant's bundle, a council freedom of information act has been provided, from local council as proof of this statement. (Exhibit)
(Cad 3151 8th June 2014 page 278) clearly states that the rave / private party was at crown road not progress way relating to cad 3151 8th June 2014 and that members of the public were using Southbury train station, to get to this location, which is across the road from Crown Road the old man building which is grid reference; X (Easting) 534960 Y (Northing) 196240

Police Officer Caller states:
Rave at location organizers Tyrone Benjamin and Simon Cordell have attended earlier there are about 200 people at the location all well natured and there is sufficient fire and safety equipment. Inspector Hamill made aware. Inspector Hamill states that he see Mr Cordell coming out of the gates page 33, to which Mr Simon Cordell will explain is a mistaken as he was just arriving on the 8th June 2014,
Please take note to 200 people there is no argument to the premises being occupied and their for no breach of section 63 for trespass as this is a place of residence, neither under the new Deregulated entertainment licensing act amended to the licensing act 2003 on the 7th January 2013 no breach of licensing acts has been breached as private homes are not regulated unless a profit has been made also under the new regulations there is no licensing between the hours of 8am till 11pm. There for the said rave not being illegal as the applicant states as their was no health and safety risks , not that Mr Cordell was involved with the organisation of any event.

General

Q: Why are you deregulating?
A: Deregulation will make it easier for schools, community groups and a huge array of civil society organisations and charities to put on cultural and sporting events.
The measures should also help businesses diversify their offer and access new markets.

Q: What are the proposals?
A: Currently a wide range of entertainment activities - such as plays and dance events - require a licence to take place in front of an audience.
These changes will mostly end that situation. In short, most plays, dance shows and indoor sport will no longer need a licence, and it will be easier to host music events in community premises.
Details are in the tables below:

Schedule 1 Category	Position
Plays	• Deregulated between 0800-2300 for audiences up to 500 ➢ Implemented 27 June 2013: http://www.legislation.gov.uk/uksi/2013/1578/introduction/made
Dance	• Deregulated between 0800-2300 for audiences up to 500 ➢ Implemented 27 June 2013: http://www.legislation.gov.uk/uksi/2013/1578/introduction/made
Indoor Sport	• Deregulated between 0800-2300 for audiences up to 1000 ➢ Implemented 27 June 2013: http://www.legislation.gov.uk/uksi/2013/1578/introduction/made
*Live Music 	• Licensing suspended for amplified live music between 0800-2300 in on-licensed premises and deregulated in workplaces for audiences up to 500 (raised from 200 in Live Music Act 2012)

A/PS Charles Miles 724YE states; "At 0203Hrs approximately I attended a disused warehouse at Progress Way EN1, where an illegal rave was being held. I attended with Inspector Hamill VEIN and representatives from the Environmental Health Office at Enfield Council, approaching the gates and asking to 'speak with the organizer."

STATEMENT OF WITNESS new new.doc

A/PS Charles Miles 724YE states; "There I spoke with a man who I recognized as Simon Cordell, from previous illegal rave events on Enfield Borough. I would describe him as a light skinned black male, and at the time he was wearing a white long-sleeved T shirt and Grey bottoms, he is approximately f5;09 tall and of medium build. He refused to provide his details to the council representatives in order that a noise abatement order could be served, however he was provided with a copy. Approximately 10 minutes later we left the scene having risk assessed the incident."

"Mr Simon Cordell will state; that he was attending an occupied building that was being lived in under section 144 LASPO on the 8th at around 200 hours on the 8th June 2014 as a visitor and not on the 7th June 2014.

His intentions were to drop keys to a friend which had been left at his flat.

When Mr Cordell approached progress way a man, he now knows to be a police officer from the statements provided, approached him while he was walking down a foot path leading to the occupied building. Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was accused of being an organizer to which he gave no reply and decided at this point to cross the road and call his friend to come out side to give him his keys back, to which he had, came to visit.

Mr Simon Cordell will state; that he then left and headed home and at no point did he except any paper work of any person(s) nor did he give his name or personal details to anybody for his personal details to be on any official headed piece of paper, to which in the statement he is being accused of being presented to him.

It is also noted that in A/Insp Hamill 201566 statement that he did not note that a copy of the paperwork had not been handed to anyone.

Which Mr Simon Cordell will state that he is sure he would have noted in his statement. As from his statement he was the main person dealing with this matter.

Mr Simon Cordell will state; that he would like to ask for any noise abatement order made on the 6th 7th 8th June 2014."

It is also noted that police statement was written on the 02/08/2014, 26 days after therefore Mr Simon Cordell is asking for a copy of the 101 books.

A/PS Charles Miles 724YE states; " that he returned to the venue approximately two hours later, he again asked to speak with the organiser however none came forward, he asked the two men on the door, who appeared to be party goers to let him in to have a look around. He walked around and there was extremely loud drum and bass music playing, with approximately 100 people dancing. Party goers observed him in Police uniform and ran away into the large open area, presumably because of drug misuse matters - there was significant evidence to suggest illegal drugs were being used such as discarded self-seal bags, and empty canisters consistent with 'laughing gas' use."

A/Insp Hamill 201566 states; "As officers where not permitted access into the venue it is unknown to the extent of drug and alcohol abuse which may or may not have taken place within."

A/PS CHARLES MILES 724YE states; "At approximately 06:30Hrs we received a call to nearby Wood grange Gardens, to reports of a male assaulted. Following an initial investigation this individual matched the description of a male earlier observed on the warehouse roof. It appeared that he had fallen off of the roof and into some bushes and his injuries were consistent with a fall from height. He was heavily under the influence of alcohol and quite probably illegal drugs. He went to North Middlesex Hospital with the London Ambulance Service."

A/Insp Hamill 201566 states; "At 05:04hrs CAD 2290 8th June police were called to a male assaulted in the street. Officers and LAS have attended the location of Wood Grange Avenue, where the male had injuries of suspected broken wrists and a bloody mouth, he initially stated that he had been attacked from behind but on investigation it transpired that this male had been one of the people seen on the roof earlier and had fallen whilst getting down."

"Mr Simon Cordell will state; That it was only ever noted by PS 92YE that 1 male was seen on the roof, but if the call came 05:04hrs CAD 2290 how is it his statement it says a call came in at 06:30Hrs this is 1 hour and 26 mins after the first call was made and A/Insp Hamill 201566 had sent officers to the location.

Mr Simon Cordell will state; That he did notice when approaching the building a Section 144 Laspo notice was in place, in turn meaning occupiers were occupying the free hold of the land sleeping in the commercial building and treating it as their home. Mr Simon Cordell will state Nobody could have spoken to him or his brother Tyrone Benjamin, or see Tyrone as his brother Tyrone Benjamin was involved in an ATR involving, a vehicle LRO9BMV he was knocked of his moped on the 10th April 2014 the injuries his brother occurred has changed his life for ever. On the 07/06/2014 Mr Simon Cordell's brother Tyrone Benjamin could not walk; he was Air lifted to The Royal London Hospital. Mr Simon Cordell will disagree strongly that his brother was at this event dated 06th 07th 08th June 2014 or in any case that is in question presented within this ASBO application, nor did he attend. Mr Simon Cordell will state that he arrived at progress way about 01:45am on the 8th but on his own and on arrival police spoke to him outside the front gates and he then left and went home.

Mr Simon Cordell will state; That allegations of misleading information is being held under his and his brothers name on the police national Computer, and he has been trying to get this rectified, He has provided his brothers medical notes as proof of this as well as stated many other facts and provided a copy of the Police National Computer and the errors that have tarnished his life agreed by the courts.

He would also like to make it noted that the police already have on their system the people they were prettying while he was on curfew for some of the cases within this ASBO application and that the police had contacted other people leading up to dates of the incident numbers but not Mr Simon Cordell in relation to illegal raves. The public order team has confirmed on the phone to his mother and Essex police have too.

It has taken months to gather this information relating to the dates within this ASBO application so that Mr Simon Cordell can clear his name.

A/Insp Hamill 201566 On Friday 6th June 2014 states; when on duty in full uniform working as the Duty Officer for the Borough of Enfield, was working between the hours of 2200hrs to 0700hrs.
A/Insp Hamill 201566 states; "During the early hours of the 7th June I was made aware of a potential Rave that was in progress in a discussed Industrial Building on Progress Way."
A/Insp Hamill 201566 states; "I have had a CAD created reference 1047I 7June dispatched officers to the location to access numbers, crowd dynamics and gather information around times the event is likely to run until and also to make contact or identify the potential organiser.
Officers have reported back that Tyrone Benjamin and Simon Cordell where at location and to be the believed the event organisers, there were approximately 200 people in attendance, the event was covered by security officers who had stated that they were volunteers and not licensed through SIA. Officers have spoken with staff to confirm that all fire escapes where clear, that there were sufficient fire extinguishers in place and that there were first aid kits available."
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that this incorrect and not to be true as his brother had medical injuries stopping him from being mobile or transported. Evidence will be supplied.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was not in attendance to attend any rave in fact he was dropping keys to a friend as they had been left at his address when he was there last."
A/Insp Hamill 201566 states; "Police Officers have reported back:
Mr Simon Cordell will state; The police sent by inspector Hamill reported back to him and said they had spoken to Security officers at the gate of progress way, who stated that they were volunteers not security as believed by police offices. "Who made this statement?"
If they were believed by police officers to be security, but had said they were volunteers, what makes the police sure beyond reasonable doubt that the people in question presented to be security acting as volunteers could have in fact off been the organisers. As Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was not the organiser neither did he hire any sound equipment, nor did he take part in any form of organization on the 6th 7th 8th June 2014 or act in an Anti-Social Manner. In the new skeleton argument, the inspector clearly states that he now trusts the security guards when officers state that they believed they were security but said they were volunteers and looked like party goers.
A/Insp Hamill 201566 states; "Police Officers have reported back: Staff was forthcoming with information but refused to allow offices inside the venue."
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "As stated they never believed the information provide by said staff at the gates of progress way to be true, as it was believed the security was to be presenting them self's as volunteers, so why would any information provided to officers can be classed and stated as forthcoming be classed as to be true, if not believed to be true by the person writing the statement in the beginning, as said by police officers, the people at the gate also refused to allow police officers inside the venue."
A/Insp Hamill 201566 states; "Due to call demand during the shift and low policing numbers it was inappropriate to enter the premises to seize the equipment and close the event, but he deployed officers to conduct regular visits to the venue, where number at their peak where 500 but reported to be quiet and peaceful."
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that he was not involved in any event or Anti-Social Behaviour on the 6th 7th 8th June2014, he only went to drop some keys off to a friend that he had a call from due to him leaving his keys at his address the last time he was there and his friend needed them back."
A/Insp Hamill 201566 states; "Local authority noise team were contacted reference T548832. The event was expected to run until 0700hrs on Saturday 7th June, with plans for the event to continue again later in the evening on the 7th June. During the course of the shift we received a total of calls from local residence complaining about the noise of the rave."
A/Insp Hamill 201566 states; "On Saturday 7th June 2014 I was again on duty in full uniform working as the Borough's Duty Officer for the hours of 2200hrs to 0700hrs, as with the previous evening I was made aware again of a Rave at an empty warehouse of Progress Way. As with the previous evening, I have posted officers to make regular visits to the venue to access numbers, crowd dynamics and general intelligence around the event.

During the course of the number numbers at the event were around 300.
At 02:00hrs I have attended the venue with A/PS Miles and two environmental officers.
The entrance to the venue was located off progress way, down the side off "Tops Tiles". The warehouse was at the bottom of this side road behind a metal gate, the gate padlock had been removed and security officers were opening the gate to allow access. As Insp Hamill and A/PS Miles and the EO have approached the gate they have closed the gate preventing us access."
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that for Inspector Hamill: To be able to state the gate padlock had been removed." By this statement made Inspector Hamill was this close to pay this much attention to such an object as a pad lock on the gate, he then states a security officer was opening the gate to allow access. Followed by them have closed the gate, with so many people walking in and out of such numbers of 300 people in attendance Mr Simon Cordell will state that he believes the inspector see Mr Simon Cordell and took his own believes.
A/Insp Hamill 201566 states; "I have introduced myself and asked to speak with the event organisers, to which a member of staff has disappeared into the venue and returned with a male who I would describe as light skinned black male, Approximate age of 35, wearing a white long sleeved t-shirt, grey bottoms. I recognized this male as Simon Cordell.
"Inspector Hamill states; that he then introduced himself and asked if we could speak at the bottom of the' road where the noise levels would allow us to talk. We all moved to the bottom of Progress Way where I have introduced myself and explained the purpose of the visit and asked

"It's Simon isn't it?" to which he has replied "Yes" I have then further asked "Simon Cordell" to which he has indicted that it was but not verbally confirmed the answer. I have introduced the two EO's the Simon who have explained the purpose of their visit and the fact that they were going to severe a noise abatement order, they have produced the paperwork and asked the male for his name to which he has refused to provide his details, It was explained that without the name of a person from the venue the EO's are unable to serve the paperwork. As we have been unable to progress this line of action, I have made the request to Simon Cordell to turn the music down."
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that Inspector Hamill: States he approached the gate and spoke to security, but the police are not sure if they were in fact security, police state in there statements that the people on the gate introduced themselves as volunteers. The case is the police did not know who they were they could have been security/volunteers or organisers. The police only believed Tyrone Benjamin and Simon Cordell could have been the organisers, which is not the case.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that Inspector Hamill: Asked to speak to an organiser and has said that a member of said staff disappeared into the occupied building. For a male Inspector Hamill recognised to be Simon Cordell to approach him. This could not have been the case as Mr Simon Cordell will state that he was not in the building and that he was walking up to the building when he was approach by Inspector Hamill and others.
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that he does remember this day 08th June 2014 a friend who had stayed at his who had forgotten to take his set of keys with him, when he left his flat prior to the 06th and 07th 8th June 2014."
He will state that his friend had contacted him and told him that he need his keys back and wanted him to meet him at progress way were he had been residing and asked Mr Simon Cordell to drop the keys to him."
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that he was given a post code and had never been to this location before. That he travelled by car and parked outside a company that he remembers to be tops tiles, as he approached he could hear music, after finding the address given to him he had to walk down a side ally leading to the front gates to be seen by a man he now know to be Inspector Hamill from the statement provided he asked him his name to which Mr Simon Cordell will state that he gave no reply to his question. "
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that as he see the police leave the people on the gate he was already chatting to him and asked Mr Simon Cordell to follow him to the road side which he did, at no time did Mr Simon Cordell talk to any police officers or any other person(s) as he felt he had not done any think wrong and new how the police was with him and he just did not want any problems."
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that he was the police officer was with other people, who Mr Simon Cordell now know to be environmental officers due to the statements. Mr Cordell remembers feeling like he was being accused of being an organiser by the way in which the police officer was talking to him.
This is the reason he did not want to talk to the police as he knew how they was with him from over many years of being harassed by the police.
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that he just wanted to leave so he decided at this point to cross the road to the local petrol station and call his friend to come outside to give him his keys back.
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that at no time did he speak to police and give any details and did not take any paper work from anyone, the police did not follow him across the road to the petrol station where he called his friend to come and get his keys.

Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that he did notice sound coming from said occupied building and at this point in time he would like everyone to make a note that he did not hire any sound equipment or any other form of equipment or neither was he involved in the organisation of any events on dates of the 6th 7th or the 8th June 2014.
He then gave his friend their keys and headed home, at no point did Mr Simon Cordell except any paper work of any person nor did he give his name or personal details to any other body, for his personal details to be on any official piece of paper.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he would like to ask for said paperwork Noise abatement order."
A/Insp Hamill 201566 states; "Inspector Hamill: Asked "It's Simon isn't it?" to which he replied, "yes he then further asked "Simon Cordell" to which he has indicated that it was but not verbally confirmed the answer."
Mr Cordell will state; "As stated above at no point did he speak to any police office to give his name and do not understand how he could have done so in a none verbally manner as he did not shake his head or shake the police offices hand to indicate this to be true. Police states that Mr Simon Cordell replied yes than states but would not verbally confirm the answer"
A/Insp Hamill 201566 states; "To which Mr Simon Cordell refused to provide his details."
Mr Cordell will state; "A/Insp Hamill further verifies that he did not in fact speak to himself."
A/Insp Hamill 201566 states; "It was explained that without the name of a person from the venue the EO's are unable to serve the paperwork, as we have been unable to progress this line of action."
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "The police state they see him on the 7th June 2014 walking up to the front gates in pc Shinick statements time stamped 01:59 7th June 14 and no he was in attendance with Inspector Hamill at 02:00 hours on the 8Th June 2014in true fact and that he had walked back to where his car was parked on the Great Cambridge Road Enfield, Mr Cordell believes that if he had walked into the building it would have been in there notes, so there for see him leave after not gaining entry to a friend's place of residence. The police also understand that this party had been going on since the 6th June 2014.
Mr Simon Cordell will state; that he did not speak to any one as said in their statement and that he did not accept any noise abatement order section 80 as he was not an organiser neither an occupier nor did he accept any money from any event on the 6th 7th 8th June 2014.
A/Insp Hamill 201566 states; "I have made the request to Simon Cordell to turn the music down."
"I had left the grounds and waited in the petrol station for my friend to come out of progress way to me next to the petrol station and get his keys, then left and went home."
A/Insp Hamill 201566 states; "During the course of the 8th of June 2014 we had approximately 40 calls complaining about the noise."

STATEMENT OF WITNESS new new.doc
Mr Simon Cordell will state: "That he did only attended progress way on the 08th for about 30 mins max and left to go home.
A/Insp Hamill 201566 states; "During the course of the shift police had contact with several groups that had been attending at the Rave all of which were extremely intoxicated and their behaviour had clearly been using drugs which they all confirm they had used but on police contact did not have any drugs on them."
Mr Simon Cordell will state; ""At no point did he travel with any of the said people in relation to the police statements, nor did he invite them to any place to rave or attended to supply any equipment or source of entertainment for them or any drinks or drugs."
A/Insp Hamill 201566 states; as officers were not permitted access into the venue it is unknown the extent of drugs and alcohol abuse which may or may not have taken place within."
Mr Simon Cordell would like it noted that A/Insp Hamill states; "You say that no officers were allowed in the building yet police officer A/PS Charles Miles 724YE says people allowed him to enter but you have not been told nothing about this, in your reports from the police officers."
A/Insp Hamill 201566 states; A call from CAD 2410 of the 8th June received at 05:35hrs stated that drugs were openly being sold."
"Mr Cordell will state that he was not at the occupied building at this point of time, neither does he sell drugs or advise or in courage any other person to do so"
A/Insp Hamill 201566 states; "At 03:10hrs on the 8th June PS 92YE noticed a male from the roof of the adjourning building to the venue. The venue backs onto that of the police parade site which did mean as officers entre and left the premises they had a full and unobstructed view of the rear of the rave premises, officers have attended the venue, however the male had already come down of the roof. Staff where given advice as to ensuring that people do not get onto the roof again."
"I had no involvement in organising this said event on the 6th 7th 8th June 2014 and do not feel I should be held responsible and was not attending to rave at a private house party."
Mr Simon Cordell would like it noted that; "As noted the police arrived at 03:10hrs to deal with the matter of a person on a nearby roof of the occupied building located in progress way, however the male had already come down from the roof.

Police state: "Staff occupying another building was notified.
"At no point would Mr Cordell have been notified as he was not the organiser on the 8th June 2014."
A/Insp Hamill 201566 states; "At 05:04hrs CAD 2290 8th June 2014 police were called to a male assaulted in the street. Officers and LAS have attended the location of wood Grange Avenue were the male had injuries of suspected broken wrist and a bloody mouth, he initially stated that he had been attacked from behind but on investigation it transpired that this male had been one of the people seen on the roof earlier and had fallen whilst getting down."
"If checked there is a time laps in the statements made by police PS 92YE it states that he attended at 03:10hrs and noted the boy had come down from a roof in Wood Grange Avenue the rear of Progress Way and then Police spoke to staff at progress way.
But CAD number 2290 8th June at 05:04 states the same boy is in wood Grange Avenue again and made a 999 call making a claim of assault 01:54 mins after and is believed to be the man fallen of the roof at 03:10 who was seen getting down safely and police state that they can see the roof top clearly from there police service centre.
It is also noted A/PS CHARLES MILES 724YE "statement at approximately 06:30Hrs we received a call to nearby Wood grange Gardens, to reports of a male assaulted. Following an initial investigation this individual matched the description of a male earlier observed on the warehouse roof. It appeared that he had fallen off of the roof and into some bushes and his injuries were consistent with a fall from height. He was heavily under the influence of alcohol and quite probably illegal drugs. He went to North Middlesex Hospital with the London Ambulance Service."
These times do not match up as in A/Insp Hamill 201566 statement he says he sent someone to the attack at 05:04 CAD 2290 and in A/PS CHARLES MILES 724YE statement he said the call did not happen until 06:30Hrs.
Was it 5 or 6 hundred hours or at 1 hundred hours and if it was at 100 hours why did police leave him to go and speak to people at the gate of progress way, if his injuries were so server he had to go to the hospital at 5 0r 6 hundred hours?
Mr Simon Cordell would state; that he believes the police already have on their systems, the person's name they were in contact with leading up to this. The public Order Unit at Scotland Yard would hold the information and also the police in Essex would have information.
Mr Simon Cordell will state; It has taken him months to gather information to the dates in this ASBO application, and he feels that the police already hold the information that he is being accused off.

He will state that he did in fact shake the police officers' hands as he left after being pulled over on the 24th 07 2014."
Thursday 24th July 2014, At around 16.25 hours: Alma Road:

On travelling from his mother's house on Thursday 24th July 2014 from seeing his Nan and mother due to his Nan's illness he was going home to his flat and used Alma Road as a route to travel as he always does do so.
Mr Simon Cordell will state that he noticed an unmarked police car, as it was indicating to take a right turn the opposite way from which he was travelling.
The reason he knew this to be an unmarked police car was because he knew the police Officers who was driving from seeing him on active duty within the local area.
As he drove past it changed its indication to the way he had been heading, which was a left direction.
The unmarked police car continued to follow him in turn putting on the blue lights in their vehicle, he pulled over to the left had side of the road opposite the BMW repair centre along Alma Road, on the left hand side of the pavement leading to the back entrance of Durant's park.
A male office got out of the passenger side and approached Mr Simon Cordell driver's door, he un done his car window to a jar asking why he had been pulled over to which the police office replied he was not sure and said his college had instructed him to do so. Once the police had checked every think that they had needed to, everybody parted and shock each other's' hands and went on then, Mr Simon Cordell will state that he made his way home.
Mr Simon Cordell will state: "that he cannot understand why the police officers have said that he was driving in this manner as this would have been classed as dangers driving, and he would have been punished accordingly.
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that there is no way that someone can drive linch" from the car in front, off each other's car's bumpers; this would have been clearly in possible. If the male's car in front had been stopped or went to the police stating that, Mr Simon Cordell had being doing this action, would have be taken against Mr Simon Cordell for YR then surely the police would have taken the persons details in there 101 Book of reports.

This intelligence was past to police Intel Unit public order team, who had been in contact with the director of Every Decibel matters, prior to the information being pasted on to Aaron King, police had attended a location and had spoken to members who were intending to hold a private birthday party in open air in regards to the private birthday party, after taking advise it was then moved into private air and there was to be no breaches of the licensing act 2003 made.

Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that he is not a director to Every Decibel Matters Company, neither was he working for the company name every Decibel Matters on this date.
Officer Aaron King States: At this time, I was in company with P5 Ames 123YE and we made our way to the location. On route, I informed the control room of what was potentially occurring and accepted the offer; from some units to attend the location to assist me. On arrival in Millmarsh" Lane it was obvious that something was about to happen. There were a number, of groups of teenagers who were milling around clearly looking for something.
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that he was not one of the people in question; neither did he take part in any Anti-social behaviour, organising or should he be accountable for other people's actions.
Officer Aaron King States: After a brief search I noticed two metal gates next to the Greggs Factory which suddenly closed as we passed them. We stopped and I got out and approached the gates. Although dark, street lighting was on and I could see a male was using a chain and lock to secure the gates.
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that he was not the person locking the gate and he did not have a key as he was not an occupier of the land and that he was just a visitor. Mr Simon Cordell was sitting in his car Ma57ldy parked next to the gates as the police arrived at the place of residence.
Officer Aaron King States: "He could hear music coming from further inside."
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "There was no power source and the music was coming from a car related to the same land in another warehouse owned by the same landlord as the land connected to this incident being rented out."
Officer Aaron King States: Stood by the gate I immediately noticed a 1C3 male who I know to be Simon Cordell. I recognised Mr. Cordell as I have previously spoken to him recently at illegal raves where I have seen him setting up sound equipment and subsequently taking it away.
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that he has nether been arrested and charged for illegal raves."
Officer Aaron King States: when confronted by Police...I explained to Mr. Cordell why we were there, but he immediately denied it was a rave. Mr. Cordell stated first it was a private conference but then said it was a birthday party.
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that he was there to have a conference with a friend who lived at the premises at the same time another occupier of the land agreed to have a friend's private birthday party at the location, to no involvement of his own and no profit was intended to be made.
Officer Aaron King States: "When asked about permission to be there he stated friends were squatting on the land and they had said he could stay.
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "This is true."

STATEMENT OF WITNESS new new.doc
Officer Aaron King States; "I explained to Mr. Cordell that I needed to come onto the site to see what was going on as for all I knew he could be damaging it or stealing from it, eventually after promising I would not remove anyone squatting and only myself and Pc Ames would come in, Mr. Cordell agreed that we could come in.
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that he did get involved and speak to the police as they knew him by name and had already chosen to involve him.
Officer Aaron King States: "Near to the gate was a silver Ford Focus index MA57LDY which I knew was Mr. Cordell's, - The boot was open, and I noticed it contained three large thin industrial gas bottles. From experience I knew this was likely to contain nitrous oxide which is currently used on the rave scene as a legal high. As we passed the car Mr. Cordell quickly lowered the boot. I queried Mr. Cordell about the gas and pointed out that it was on the news earlier how Nitrous oxide was dangerous and Mr. Cordell stated that the Government would probably ban it soon like everything else."
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that he does remember talking to the police in regards too Nitrous Oxide but at no point did he cause any Anti-Social Behaviour or was he breaking the Law."

Officer Aaron King States: “Mr Cordell was polite and showed us around the site which appeared to be a large concreted area that was completely open to the air.”
Mr Simon Cordell will state; “that this location was being occupied under section 144 and also has self-contained warehouse on it, evidence supplied in case bundles this is not open to air land.”
Officer Aaron King States: “There was a large sound system to the rear which was amplified though I could not see any power source.”
Mr Simon Cordell will state; “that this proves the fact that music could not have been made by anyone spoken to by police.”
Officer Aaron King States: “There were a number of people wearing yellow hi-vis jackets who Mr. Cordell stated were first aiders and there was a pallet of water near to the sound system as well as a couple of tents closer to the gates.”
Mr Simon Cordell will states; “that a female who had just past her first aid test, who was an occupier of the land who was present, wearing a yellow hi vest jacket as it was cold and a load of yellow hi - vest jackets had been donated and he does remember everybody present talking about her doing so.”
Officer Aaron King States: I could see no obvious Toilet facilities nor shelter from what had been forecast as a stormy night. Inside the venue mostly just stood around in small groups were about 30 people, mostly teenagers.”
Mr Simon Cordell will state; “that no police officers walked into the part of the building being occupied while he was present and that he remembers running water and toilets.”
Officer Aaron King States: “Mr Cordell stated he was an entrepreneur and was awaiting licenses from the council so that he would soon be legitimate.”
Mr Simon Cordell will state; “that he was and still does intended to create a festival if this ASBO case stops darkening his name in turn stopping him from gaining a personal licence as well as permission to hold events.”
Officer Aaron King States: “When I explained all the "ingredients" for a rave were present Mr. Cordell began to try and argue his point that it was not a rave and that it was a private party. I spoke at length with Mr. Cordell explaining the legal situation and how by definition this was a rave and that ultimately there were too few people present at the time to stop police and so on this occasion I could act and close the rave.
Mr Simon Cordell will state; that at no point of time did he take part in any form of Anti-Social behaviour, nor did he organize the private birthday party or hire any equipment or was he attending a rave on the 9th June 2014 in regards to the allegations presented within the ASBO application, as he states he did attended a friends private birthday dinner party as a guest and no money was to be charge, as he did not pay himself.”
Officer Aaron King States; “Whilst on an industrial estate it was my opinion that such was the proximity to local housing and my knowledge of the volume music is played and the duration it is played for, often throughout the weekend that a rave would constitute serious disruption.”
Mr Simon Cordell will state; “that Google Earth shows the closest house to Mill Marsh Lane the premises in question, to be one mile from the closest house.” (Exhibit)
Officer Aaron King States: “Mr. Cordell was clearly not happy but did not want his equipment seized so agreed to start packing up the sound equipment.”
Mr Simon Cordell will state; “that as noted by officers and officer Aaron King Mr Cordell was present in a ford focus and with three empty welding cylinders, so he could not have been carrying any sound equipment as this would not have fitted into his vehicle. ”
Officer Aaron King States: “Whilst talking with Mr. Cordell there were small groups of teenagers arriving at the site and entering via a break in the fence, (the gates still being shut at this time). I got Ps Ames to get units to us to prevent further people trespassing on the land and to discourage people from attending the location and exited the venue to a wait.
Mr Simon Cordell will state; “that he should not be accountable for other people(s) actions that he took no part in a negative manner, he was not a trespasser and was a visitor invited to visit his friends who was living under section 144 lasbo. For people to further be trespassing someone would have had to be arrested for trespass as it was a commercial dwelling, who is this person.”

STATEMENT OF WITNESS new new.doc
Officer Aaron King States: “Mr. Simon Cordell's exited with the sound equipment. Whilst waiting I radioed for the on-call Superintendent so I could get the various Rave legislation approved so that I could seize the sound equipment and enforce a rave cordon on Millmarsh Lane to prevent people entering.”
Mr Simon Cordell will state; “that Inspector Aaron has been told this third party and he knows that he has stated the true facts in his statements of truth, and that Mr Simon Cordell was present in a car and would not have been able to carry such large sound equipment.
Officer Aaron King States: “Whilst stood by the venue a number of people began leaving, most were laughing but the odd one was blaming police for stopping the event. Suddenly there were a huge number of mainly teenagers walking towards me from the direction of Mollison Avenue. Apparently, this group had all arrived together from the nearby railway station. Straight away some of this group headed straight towards us saying they were going to storm the place. I had been joined by a few team officers and we advised them that the rave had been closed down and they would not be allowed to enter.

There was some verbal confrontation but the large group which was up to 100 strong moved off round the comer with some overheard saying they would break in round the comer.
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that at no point did he take part in anyone else's Anti-Social Behaviour and he did not cause Anti-social Behaviour.
Officer Aaron King States: "As they began to move off Mr. Cordell stood by the break in the fence and shouted words to the effect of, "Come on, there is more of you". And he quickly went up to Mr Cordell and told him to stop or he would arrest him to prevent a breach of the peace. At this Mr Cordell went back and stayed away.
Mr Simon Cordell will state; "that at no point of time would he say this, and he would never in danger another person's life in such a manner. Mr Simon Cordell will state that he would never encourage activities that would lead to incitement of a riot, and as there was more than 12 people present he know if this statement was true he would have been arrested under offences contrary to section's 5, 4A, 4, of the Criminal Justice Act 1967 and or section 91."
Officer Aaron King States: "The large group did indeed try to get into adjoining premises that they thought led to the rave venue but were stopped by officers and moved off back into Millmarsh lane, although one officer Pc Wale was injured during a struggle. T requested the attendance of as many units as possible including dogs and TSG as the group were becoming more hostile towards officers despite there being no music now and being informed of the closure. A short while later officers I had positioned at the junction radioed that there was now an even bigger crowd advancing on them. I arrived at the junction to see a very large number of people, now up to 200 walking with purpose towards officers stood in the road. Suddenly objects began to get thrown from the crowd towards police. I saw traffic cones; cone lights, bottles and stones begin to land near Officers so that they had to quickly move out of the way. I again heard phrases similar to "storm them". Fearing imminent violence, I drew and extended my baton as did my colleagues. I could hear shouts of "get back" but the crowd continued to throw items, some of which were landing on cars that had been temporarily stopped due to the group. We had been joined by two dog units who took the lead in dispersing the crowd. At this point there were two arrests to my left and along with the dogs this seemed to make the crowd withdraw. I told my officers and the dogs not to follow the crowd as they were now by the train station with nowhere to go as the barriers were down. There was a tense standoff for some time, but the group eventually got onto trains and left the area."
